THE SUN, SUNDAY, MARCH 23, 1877.

This sketch is another warning to the Young Girl of Today. It is the story of a young girl who was not wise enough to heed the advice of her elders. She was lost in the world of fashion and beauty, and was led astray by the false promises of those who sought to gain her love and affection. She was led to believe that beauty was all that mattered, and that true love could not exist without it. But she soon found out that beauty is only skin deep, and that true love is found in the heart. She was taught a bitter lesson, and learned that it is better to be wise now than to be sorry later.

In this story, the girl is represented as a young woman who is beautiful and attractive. She is led astray by a suitor who promises her a life of luxury and wealth, but who is only after her for her beauty. She is taken to a ball, where she is surrounded by wealthy and fashionable people. She is then taken to a ship, where she is provided with all the luxuries of life. But she soon realizes that she has been tricked, and that her suitor is only after her beauty. She is then taken to a prison, where she is held captive. She learns a bitter lesson, and realizes that beauty is only skin deep.

The story is a warning to all young women to be careful of those who seek to gain their love and affection. It is a reminder that true love is found in the heart, and that beauty is only skin deep. It is a story of a young girl who was lost in the world of fashion and beauty, but who was wise enough to learn from her mistakes. She was taught a bitter lesson, and learned that it is better to be wise now than to be sorry later.
