Sensitivities

There are many reasons why a sensitivity exists in the body. Most often it is a misappropriation of the nervous system's association to an earlier stress event. Often the reaction is linked to a food. All foods have a biochemical makeup that is divinely created to create its flavor or aroma. These biochemicals are known as phenols and a person can become sensitive to these phenols but also their environment, their pets and aromas just to name a few. New Human has the botanical support your clients need to regulate their sensitivities.
