FOR CLYTIE

By BINNY KORAS

There's a night somewhere
With moon of beryl hue,
Red stars, xanthic stars, jet stars, too,
In a bowl of livid blue—
A night that we could revel in
As puppy foxes do.

Low, weird whisperings,
An odor dank and cool,
Velvet moths with pansy wings,
A tarnished copper pool—
Where all the shades go reveling,
The ghost of every fool.
