

THE GOLDEN BOOK* MAGAZINE

VOL. IX

CONTENTS for FEBRUARY, 1929

No. 50

	PAGE
Cover Design . . . . .	BORIS ARTZYBASHEFF
Who's Who in the Golden Book . . . . .	4
Authors and Books . . . . .	16
The Walkers . . . . .	H. M. BATEMAN . . . . . 31
To the Fountain of Youth . . . . .	LAFCADIO HEARN . . . . . 32
Drawing by C. B. Falls
One of My Oldest Friends . . . . .	F. SCOTT FITZGERALD . . . . . 33
The Listeners. A Poem . . . . .	WALTER DE LA MARE . . . . . 39
Drought . . . . .	DHAN GOPAL MUKERJI . . . . . 40
Decorations by Boris Artzybasheff
The Clasp of Rank . . . . .	S. CARLETON . . . . . 46
The Simple Story of G. Washington . . . . .	ROBERT J. BURDETTE . . . . . 53
Chinese Proverbs . . . . .	. . . . . 54
So They Say . . . . .	. . . . . 55
The Discourager of Hesitancy . . . . .	FRANK R. STOCKTON . . . . . 57
Decorations by Edmund L. Thaxter
Abraham Lincoln—1809-1865 . . . . .	. . . . . 60
The Vertical City . . . . .	FANNIE HURST . . . . . 66
Bernard Shaw on Women and Children . . . . .	ARCHIBALD HENDERSON . . . . . 75
A Terribly Strange Bed . . . . .	WILKIE COLLINS . . . . . 78
Decorations by Edmund L. Thaxter
Ethics in a Business Suit . . . . .	. . . . . 85
Ile. A Play . . . . .	EUGENE O'NEILL . . . . . 87
A Musical Instrument. A Poem . . . . .	ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING . . . . . 93
Hors-d'œuvres from the Newest Books . . . . .	. . . . . 94
Three Dreams in a Desert . . . . .	OLIVE SCHREINER . . . . . 96
Remembered from the Play . . . . .	. . . . . 99
The Tenth Muse: Advertiser . . . . .	. . . . . 101
In the Time of the Terror . . . . .	HONORÉ DE BALZAC . . . . . 102
Courage. A Poem . . . . .	SA'DI . . . . . 108
Mrs. Packetide's Tiger . . . . .	"SAKI" . . . . . 109
The Garden of Love. A Poem . . . . .	WILLIAM BLAKE . . . . . 110
The Queen's Necklace. Part XIII . . . . .	ALEXANDER DUMAS . . . . . 111
Investment Trends . . . . .	KENNETH S. VAN STRUM . . . . . 138
Music and Radio . . . . .	ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN . . . . . 142

Published Monthly by THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS CORPORATION

DR. ALBERT SHAW, President

ALBERT SHAW, JR., Secretary and Treasurer

Editorial and Advertising Offices, 55 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

TERMS:—Monthly, 25 cents; $3.00 a year, two years $5.00, in the United States and Canada. Elsewhere, $4.00 a year. Entered at New York Post Office as second-class matter, December 6, 1924, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Printed in the United States of America. Subscribers may remit by post-office or express money orders, or by bank checks, drafts, or registered letters. Money in letters is sent at sender's risk. Renew early, to avoid losing numbers. Bookdealers, Postmasters, and Newsdealers receive subscriptions.

Copyright, 1929, by The Review of Reviews Corporation. Trade-mark registered in the United States, Canada and Great Britain. For further notices see Copyright Title Page, p. 6.
*Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

THE GOLDEN BOOK is indexed for ready reference in the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature.

Who's Who in the Golden Book

. . . The question of her decision is one not to be lightly considered, and it is not for me to presume to set up myself as the one person able to answer it. So I leave it with all of you: Which came out of the opened door—the lady or the tiger?

NEVER WAS A short-story reading public more heartily surprised than when it came to the end of Frank R. Stockton's story "The Lady or the Tiger?" and found that there was no answer to the question. And no way in the world to discover what happened. Hundreds of excited readers wrote to Mr. Stockton begging him to tell how the story came out. . . . Finally Mr. Stockton consented to do so—at least he went so far as to write "The Discourager of Hesitancy."

Besides being the author of "The Lady or the Tiger?" one of the famous short stories of all time, Mr. Stockton wrote many other stories and novels illuminated with the same adroit humour. He delighted to create unbelievable situations and to try for a moment to beguile his readers into thinking he was being quite sensible.

Mr. Stockton was born in Philadelphia in 1834, and died in 1902. Although he was trained as a wood-engraver, he deserted this profession to take up editing. Later he took charge of St. Nicholas Magazine and became a writer of children's stories. He did not begin to write for grown-ups until he was thirty-eight. Some of his best-known books are Rud- der Grange (1879), The Christmas Wreck (1886), The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine (1886), The Hundredth Man (1887), and The Watchmaker's Wife (1893).

The Discourager of Hesitancy

By FRANK R. STOCKTON

Frank R. Stockton

IT WAS NEARLY A YEAR after the occurrence of that event in the arena of the semi-barbaric King, known as the incident of the lady or the tiger, that there came to the palace of this monarch a deputation of five strangers from a far country. These men, of venerable and dignified aspect and demeanour, were received by a high officer of the court, and to him they made known their errand.

"Most noble officer," said the speaker of the deputation, "it so happened that one of our countrymen was present here, in your capital city, on that momentous occasion when a young man who had dared to aspire to the hand of your King's daughter had been placed in the arena, in the midst of the assembled multitude, and ordered to open one of two doors, not knowing whether a ferocious tiger would spring out upon him, or a beauteous lady would advance, ready to become his bride. Our fellow-citizen who was then present, was a man of super-sensitive feelings, and at the moment when the youth was about to open the door he was so fearful lest he should behold a horrible spectacle, that his nerves failed him, and he fled precipitately from the arena, and mounting his camel rode homeward as fast as he could go.

"We were all very much interested in the story which our countryman told us, and we were extremely sorry that he did not wait to see the end of the affair. We hoped, however, that in a few weeks some traveler from your city would come among us and bring us further news; but up to the day when we left our country, no such traveler had arrived. At last it was determined that the only thing to be done was to send a deputation to this country, and to ask the question; 'Which came out of the open door—the lady, or the tiger?'"

When the high officer had heard the mission of this most respectable deputation, he led the five strangers into an inner room, where they were seated upon soft cushions, and where he ordered coffee, pipes, sherbet, and other semi-barbaric refreshments to be served to them. Then, taking his seat before them, he thus addressed the visitors:

"Most noble strangers, before answering the question you have come so far to ask, I will relate to you an incident which occurred not very long after that to which you have referred. It is well known in all regions hereabouts that our great King is very fond of the presence of beautiful women about his court. All the ladies-in-waiting upon the Queen and the Royal Family are most lovely maidens, brought here from every part of the kingdom. The fame of this concourse of beauty, unequaled in any other royal court, has spread far and wide; and had it not been for the equally widespread fame of the systems of impetuous justice adopted by our King, many foreigners would doubtless have visited our court.

"But not very long ago there arrived here from a distant land a prince of distinguished appearance and undoubted rank. To such an one, of course, a royal audience was granted, and our King met him very graciously, and begged him to make known the object of his visit. Thereupon the Prince informed His Royal Highness that, having heard of the superior beauty of the ladies of his court, he had come to ask permission to make one of them his wife.

"When our King heard this bold announcement, his face reddened, he turned uneasily on his throne, and we were all in dread lest some quick words of furious condemnation should leap from out his quivering lips.

But by a mighty effort he controlled himself; and after a moment's silence he turned to the Prince, and said: 'Your request is granted. Tomorrow at noon you shall wed one of the fairest damsels of our court.' Then turning to his officers, he said: 'Give orders that everything be prepared for a wedding in this palace at high noon tomorrow. Convey this royal Prince to suitable apartments. Send to him tailors, boot-makers, hatters, jewelers, armourers; men of every craft, whose services he may need. Whatever he asks, provide. And let all be ready for the ceremony tomorrow.'

"'But, your Majesty,' exclaimed the Prince, 'before we make these preparations, I would like——'

"'Say no more!' roared the King. 'My royal orders have been given, and nothing more is needed to be said. You asked a boon; I granted it; and I will hear no more on the subject. Farewell, my Prince, until tomorrow noon.'

"At this the King arose, and left the audience chamber, while the Prince was hurried away to the apartments selected for him. And here came to him tailors, hatters, jewelers, and everyone who was needed to fit him out in grand attire for the wedding. But the mind of the Prince was much troubled and perplexed.

"'I do not understand,' he said to his attendants, 'this precipitancy of action. When am I to see the ladies, that I may choose among them? I wish opportunity, not only to gaze upon their forms and faces, but to become acquainted with their relative intellectual development.'

"'We can tell you nothing,' was the answer. 'What our King thinks right, that will he do. And more than this we know not.'

"'His Majesty's notions seem to be very peculiar,' said the Prince, 'and, so far as I can see, they do not at all agree with mine.'

"At that moment an attendant whom the Prince had not noticed before came and stood beside him. This was a broad-shouldered man of cheery aspect, who carried, its hilt in his right hand, and its broad back resting on his broad arm, an enormous scimitar, the upturned edge of which was keen and bright as any razor. Holding this formidable weapon as tenderly as though it had been a sleeping infant, this man drew closer to the Prince and bowed.

"'Who are you?' exclaimed His Highness, starting back at the sight of the frightful weapon.

"'I,' said the other, with a courteous smile, 'am the Discourager of Hesitancy. When our King makes known his wishes to anyone, a subject or visitor, whose disposition in some little points may be supposed not to wholly coincide with that of His Majesty, I am appointed to attend him closely, that, should he think of pausing in the path of obedience to the royal will, he may look at me, and proceed.'

"The Prince looked at him, and proceeded to be measured for a coat.

"The tailors and shoemakers and hatters worked all night; and the next morning, when everything was ready, and the hour of noon was drawing nigh, the Prince again anxiously inquired of his attendants when he might expect to be introduced to the ladies.

"'The King will attend to that,' they said. 'We know nothing of the matter.'

"'Your Highness,' said the Discourager of Hesitancy, approaching with a courtly bow, 'will observe the excellent quality of this edge.' And drawing a hair from his head, he dropped it upon the upturned edge of his scimitar, upon which it was cut in two at the moment of touching.

"The Prince glanced and turned upon his heel.

"Now came officers to conduct him to the grand hall of the palace, in which the ceremony was to be performed. Here the Prince found the King seated on the throne, with his nobles, his courtiers, and his officers standing about him in a magnificent array. The Prince was led to a position in front of the King, to whom he made obeisance, and then said:

"'Your Majesty, before I proceed further——'

"At this moment an attendant, who had approached with a long scarf of delicate silk, wound it about the lower part of the Prince's face so quickly and adroitly that he was obliged to cease speaking. Then, with wonderful dexterity, the rest of the scarf was wound around the Prince's head, so that he was completely blind-folded. Thereupon the attendant quickly made openings in the scarf over the mouth and ears, so that the Prince might breathe and hear; and fastening the ends of the scarf securely, he retired.

"The first impulse of the Prince was to snatch the silken folds from his head and face; but as he raised his hands to do so, he heard beside him the voice of the Discourager of Hesitancy, who gently whispered: 'I am here, your Highness.' And, with a shudder, the arms of the Prince fell down by his side.

Decorations by Edmund L. Thaxter

"Now before him he heard the voice of a priest, who had begun the marriage service in use in that semi-barbaric country. At his side he could hear a delicate rustle, which seemed to proceed from fabrics of soft silk. Gently putting forth his hand, he felt folds of such silk close beside him. Then came the voice of the priest requesting him to take the hand of the lady by his side; and reaching forth his right hand, the Prince received within it another hand so small, so soft, so delicately fashioned, and so delightful to the touch, that a thrill went through his being. Then, as was the custom of the country, the priest first asked the lady would she have this man to be her husband. To which the answer gently came in the sweetest voice he had ever heard: 'I will.'

"Then ran raptures rampant through the Prince's blood. The touch, the tone, enchanted him. All the ladies of that court were beautiful; the Discourager was behind him; and through his parted scarf he boldly answered: 'Yes, I will.'

"Whereupon the priest pronounced them man and wife.

"Now the Prince heard a little bustle about him; the long scarf was rapidly unrolled from his head; and he turned, with a start, to gaze upon his bride. To his utter amazement, there was no one there. He stood alone. Unable on the instant to ask a question or say a word, he gazed blankly about him.

"Then the King arose from his throne, and came down, and took him by the hand.

"Where is my wife?" gasped the Prince.

"She is here," said the King, leading him to a curtained doorway at the side of the hall.

"The curtains were drawn aside, and the Prince, entering, found himself in a long apartment, near the opposite wall of which stood a line of forty ladies, all dressed in rich attire, and each one apparently more beautiful than the rest.

"Waving his hand towards the line, the King said to the Prince: 'There is your bride! Approach, and lead her forth! But remember this: that if you attempt to take away one of the unmarried damsels of our court, your execution shall be instantaneous. Now, delay no longer. Step up and take your bride.'

"The Prince, as in a dream, walked slowly along the line of ladies, and then walked slowly back again. Nothing could he see about any one of them to indicate that she was more of a bride than the others. Their dresses were all similar; they all blushed; they all looked up, and then looked down. They all had charming little hands. Not one spoke a word. Not one lifted a finger to make a sign. It was evident that the orders given them had been very strict.

"Why this delay?" roared the King. 'If I had been married this day to one so fair as the lady who wedded you, I should not wait one second to claim her.'

"The bewildered Prince walked again up and down the line. And this time there was a slight change in the countenances of two of the ladies. One of the fairest gently smiled as he passed her. Another, just as beautiful, slightly frowned.

"Now," said the Prince to himself, 'I am sure that it is one of those two ladies whom I have married. But which? One smiled. And would not any woman smile when she saw, in such a case, her husband coming towards her? But, then, were she not his bride, would she not smile with satisfaction to think he had not selected her, and that she had not led him to an untimely doom? Then again, on the other hand, would not any woman frown when she saw her husband come towards her and fail to claim her? Would she not knit her lovely brows? And would she not inwardly say, "It is I! Don't you know it? Don't you feel it? Come!" But if this woman had not been married, would she not frown when she saw the man looking at her? Would she not say to herself, "Don't stop at me! It is the next but one. It is two ladies above. Go on!" And then again, the one who married me did not see my face. Would she not smile if she thought me comely? While if I wedded the one who frowned, could she restrain her disapprobation if she did not like me? Smiles invite the approach of true love. A frown is a reproach to a tardy advance. A smile—'

"Now, hear me!" loudly cried the King. 'In ten seconds, if you do not take the lady we have given you, she, who has just been made your bride, shall be your widow.'

"And, as the last word was uttered, the Discourager of Hesitancy stepped close behind the Prince, and whispered: 'I am here!'

"Now the prince could not hesitate an instant; and he stepped forward and took one of the two ladies by the hand.

"Loud rang the bells; loud cheered the people; and the King came forward to congratulate the Prince. He had taken his lawful bride.

"Now, then," said the high officer to the deputation of five strangers from a far country, "When you can decide among yourselves which lady the Prince chose, the one who smiled or the one who frowned, then will I tell you which came out of the opened door—the lady, or the tiger!"

At the latest accounts the five strangers had not yet decided.

