

THE GOLDEN BOOK* MAGAZINE

VOL. IX

CONTENTS for FEBRUARY, 1929

No. 50

	PAGE
Cover Design . . . . .	BORIS ARTZYBASHEFF
Who's Who in the Golden Book . . . . .	4
Authors and Books . . . . .	16
The Walkers . . . . .	H. M. BATEMAN . . . . . 31
To the Fountain of Youth . . . . .	LAFCADIO HEARN . . . . . 32
Drawing by C. B. Falls
One of My Oldest Friends . . . . .	F. SCOTT FITZGERALD . . . . . 33
The Listeners. A Poem . . . . .	WALTER DE LA MARE . . . . . 39
Drought . . . . .	DHAN GOPAL MUKERJI . . . . . 40
Decorations by Boris Artzybasheff
The Clasp of Rank . . . . .	S. CARLETON . . . . . 46
The Simple Story of G. Washington . . . . .	ROBERT J. BURDETTE . . . . . 53
Chinese Proverbs . . . . .	. . . . . 54
So They Say . . . . .	. . . . . 55
The Discourager of Hesitancy . . . . .	FRANK R. STOCKTON . . . . . 57
Decorations by Edmund L. Thaxter
Abraham Lincoln—1809-1865 . . . . .	. . . . . 60
The Vertical City . . . . .	FANNIE HURST . . . . . 66
Bernard Shaw on Women and Children . . . . .	ARCHIBALD HENDERSON . . . . . 75
A Terribly Strange Bed . . . . .	WILKIE COLLINS . . . . . 78
Decorations by Edmund L. Thaxter
Ethics in a Business Suit . . . . .	. . . . . 85
Ile. A Play . . . . .	EUGENE O'NEILL . . . . . 87
A Musical Instrument. A Poem . . . . .	ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING . . . . . 93
Hors-d'œuvres from the Newest Books . . . . .	. . . . . 94
Three Dreams in a Desert . . . . .	OLIVE SCHREINER . . . . . 96
Remembered from the Play . . . . .	. . . . . 99
The Tenth Muse: Advertiser . . . . .	. . . . . 101
In the Time of the Terror . . . . .	HONORÉ DE BALZAC . . . . . 102
Courage. A Poem . . . . .	SA'DI . . . . . 108
Mrs. Packetide's Tiger . . . . .	"SAKI" . . . . . 109
The Garden of Love. A Poem . . . . .	WILLIAM BLAKE . . . . . 110
The Queen's Necklace. Part XIII . . . . .	ALEXANDER DUMAS . . . . . 111
Investment Trends . . . . .	KENNETH S. VAN STRUM . . . . . 138
Music and Radio . . . . .	ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN . . . . . 142

Published Monthly by THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS CORPORATION

DR. ALBERT SHAW, President

ALBERT SHAW, JR., Secretary and Treasurer

Editorial and Advertising Offices, 55 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

TERMS:—Monthly, 25 cents; $3.00 a year, two years $5.00, in the United States and Canada. Elsewhere, $4.00 a year. Entered at New York Post Office as second-class matter, December 6, 1924, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Printed in the United States of America. Subscribers may remit by post-office or express money orders, or by bank checks, drafts, or registered letters. Money in letters is sent at sender's risk. Renew early, to avoid losing numbers. Bookdealers, Postmasters, and Newsdealers receive subscriptions.

Copyright, 1929, by The Review of Reviews Corporation. Trade-mark registered in the United States, Canada and Great Britain. For further notices see Copyright Title Page, p. 6.
*Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

THE GOLDEN BOOK is indexed for ready reference in the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature.

Who's Who in the Golden Book

"I INTRODUCE YOU to 'Saki' confident that ten minutes of his conversation will have given him the freedom of your house," writes A. A. Milne in a preface to "Saki's" collected works. "Saki" (Hector Hugh Munro) had, during his lifetime, a small but enthusiastic following, which has grown steadily since his death—both in size and enthusiasm. His wit, wisdom and gaiety, the polish of his compact little stories have for many years charmed the discriminating.

Munro was born in Burmah in 1870, the son of a British army officer. He spent his youth in England, editing a newspaper for the amusement of his brother and sister. Later he traveled all over Europe, and tried military service in the East, although his health could not long withstand the climate. The result of these wanderings is a cosmopolitan flavour to his writing which adds uniquely to its charm. He adopted the name of "Saki" when he began to write political satires for the Westminster Gazette, afterwards collected in a book called Alice in Westminster. Between 1902 and 1908 he flitted between the Balkans, St. Petersburg and Paris, as correspondent of the London Post, then settled down in London as a short-story writer. At the outbreak of the war, in spite of bad health, he managed to enter the army as a private, and soon reached the front. He was killed in action in November, 1916.

Mrs. Packletide's Tiger

By H. H. MUNRO ("SAKI")

H. H. Munro

IT WAS MRS. PACKLETIDE'S pleasure and intention that she should shoot a tiger. Not that the lust to kill had suddenly descended upon her, or that she felt that she would leave India safer and more wholesome than she had found it, with one fraction less of wild beasts per million of inhabitants. The compelling motive for her sudden deviation towards the footsteps of Nimrod was the fact that Loona Bimberton had recently been carried eleven miles in an aeroplane by an Algerian aviator, and talked of nothing else; only a personally procured tiger-skin and a heavy harvest of press photographs could successfully counter that sort of thing. Mrs. Packletide had already arranged in her mind the lunch she would give at her house in Curzon Street, ostensibly in Loona Bimberton's honour, with a tiger-skin rug occupying most of the foreground and all of the conversation. She had also already designed in her mind the tiger-claw brooch that she was going to give Loona Bimberton on her next birthday. In a world that is supposed to be chiefly swayed by hunger and by love, Mrs. Packletide was an exception; her movements and motives were largely governed by dislike of Loona Bimberton.

Circumstances proved propitious. Mrs. Packletide had offered a thousand rupees for the opportunity of shooting a tiger without over-much risk or exertion, and it so happened that a neighbouring village could boast of being the favoured rendezvous of an animal of respectable antecedents, which had been driven by the increasing infirmities of age to abandon game-and confine its appetite to the smaller domestic animals. The prospect of earning the thousand rupees had stimulated the sporting and commercial instinct of the villagers; children were posted night and day on the outskirts of the local jungle to head the tiger back in the unlikely event of his attempting to roam away to fresh hunting-grounds, and the cheaper kinds of goats were left about with elaborate carelessness to keep him satisfied with his present quarters. The one great anxiety was lest he should die of old age before the date appointed for the memsahib's shoot. Mothers carrying their babies home through the jungle after the day's work in the fields hushed their singing lest they might curtail the restful sleep of the venerable herd-robber.

THE GREAT NIGHT duly arrived, moonlit and cloudless. A platform had been constructed in a comfortable and conveniently placed tree, and thereon crouched Mrs. Packletide and her paid companion, Miss Mebbin. A goat, gifted with a particularly persistent bleat, such as even a partially deaf tiger might be reasonably expected to hear on a still night, was tethered at the correct distance. With an accurately sighted rifle and a thumb-nail pack of patience cards, the sportswoman awaited the coming of the quarry.

"I suppose we are in some danger?" said Miss Mebbin.

She was not actually nervous about the wild beast, but she had a morbid dread of performing an atom more service than she had been paid for.

"Nonsense," said Mrs. Packletide; "it's a very old tiger. It couldn't spring up here even if it wanted to."

"If it's an old tiger I think you ought to get it cheaper. A thousand rupees is a lot of money."

Louisa Mebbin adopted a protective elder-sister attitude towards money in general, irrespective of nationality or denomination. Her energetic intervention had saved many a rouble from dissipating itself in tips in some Moscow hotel, and francs and centimes clung to her instinctively under circumstances which would have driven them headlong from less sympathetic hands. Her speculations as to the market depreciation of tiger remnants were cut short by the appearance on the scene of the animal itself. As soon as it caught sight of the tethered goat it lay flat on the earth, seemingly less from a desire to take advantage of all available cover than for the purpose of snatching a short rest before commencing the grand attack.

"I believe it's ill," said Louisa Mebbin, loudly in Hindustani, for the benefit of the village headman, who was in ambush in a neighbouring tree.

"Hush!" said Mrs. Packletide, and at that moment the tiger commenced ambling towards his victim.

"Now, now!" urged Miss Mebbin with some excitement; "if he doesn't touch the goat we needn't pay for it." (The bait was an extra.)

The rifle flashed out with a loud report, and the great tawny beast sprang to one side and then rolled over in the stillness of death. In a moment a crowd of excited natives had swarmed on to the scene, and their shouting speedily carried the glad news to the village, where a thumping of tom-toms took up the chorus of triumph. And their triumph and rejoicing found a ready echo in the heart of Mrs. Packletide; already that luncheon-party in Curzon Street seemed immeasurably nearer.

IT WAS LOUISA MEBBIN who drew attention to the fact that the goat was in death-throes from a mortal bullet-wound, while no trace of the rifle's deadly work could be found on the tiger. Evidently the wrong animal had been hit, and the beast of prey had succumbed to heart-failure, caused by the sudden report of the rifle, accelerated by senile decay. Mrs. Packletide was pardonably annoyed at the discovery; but, at any rate, she was the possessor of a dead tiger, and the villagers, anxious for their thousand rupees, gladly connived at the fiction that she had shot the beast. And Miss Mebbin was a paid companion. Therefore did Mrs. Packletide face the cameras with a light heart, and her pictured fame reached from the pages of the Texas Weekly Snapshot to the illustrated Monday supplement of the Novoe Vremya. As for Loona Bimberton, she refused to look at an illustrated paper for weeks, and her letter of thanks for the gift of a tiger-claw brooch was a model of repressed emotions. The luncheon-party she declined; there are limits beyond which repressed emotions become dangerous.

From Curzon Street the tiger-skin rug traveled down to the Manor House, and was duly inspected and admired by the county; and it seemed a fitting and appropriate thing when Mrs. Packletide went to the County Costume Ball in the character of Diana. She refused to fall in, however, with Clovis's tempting suggestion of a primeval dance party, at which everyone should wear the skins of beasts they had recently slain. "I should be in rather a Baby Bunting condition," confessed Clovis, "with a miserable rabbit-skin or two to wrap up in, but then," he added, with a rather malicious glance at Diana's proportions, "my figure is quite as good as that Russian dancing boy's."

"How amused everyone would be if they knew what really happened," said Louisa Mebbin a few days after the ball.

"What do you mean?" asked Mrs. Packletide quickly.

"How you shot the goat and frightened the tiger to death," said Miss Mebbin, with her disageeably pleasant laugh.

"No one would believe it," said Mrs. Packletide, her face changing colour as rapidly as though it were going through a book of patterns before post-time.

"Loona Bimberton would," said Miss Mebbin. Mrs. Packletide's face settled on an unbecoming shade of greenish white.

"You surely wouldn't give me away?" she asked.

"I've seen a week-end cottage near Dorking that I should rather like to buy," said Miss Mebbin with seeming irrelevance. "Six hundred and eighty, freehold. Quite a bargain, only I don't happen to have the money."

* * *

Louisa Mebbin's pretty week-end cottage, christened by her "Les Fauves," and gay in summer-time with its garden borders of tiger-lilies, is the wonder and admiration of her friends.

"It is a marvel how Louisa manages to do it," is the general verdict.

Mrs. Packletide indulges in no more big-game shooting.

"The incidental expenses are so heavy," she confides to inquiring friends.