Published monthly by the Popular Fiction Publishing Company, 2457 E. Washington Street, Indianapolis, Ind. Entered as second-class matter March 20, 1923, at the post office at Indianapolis, Ind., under the act of March 3, 1879. Single copies, 25 cents. Subscription, $2.50 a year in the United States; $3.00 a year in Canada. English office: Charles Lavell, 13, Serjeant's Inn, Fleet Street, E. C. 4, London. The publishers are not responsible for the loss of unsolicited manuscripts, although every care will be taken of such material while in their possession. The contents of this magazine are fully protected by copyright and must not be reproduced either wholly or in part without permission from the publishers.

NOTE—All manuscripts and communications should be addressed to the publishers' Chicago office at 468 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill. FARNSWORTH WRIGHT, Editor. Copyright, 1928, by the Popular Fiction Publishing Company.

Contents for August, 1928

Cover Design----------------------C. C. Senf
Illustrating a scene in "Red Shadows"

Black Mora ------------------------A. Leslie 148
Verse; decoration by Hugh Rankin

Red Shadows-----------------------Robert E. Howard 149
Thrilling adventures and blood-freezing perils—red shadows on black trails—savage witchcraft and the Black God

You Can't Kill a Ghost------------Frank Belknap Long, Jr. 165
An eerie ghost-tale of Haiti—a weird adventure in a ruthless land, in which a phantom is the hero

Vulture Crag----------------------Everil Worrell 171
A weird-scientific tale of projection to other planets, by the author of "The Bird of Space" and "Cattle of Furos"

The Rose Window--------------------Charlton Lawrence Edholm 187
Back in the old town of Tuebingen a futile murder took place—a tale of treachery, superstition, and reincarnation

[CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE]
Crashing Suns (Part 1) .......................... Edmond Hamilton 193
A two-part tale of a hundred thousand years in the future—when our universe is threatened with destruction.

The Man in the Green Coat ....................... Eli Colter 215
A fascinating story of the supernatural, in the best vein of this well-known author.

Sonnets of the Midnight Hours:
5. The Grip of Evil Dream ...................... Donald Wandrei 231
Verse; decoration by Hugh Rankin

The Witches’ Sabbath (Conclusion) ........... Stephen Bagby 232

Dirge .............................................. Leavenworth Macnab 252
Verse

The Vengeance of Nitocris ....................... Thomas Lanier Williams 253
Weird revenge was taken by the sister of the Pharaoh on those who had murdered him—a true story of old Egypt.

Three Poems in Prose ......................... Charles Baudelaire 261
Translated by Clark Ashton Smith from the French.

Folks Used to Believe:
Wonderfully Preserved Relics .................. Alvin F. Harlow 263
Strange beliefs regarding the relics of the saints.

The Justice of the Czar ....................... George Fielding Eliot 264
A grim tale of torture in the prisons of the Czar Peter the Great—and the fate suffered by the executioner.

Weird Story Reprint:
The Demoiselle D’Ys ......................... Robert W. Chambers 268
A strange tale of reincarnation, and falconry, and the love of a stranger for a Norman maid.

The Eyrie ........................................ 278
A chat with the readers.

For Advertising Rates in WEIRD TALES Apply Direct to

WEIRD TALES

Western Advertising Office:
YOUNG & WAIRD, Mgrs.
300 N. Michigan Ave.
Chicago, Ill.
Phone, Central 6260

Eastern Advertising Office:
GEORGE W. STEARNS, Mgr.
Flatiron Building
New York, N. Y.
Phone, Ashland 7329
Three Poems in Prose

By CHARLES Baudelaire

(Translated by Clark Ashton Smith)
Une Charogne

Remember, my soul, the thing we saw on that beautiful morning of sweet summer: beside the path an infamous carrion on a couch sown with pebbles, its legs in the air like a lascivious woman burning and sweating her poisons, laid open in a cynical and nonchalant manner its belly filled with exhalations.

The sun shone down upon this putrefaction, as if to cook it to a turn, and render back a hundredfold to great nature all that she had joined together; and the sky saw the superb carcass unfold like a flower. The fetor was so powerful that you believed you would swoon on the grass.

The flies hummed on the putrid belly, where issued black battalions of larvae that flowed along these living tatters like a thick liquid. All these descended and mounted like a wave, or darted forth in sparklings; one would have said the body lived and multiplied, swollen by a vague breath. And this world gave forth a strange music, as of wind and running water, or the grain that a winnower agitates and turns with his fan in rhythmic movements.

The forms withdrew and faded, and were no more than a dream, an outline that is slow to arrive on the forgetful canvas, and is finished by the artist from memory alone.

Behind the rocks a restless bitch regarded us with an angry eye, watching for the moment to retrieve from the skeleton a morsel she had let fall.

—And still you will be like this ordure, this horrible infection, star of my eyes, and sun of my being, you, my angel and my passion! Yes, such you will be, O queen of graces, after the final sacraments, when you have gone, beneath the grass and the rich flowers, to mold among the bones of the dead.

Then, O my beauty! say to the worms who will devour you with kisses, that I have kept in memory the form and the divine essence of my decomposed loves!