NOVELETTE

- LORDS OF THE GHOSTLANDS Seabury Quinn 8
To be jerked out of the quiet restfulness of your grave and shipped across four thousand miles of water . . . but then any mummy might be called unlucky!

SHORT STORIES

- IN THE BEGINNING H. Bedford-Jones 24
Did you ever hear of an office safe that contained a link with the philosophers, magicians and soothsayers of past ages?
- A BIRTHDAY PRESENT FOR TOMMY Charles King 33
The way to conquer horror is to bring your fears out into the open; but you can't bring THEM out into the open. . . .
- THE PERIPATETIC CORPSE Harold Lawlor 38
The funniest part about a corpse walking into the morgue by itself is that it just couldn't happen—could it?
- THE SHONOKINS Manly Wade Wellman 48
Precautions against the Shonokins are not like precautions against anything else in this world or out of it
- PLEASE GO WAY AND LET ME SLEEP Helen W. Kasson 56
The family was gathered just as it would have been gathered in any other room . . . only this was the crypt
- ALANNAH Stephen Grendon 64
Any sensitive, imaginative child lives in a world of make-believe—at least "make-believe" is what the prosaic mind calls it
- THE TOMBSTONE Ray Bradbury 72
"No dead man's going to rest easy with strange folks sleeping right on top of him"
- SECOND CHILDHOOD Jack Snow 76
As one approaches the end of life's long journey memory becomes brilliantly clear and vivid
- A SIP WITH SATAN Roger S. Vreeland 80
Just one old man alone in a place big enough for a hotel. And the THINGS he did, well, what do you think?

Wind Walks Not Alone

By DAN KELLY

ALL of the lights in the world are out,
The stars cloud-covered and lost;
Nothing alive can travel about,
Only the wind and the frost.

Only the wind can rustle the sand
And frost can whiten the coast,
But then, that wind and the corpse-pale land
May be but the breath of a ghost.
