TEST PLUG

Both tile and receptor base drains include a test plug, designed to be easily removed with pliers, in a single motion, after all testing has been completed. No fragments or sharp edges are left in the drain for pipe that might lead to a blockage or reduced flow.

TIGHTENING BAR

Receptor base drains include a tightening bar to allow the installer to tighten the drain from the top side, after the drain and shower base have been set.

LONG BARREL

AB&A offers a long barrel as an accessory for tile showers requiring more slope or to compensate for installation errors.

MOUNTING HOLES

The tile shower drain includes four mounting holes around the outer edge that can be used to stabilize the drain against a wooden sub-floor.

AB&A is proud to offer a fully redesigned, versatile family of receptor base and tile shower drains that gives the installers seemingly infinite options.

EASY INSTALLATION & TEST

STEP 1

Cut pipe square with tube cutter or miter saw. Remove burrs or flash from cut pipe edge.

STEP 2

Test plug pull tab should be facing up when installed into base of drain. Use proper cement and solvent welding technique and fully seat drain onto pipe.

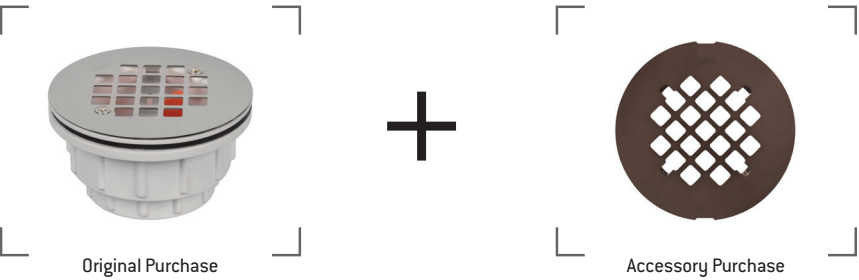

STEP 3

After test, remove test plug with pliers from top of drain.

INSTALLATION SCENARIOS

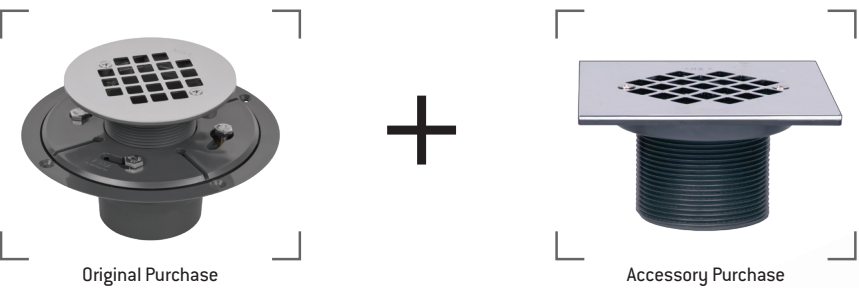

Scenario 1: Special finish snap-in strainer

Installer purchases a receptor base drain with chrome screw in strainer. Later, at the finish stage of the project, it is determined that the strainer should match the special finish shower head and controls – and the homeowner prefers snap-in strainers for ease of cleaning and removing hair. No problem – the distributor can provide a snap-in strainer in the applicable special finish.

Scenario 2: Square tile strainer

Installer purchases a tile shower drain with round chrome screw in strainer. Later in the project, the builder requests an upgraded square strainer that is "thicker" because the plans call for a square shower head and rectangular tile in the shower. No problem – the distributor can provide a square drain barrel and a thick cast brass strainer in six different finishes. (Sometimes the tile installer will request square drains because it is easier to trim tile sections around a square drain than around a round drain.)
