Dear Ghosts

By CLARENCE EDWIN FLYNN

Dear ghosts I have that haunt my way,
And yet I feel no fear;
I count them friends, and hold the day
Brighter that they are near.

There are the ghosts of happy hours
That long ago have fled,
Yet come like resurrected flowers
To say they are not dead.

There are the ghosts of hopes I prized,
And thought them done and o'er,
Returning, though unrealized,
As lovely as of yore.

There are the ghosts of journeys done
Long, long ago, but yet,
Despite the distance I have gone,
I can not quite forget.
