Sea-Wind

By MINNA IRVING

The sea-wind is a pirate bold
 Whose ghost will not be laid,
 But scourges still the sandy shores
 That once he used to raid.
 He left his bones in gibbet-chains
 To haunt the dark sea-caves,
 And beaches bare, and stony cliffs,
 Far isles and stormy waves.

His cutlas whistles to and fro,
 His voice is in the gales;
 Of scuttled barks and drowning men
 He tells unholy tales.
 He cannot rest without a ship;
 So his uneasy ghost
 Goes seeking for his vanished crew
 From lonely coast to coast.
