PRE-SEASON TRAINING CAMP

The campus of the University of Massachusetts will be the site of the Patriots' training camp for the third straight year. Veterans, rookies and other new faces reported for duty on Tuesday, July 13. Actual full scale workouts start on Friday, July 16 with two-a-day sessions (10:00 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.) scheduled until late July. The workouts will be open to the public.

Training camp telephone numbers are as follows:

General Manager Upton Bell (413) 549-1334
Head Coach John Mazur (413) 549-1334
Public Relations Director
 Jack Nicholson (413) 549-6417
Publicity Assistant Wally Carew (413) 549-6418
Recorded News Message (Daily) (413) 549-6933

The team, coaches and front office staff will once again be quartered at the James House — which is in the midst of the new high rise dormitory area opposite the campus entrance to the stadium. We welcome all of the media to visit us during the summer.

The 1971 Patriots in Schaefer Stadium, Foxboro

The New England Patriots recently announced one of the most attractive regular season schedules in their history. The schedule was revealed exactly one year to the day from the crucial evening of April 13, 1970, when the residents of Foxboro overwhelmingly voted that a new stadium and new home be built for the Patriots in their community. In addition to the powerful gate potential of the slate, the first half of the schedule is the toughest drawn by any National Football League team. Six of the first seven teams colliding with head coach John Mazur's forces were in the NFL post-season championship playoffs last year. The only team of the seven that didn't make the strong circle of winners—the New York Jets—is regarded a strong contender for league honors with the return of Joe Namath and Matt Snell from injuries.

Four home games in a row, all against probable title contenders, will kick off the Patriots' first regular season play in the team's new Schaefer Stadium home. Featured in the rugged opening lineup will be the first local regular season appearance of former University of Massachusetts quarterback Greg Landry and his powerful playmates, the Detroit Lions. The reigning World Champion Baltimore Colts and the 1969 Super Bowl winners, the New York Jets, will also invade New England pro football turf during the four week home stand.

The official regular season's opener will be on Sunday, September 19, at 1:00 p.m. when the Patriots host the Oakland Raiders before a guaranteed local all-time record pro football crowd. Led by Daryl Lamonica and George Blanda, the Raiders have been one of pro football's most consistent winners. They have played in their league's championship playoffs for the last four years.

The final three home games for Joe Kapp, Jim Plunkett and company will be against the new look Houston Oilers and their prospective rookie quarterbacks, Dan Pastorini and Lynn Dickey; the Buffalo Bills with NFL Rookie of the Year quarterback Dennis Shaw and O. J. Simpson; and Don Shula's Miami Dolphins, the surprise club of 1970.

The pre-season promises plenty of action too as the Pats go back to night football in Foxboro. They dedicate the stadium against the rival New York Giants, then host the Los Angeles for the first time. A Labor Day eve battle with the Atlanta Falcons tops off the summer's slate.

The Patriots are already off to a flying start in 1971. Season ticket sales are nearing 50,000. This compares to just 9,000 season tickets sold for the 1969 season. There will be plenty of individual game seats on sale, both now and during the week of each game.

THE FOXBORO STORY

Touchdown! The first of many to follow was greeted by the roar of a turnaway crowd in the Massachusetts town of Foxboro, the future home base of pro football in New England. The occasion was the town meeting of this past April 13. The site was the Foxboro High School. The purpose was to vote on whether or not the residents of the small New England community wanted a new football stadium built in their town . . . a stadium that would be the new home of the Boston Patriots.

The preliminaries were exciting. Theater and Bay State Raceway owner E. M. Loew offered free land. Interested leaders, led by Town Selectman Gerry Rodman, canvassed their fellow townspeople and found almost total acceptance and enthusiasm.

Arrangements between the town, Mr. Loew and the Patriots were finalized. If the town wanted a stadium, a private Realty Trust would be formed to build it.

The largest throng ever to turn out for any issue in Foxboro's history loudly and happily voted in favor — 1852 to 84. Even those closest to the town pulse in such matters were amazed with the overwhelming turnout and the heavy percentage in favor — 98.3.

Pats' president Bill Sullivan, financial leader Phil David Fine and construction specialist Dan Marr, Jr. were among the team's board members on hand for the heartening results. Press, radio and television representation was there from throughout New England.

One of the big causes for future optimism is the location of the stadium and the easy access it offers to all New England football fans. Foxboro sits in the middle of New England's three largest cities (Boston, Worcester and Providence, R.I.) — accessible from each by major interstate highways and well within one hour's driving time. Other urban areas such as Springfield and Hartford (Conn.), Merrimack Valley and the Northern New England states lay just beyond. The stadium site will draw on a population of nearly six million people within a 50-mile radius.

PHONE 617-288-1100

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media:

Once again it is my privilege to extend a personal word of thanks to all who have helped in the happy chapters which have been written in The Patriots story in the past twelve months.

While there can be little doubt that this has been the greatest year in the history of the organization, there also must be no question about the fact that the people of the media made monumental contributions to the pleasant situations which were our constant handmaiden since a year ago at this time.

The Stadium story, the selection of Jim Plunkett and the development of our new organizational staff all were treated in first-class style by the people of the Press and on the radio and television stations. We do not take for granted the ready evidence that our good friends representing the various media helped immeasurably in turning around the fortunes of the Club off the field, and we now look forward to better performances on the sparkling new Poly-Turf at Schaefer Stadium and at the other addresses where our team will perform in pre-season and in championship game competition.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM H. SULLIVAN, JR.
PRESIDENT

"A dream is a Camelot adventure that when realized becomes the most satisfying experience of the most ardent romantic." "Mr. President," as Bill Sullivan of the New England Patriots has come to be known in local pro football circles, had a dream in 1959 and that enduring love affair with professional football bore the fruit of loyalty, dedication and struggle with the construction of Schaefer Stadium in Foxboro this year.

As founder of the Boston Patriots, Bill weathered the storm of a turbulent homeless decade and now as President of the revitalized New England Patriots looks with pride to a great future for a sound and thriving franchise.

The Patriots "number one Irishman" began his illustrious career as student publicist at Boston College in the mid 1930s.

Bill graduated from Boston College in 1937. He served as Publicity Director at his Alma Mater from 1938 through 1940. While at the Heights, Bill saw Boston College through the "glory years of Eagle football." Bill worked with the legendary Frank Leahy. During the Leahy-Sullivan era, the Eagles made their only two bowl appearances in the history of Boston College football. The star studded Eagles were the pride of New England as they appeared in both the Cotton and Sugar Bowls.

In 1941, Bill went to Notre Dame as Special Assistant to the Director of Athletics.

After a year in South Bend, he enlisted in the Navy in February of 1942. Following the war Bill was assigned to the staff of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

In January of 1946, he became the Director of Public Relations for the Boston Braves, a position that he held until December of 1952. While with the Braves, he started the Jimmy Fund in 1948, now a multi-million dollar internationally known cancer research project designed to study the causes of leukemia in children. He handled the public relation promotions for national accounts and coordinated the radio and television activities of Little League baseball.

In June of 1955, he became Assistant to the President of the Metropolitan Coal and Oil Company. On April 1, 1958, he became President of the Company, a position he presently maintains.

Continuing his interest in his Alma Mater, Bill helped lure the Naval Academy team here to dedicate Boston College's Alumni Stadium. He authored the dedication program, a program which became so popular as a souvenir item, it demanded a second printing.

But still the man had a dream and that dream was professional football in Boston. Many times he visited the late Bert Bell, father of the Patriots General Manager Upton Bell, and the former Commissioner promised that Boston would be given every consideration when the NFL decided to expand.

When contacted by Lamar Hunt relative to organizing the American Football League in 1959, Bill said, "count us in."

Yes, Boston was in and all because Bill Sullivan, former President of the AFL, "had a dream."

The Merger of the AFL and NFL and the victories of the Jets and Chiefs in the Super Bowl gave the AFL parity. Bill's work on the merger committee, like his work on the AFL's television committee at an earlier crucial time in the junior league's growth, paid great dividends for the Pats and the league.

The Patriots are now one of the 26 teams of the reorganized National Football League, Schaefer Stadium awaits the arrival of an ambitious young football team with a revamped and youthful front office and Bill Sullivan continues as the club's President looking back with pride on the past and looking ahead with conviction that pro football's "Decade of the 70s" will see further fruition of his dream for all of New England's pro football fans.

Bill and his wife Mary have six children. Oldest son Chuck is now a successful attorney in New York and last year was named to the Patriots' Board of Directors. Sons Bill and Pat have also been associated with the Pats in various capacities in recent years. The Sullivan daughters are Nancie (Mrs. Miceal Chamberlain), Jeanne (Mrs. Joseph McKeigue) and Kathleen, who returned recently from France and will be teaching locally. The Sullivans reside in Wellesley.

UPTON BELL
General Manager

Upton Bell became professional football's youngest General Manager on February 26th of this year when he took over the challenging post of running the organization of the newly-christened New England Patriots. The son of former National Football League Commissioner Bert Bell, he came to Boston from a successful career as Director of Player Personnel of the defending World Champion Baltimore Colts.

Upon taking over the assignment as operational chief of a team that finished in last place in the NFL in 1970, the 33-year old Bell immediately set upon the task of building the Patriots into an eventual winner.

"One of the main reasons I'm here is because I feel that the Patriots are totally committed to winning."

The commitment to winning soon became evident. Within the next couple of months Bell (a) got the Patriots into the established NFL scouting combine of CEPO; (b) assigned Player Personnel Director Rommie Loudd to the important new role of Director of Pro Scouting; (c) lured highly regarded Dallas Cowboys talent scout Frank "Bucko" Kilroy to New England as the new Director of Player Personnel; (d) quadrupled the size of the team's full-time scouting force with the addition of Gary Glick, Bob Terpening, Tom Boisture and Mike Hickey. These new aides will staff Kilroy's talent department. At the same time Bell's addition of Kilroy brought together two of pro football's top evaluators of talent, one the Personnel head of the Champion Colts, the other a top scout for the runner-up Cowboys—the two combatants in last season's Super Bowl.

"One of our biggest needs here with the Patriots was to beef up our scouting department. If we can't get the players, we're nothing. We want to give John Mazur all the help he needs."

Bell continued to expand the Patriots' front office. He added a business manager and more recently appointed an executive assistant. The club's public relations department was expanded. The ticket department saw a tremendous surge of new season tickets and at the same time the mechanics of the ticket operation were fully computerized for the first time.

"Our goal is to have a front office second to none," Bell stated as he reflected on his many moves, all necessary to keep the Patriots' organizational growth in pace with the tremendous new interest of the Pats' fans and the talent demands of a team trying to move into title contention.

The background of the Patriots' new General Manager has its roots in pro football. He is the youngest son of long-time NFL Commissioner Bert Bell, who served as pro football czar for the 14 years following World War II until his death at the age of 65. The senior Bell passed away while watching an NFL game in Philadelphia.

The youthful looking Bell is a native of Philadelphia where he attended Malvern Prep School and LaSalle College. He was a top basketball prospect while at La Salle.

Bell entered the world of pro football officially in 1960. He began in the ticket department of the Baltimore Colts. Shortly thereafter he became assistant to the late Keith Molesworth, the talent director. Upon Molesworth's death in 1966, Upton Bell became the Colts' Director of Player Personnel.

Before he was through at Baltimore, Bell played a major role in putting the Colts into two Super Bowls, the second of which made them the game's World Champions. His draft evaluations were directly responsible for 18 of the 40 players on the Colts' roster in last season's Super Bowl victory over Dallas. Among them were Bubba Smith, Eddie Hinton, Ted Hendricks, Norm Bulaich and Jim O'Brien. Seven of the 1970 draftees made the Colts' Super Bowl team.

Twenty-five years ago, when his father owned the Philadelphia Eagles, many of Upton Bell's baby sitters were football players. Eleven years ago, when he joined the Colts, he picked up players at the airport and did office work for 65 dollars a week. Now, as the NFL's youngest General Manager, he will run the show for the New England Patriots in Foxboro, Massachusetts as the Patriots, like Bell, look to climb to the top.

Bell, his wife Ann, and son Christopher, have now settled in the Back Bay section of Boston.

JOHN MAZUR

John Mazur knows the feeling of a winner. He acquired it as a quarterback under Frank Leahy at Notre Dame and as a coach on the Buffalo Bills staff during that club's championship years.

The Patriots new head coach also knows about discipline and spirit. He served as an officer in the United States Marine Corps prior to playing pro football in Canada, where a knee injury put an end to his playing career.

In 1971 the former Notre Dame quarterback and ex-leatherneck will call on all the discipline and spirit he knows as he tries to develop a winning feeling with the New England Patriots. A tall, dark, 40-year-old coaching veteran of Polish extraction, Mazur this year begins his first full season as head coach of the Patriots.

Mazur took over as the New England pro club's head mentor halfway through the 1970 season, succeeding Clive Rush, who was relieved of his duties as head coach due to the medical advice of his doctors. He had been the first assistant hired by Rush when he came to Boston on February 6th, 1969.

When Mazur took over as interim head coach last November, he inherited a disorganized team that had also been racked with injuries. The record at that point was 1-6. The second half of the campaign was much the same, however, as the first half record was duplicated. The Pats lost several starters for the season as a club record number of injuries piled up during the season's late stages.

This year the Pats' head coach has reorganized his coaching staff. He has three hold-overs in offensive aides Bruce Beatty and Jerry Stoltz and defensive assistant John Meyer. He has added offensive coordinator Sam Rutigliano and defensive coordinator Dick Evans, as well as secondary coach Tom Fletcher.

Mazur and his staff now face the formidable task of improving the Patriots' 2-12 last place record of 1970 while going up against one of pro football's toughest schedules. In the 1971 season's first half alone, six of those first seven opponents were in last year's championship play-off games.

"We're determined to make people know we are a football team, one that no team can afford to take lightly," the Pats' head coach asserted. "We'll do it with enthusiasm and complete dedication to a point where our mental attitude is what it should be," he added, "and then maybe we can show some people something."

Mazur, a native of Plymouth, Pennsylvania, was a member of Notre Dame's national championship team of 1949 and quarterbacked the Irish in 1950 and 1951. Following active duty with the Marines and an injury-abbreviated one year career in pro football with Vancouver of the Canadian League, he began his collegiate coaching career.

He served as an assistant coach on the staffs at Marquette, Tulane and Boston University. It was at B.U. that he met Lou Saban, the first coach of the Patriots. Saban hired him when he took over the Buffalo Bills.

From 1962 through 1968, Mazur was offensive coordinator for the Bills. During that time the club won three division titles and two AFL championships, and John was credited with the development of backup quarterback Daryle Lamonica and the effective utilization of the two quarterback system deploying starter Jack Kemp and backup man Lamonica.

The Patriots' boss man on the football field is currently the only Notre Dame alumnus serving as a head coach in the pros. Prior to taking over his current head post, he was the team's offensive coordinator.

Mazur, his wife Bernadine, and their children, Cynthia and John, Jr. live in Natick. The native Pennsylvanian was honored in his hometown of Plymouth, Pa. when he returned with his family during the off-season.

SAM RUTIGLIANO
Offensive Coordinator and Backs

Former Denver Bronco receiver coach Sam Rutigliano, was named by Head Coach John Mazur to the post of offensive coordinator and offensive backfield coach. The 38-year-old Rutigliano is a graduate of Tulsa where he was a three letter receiver. He acquired his masters degree at Columbia in 1959.

Sam began his coaching career as head coach of Lafayette High School in New York City. After three years, he took over a similar job at Greenwich High School in Connecticut. In 1962, he took on his third high school head coaching job at Chappaqua (N.Y.) High School.

In 1964, Sam took on the job of offensive backfield coach of the University of Connecticut. He left in 1966 to join Lou Saban's staff at the University of Maryland, again as an offensive assistant. In 1967, he moved with Saban to the Denver Broncos, where he remained until being named to the Patriots coaching staff last February.

Sam and his wife Barbara, who now live in Holliston, have three children: Paul, Alison and Kerry.

DICK EVANS
Defensive Coordinator and Line Coach

Dick is a 15-year coaching veteran in the National Football League.

He played end for the Green Bay Packers in 1940 and 1943 and with the then Chicago Cardinals from 1941-42.

Following a service hitch, Evans coached col-legately at Long Beach City College in Los Angeles, Loyola of Los Angeles and the University of Nevada before turning to the professional ranks with the Chicago Cardinals in 1952. From 1955-1958, Dick coached at Washington under Joe Kuharich and then went to Notre Dame with Kuharich in 1959. Evans was an assistant to Paul Brown with the Cleveland Browns from 1960-'63 and then rejoined Kuharich at Philadelphia from 1964-'68.

Dick spent the 1969 season as a full time scout for the Packers on the East Coast before being named a defensive coach with Green Bay in 1970. He and his wife Miriam have three children: Nile, Marty and Sally. They now live in Medfield.

BRUCE BEATTY
Offensive Line Coach

A top offensive aide is Bruce Beatty, who has his football roots at Miami of Ohio. The coach of the offensive line is a former end, linebacker and All-Conference tackle from that school. Following his playing days, he was named to coach at his alma mater by the head mentor, Ara Parseghian.

Bruce joined Parseghian in 1956 at Northwestern and gained 13 years of top Big Ten credentials as a coach and talent scout.

In his rookie year as a pro coach, Bruce's offensive line was one of the highest rated in pro football. No Patriot line ever had a better record in pass protection. Another unit he directs, the special teams, were tops in the pros in several departments. Last year both units fell upon less consistent times, but injuries caused much of this.

A former part-time male model, Bruce is a native of Canton, Ohio. He has three children, Kris, Shawn and Kyle.

JERRY STOLTZ
Coach of Receivers

Jerry was one of the first new assistants hired by the Pats in 1969. He played his college football at the University of Toledo. One of pro football's youngest coaches, Jerry stayed at Toledo to coach. He then progressed to staff positions at top football schools such as Notre Dame, Miami of Ohio and finally Purdue, where he was an offensive specialist. Among Jerry's chief assignments in his first year of pro coaching was working with the team's top draft choice, Ron Sellers, and the other new receivers acquired by the club that year. He stayed on when new head coach John Mazur took charge last year and has the promise of a bright future.

Originally from Belleville, Illinois, the Pats' offensive aide, his wife Rosemary and their four children, Mike, Jeri Marie, Kelly and Patrick, now reside in Framingham, Mass.

JOHN MEYER
Linebacker Coach

John's appointment as coach of the Pats' linebackers in 1969 made him the youngest regular assistant coach in the pro ranks. The former Notre Dame tackle was drafted by the St. Louis Cardinals. A series of knee injuries followed him to Houston where he was forced to cut his playing career short while linebacking for the Oilers.

John continued with the Oilers as linebacker coach during training camps and was also a full-time scout for them in his rookie full-time coaching season. His group was a key to the Pats' "wide five" defense — an alignment which used extra linebackers and their varied abilities. The former Fighting Irish star keeps himself in top condition as leader of the Pats Calisthenics.

A Chicago native, he and his wife Loretta and daughters Tracey and Courtney are now residing in Southboro, Mass.

TOM FLETCHER
Defensive Backfield Coach

The 42-year-old Fletcher has been the defensive coordinator at the University of Pittsburgh for the last two years. Prior to that, he had served for three seasons as defensive secondary coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Fletcher's football career began in the West. He played college ball at St. Mary's and Arizona State. His pro football playing activity was limited by an ankle injury. He was property of both the San Francisco 49ers and the New York Giants until the injury forced him out.

Tom became an assistant coach at Arizona State (1954-'57). He then moved with Dan Devine to the University of Missouri from 1958-'65.

Fletcher joined Bill Austin on the Pittsburgh Steelers staff for three years (1966-'68).

Tom, his wife Fran and their two children, Sue, 12, and Sandy, 11, live in Medfield.

ROMMIE LOUDD
Director of Pro Personnel

Rommie assumed his important new post with the Pats in March. He will keep tabs on the personnel of all 25 NFL teams the Pats are competing with. The local team has first crack at all players waived in the AFC, which makes Rommie's role all the more crucial.

Rommie joined the Pats' coaching staff in 1966. In 1967 he was named Director of Player Personnel. His top draft was in 1969, when he selected Ron Sellers, Mike Monlter and Carl Garrett on the first three rounds.

In 1967 Rommie was named the Director of Player Personnel and thus transfers his knowledge of the game from the field to the front office where he coordinates the Pats' talent hunt. He had previously been a linebacker coach.

Rommie, his wife Betty and their children, Rommie, Jr. and Cheryl Lynn live in Taunton, Mass.

FRANK "Bucko" KILROY
Director of Player Personnel

"Bucko" has long been regarded one of the finest talent scouts in pro football. He came to the Patriots from the Dallas Cowboys, where he was a chief staff scout for the National Conference Champions. He was responsible for many of the personnel that manned the strong Dallas teams.

Although only 49 years old, Kilroy is the senior scout in the NFL, having been a personnel specialist for one of the five teams that pioneered the formal scouting department in pro football. "Bucko is a super scout," said General Manager Upton Bell.

Bucko was known as one of the roughest linemen ever to play in the NFL during his 13 years with the Philadelphia Eagles. He missed only one game in 200 during his first 12 seasons and was selected All-Pro six different years. Following his playing career he was chief scout for the Philadelphia Eagles and the Washington Redskins.

The Pats' new Director of Player Personnel has seven children and nine grandchildren. A graduate of Temple University, he is a native of Philadelphia, Pa.

TOM BOISTURE
Scout

Tom launched his coaching career as head coach at Austin Catholic High in Detroit where he doubled as both football and baseball mentor. New York Knick All-Star and former Chicago White Sox righthander Dave DeBusschere was the star of the Austin Catholic nine.

Boisture moved to the University of Houston (1962-1965) where he was offensive backfield coach and recruited Warren McVea for the Cougars. He was head coach at Holy Cross (1967-68) after being an assistant at the Cross in 1966.

Prior to joining the Patriots personnel staff as a full-time scout, Boisture was an assistant at Tulsa University.

Tom and his wife, Dolores, have five children: Susan, Debbie, David, Nancy and Mike.

GARY GLICK
Scout

The 41-year-old Glick, who hails from Ft. Collins, Colorado, was an All-Skyline Conference quarterback at Colorado State.

He was the number one pick of the Pittsburgh Steelers in the 1955 draft. He was the first defensive back candidate ever taken on the first round. He spent three years with the Steelers, three with the Redskins and one with the Colts.

In 1962, Gary joined the staff of the Denver Broncos. He returned as a player with the San Diego Chargers in 1963.

Glick coached at Norfolk, Va. in the Continental League for four years and spent a season on the staff of the Montreal Alouettes in the Canadian League. Prior to joining the Patriots, he was a scout with the World Champion Baltimore Colts. Gary and his wife, Colleen, have three children, Carol, Ronald and Denny.

MIKE HICKEY
Scout

One of the newest of the Patriots, he is from Los Angeles, California. Rugged 6'6", 275-pound, 24-year-old Mike is the biggest and youngest scout in pro football. He is the son of the former San Francisco 49er head coach and present Dallas Cowboy scout "Red" Hickey. In his college days he was a tight end and teammate of Buffalo Bills wide receiver Haven Moses on the 1967 small college National Champion San Diego State Aztecs. Knee injuries halted a possible pro football career for big Mike. He was a Blue Key History major at San Diego State.

Mike and his wife Kathleen live in Foxboro and the couple are expecting their first child this fall.

BOB TERPENING
Scout

Former head football coach at Baltimore City College High School, the 29-year-old Terpening was the second full-time scout hired by General Manager Upton Bell.

Bob was a defensive tackle for Shepherd College in West Virginia and played semi-pro ball with Daytona of the Southern League. He graduated from Shepherd and received his Masters in Education from West Virginia University.

Bob began his coaching career at Baltimore City College High School as an assistant from 1965 through 1968. In 1969 he was named head coach at the same school succeeding George Young, the present Director of Player Personnel for the Baltimore Colts. Bob was on Upton Bell's staff when Bell was Director of Player Personnel with the Colts. He and his wife Virginia will live in the Foxboro area.

GEORGE SAUER

Formerly General Manager of the Pats, this veteran scout and former coach has returned to the field of specialization he was so successful in as Director of Player Personnel with the New York Jets. Having returned to his home in Texas, George will operate as an area scout covering the Southwest Conference and that general area of the country.

He has in his last 30 or so years in football been head coach at New Hampshire, Kansas, and the U.S. Naval Academy. He was also head coach and Athletic Director at Baylor.

A Navy veteran during the Second World War, George and his wife Lillian are now living in Waco, Texas. The Pats' veteran talent scout is a native of Lincoln, Nebraska and a graduate of the University of Nebraska, where he was an All-American fullback. The Sauers have a son, George, Jr. and a married daughter, Dana.

PETER HADHAZY Executive Assistant

Peter has assumed the role of Executive Assistant to lend administrative assistance to General Manager Upton Bell.

Most recently the Player Personnel Director for the Commissioner's Office, the 27-year old Hadhazy began in the pros as a part-time mail room worker in the NFL office. He eventually moved into a full time position on the NFL staff specializing in financial projects, contracts and player relations. Stadium matters and other administrative departments as they arise are now his primary orders of business.

Pete is a native of Debrecen, Hungary. He graduated from Iona College in New York, having gone there on a tennis scholarship. He and his wife Rita now reside in Walpole, Mass.

JACK NICHOLSON

Director of Public Relations

With his prime responsibility directing the club's public relations and publicity operation, Jack made the move from banking and advertising into pro football in 1966. He began with the Patriots as Assistant Publicity Director and also coordinated a number of team promotions.

Among his regular duties are working with the area's press, radio and television personnel, providing player, team and related information, publishing press and fan publications and directing the press box operation during the season. Jack also travels in advance of the team on road games.

Jack is a Navy veteran and a graduate in Business Administration from Clark University. A native of Auburn, Mass., he now lives in Northboro with his wife Jean, sons John and Paul and daughter Lynne.

WALLY CAREW

Publicity Assistant

Wally joined the Patriots in April of this year as an assistant in the team's Public Relations and Publicity areas. He previously had been a sports writer and columnist for the Lowell Sun.

He was a three sport athlete at Concord High School, attended Northeastern for two years and graduated top in his class from the Massachusetts State Police Academy. He also spent a short time in the banking business.

While in the Army, he was an All-Seventh Army catcher in baseball and linebacker in football during a tour in Germany.

Wally's father, Walter, is the head football coach at Concord-Carlisle High School. Wally, who is 27, still lives in Concord, the historic town where the Pats held in-season practice in 1960.

HERMAN BRUCE
Business Manager

The likeable Chicago, Illinois native is the first executive hired by the Pats solely to concentrate on business matters exclusively of the ticket operation.

Herm has most recently been associated with Hercules, Inc., a national chemical firm. He was a technical sales representative for them for the last two years. One of his specific duties was in running the company's trade shows, conventions and sales meetings.

He has also had part-time stints as a public address announcer and team photographer for the Philadelphia 76ers and his alma mater, St. Joseph's (Phil.).

Herm's primary duties with the Pats will include coordinating all of the club's finances, handling the team's home and road accommodations and meeting with the many sales representatives of other businesses.

He, his wife Loretta, and children Kim and Kevin have recently moved into their new home in Walpole, Mass.

JOHN FITZGERALD
Ticket Director

John is an original Patriot. After six years in the Navy during and following the second World War, Fitz joined United Air Lines and eventually became manager of United's Boston office.

When most of the AFL teams had begun forming, this diligent Irishman contacted Pats' president Bill Sullivan for advice on a position with the Buffalo Bills. John was asked to wait and was shortly appointed Boston's ticket manager. Fitz was the first person hired by the club. Since that time he has been faced with the tremendous task of time and again regearing to the varying ticket situations for four different Boston playing sites.

His ticket operation has been faced this year with a huge changeover onto computers handling a 500 per cent increase in season tickets.

John and his wife Peg live in Swampscott. They have seven children: Mark, Kevin, Terry, Julie, Rose Marie, Brian and Sean.

GERRY O'BRIEN
Assistant Ticket Director

Gerry joined the Patriots as assistant to John Fitzgerald in early 1967 and has brought a good combination of English wit and Irish spirit into the fold with him. A graduate of Ireland's Marist College, he played soccer in London and Gaelic football in Ireland.

He assisted the former Boston Beacons Soccer Club in their stay in the Hub as advisor, broadcast color man and ticket manager. His knowledge of the game that features the World Cup is unlimited. He had previously been in the food and restaurant business — both in England and in the Boston area.

Gerry, his wife Lena, and their five children, Maura, Geraldine, Lawrence, Joseph and Kerry, live in Lynn. His oldest daughters Maura and Gerry have worked in the Patriots office.

RALPH HARTKE
Assistant Ticket Director

Ralph joined the Patriots last November as an assistant ticket manager.

A 46-year-old Buffalo, N.Y. native, Ralph is a

World War II veteran and took part in the famous Normandy invasion with the first Army.

Prior to joining the Patriots he was an assistant office and branch manager at both the Buffalo and Cambridge facilities of Norton Company.

Ralph and his wife Ruby, who reside in Woburn, have two children, Linda and Ronald.

BILL ELIAS
Director of Community Relations

The popular veteran of the football coaching ranks shifted this year into a new assignment as Director of Community Relations. In his new capacity, Bill has taken on the development of new season ticket interest through public appearances and promotion of group ticket sales. With the emphasis on building fan goodwill and improved community relations, chief areas of concentration have been in the "new markets" area closest to the Pats' new home in Foxboro.

A talented speaker, Bill has also manned the club's temporary on-site trailer office in Foxboro, assisting the thousands of fans who journeyed to the stadium while it was under construction.

Bill served as the Pats' defensive backfield coach in 1969 and 1970. Prior to that he was well known as the head coach of the U.S. Naval Academy for four years. Bill had previously coached at Purdue, George Washington and Virginia. He was named Southern Conference Coach of the Year in 1960.

A native of Martin's Ferry, Ohio, Bill, his wife Gwen and their three children, Candy, Bill Jr., and Kelly Mike, live in Bedford, Mass.

MIKE CHAMBERLAIN
Program and Advertising Manager

Mike joined the Pats earlier this year on a full-time basis. He had previously handled several special projects for the club, including selling advertising space in the program and helping to run certain promotions. His primary assignment will be to handle advertising and coordination on Pro, the beautiful new game magazine of the Patriots and the NFL.

Mike, whose formal first name Miceal is Gaelic for Michael, has gotten involved with the Pats in another way. This year he has been working for the J. F. White Contractors, the company building the team's new stadium in Foxboro. He has combined hard hat with hard work as he now coordinates the Patriots efforts on their game program for 1971.

A native of Ireland, he was born in County Clare. He graduated from Babson College in Wellesley last year. He, his wife Nancie and son Miceal, Jr. live in Norwood.

EILEEN MANEY
Promotions Director

Eileen Maney, a native of Nahant, began with the Patriots as an aide in Public Relations and Promotions. Since 1967 she has been directing most of her energetic efforts toward the special promotions phase of the team's public relations operation. Last year she played a key role in coordinating the production of the club's new game program, Pro Magazine.

Eileen came from the Boston Herald where she was Assistant to the City Editor and at various times had been Women's Club Editor, New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont News Editor, and acting TV and Radio Editor. She even filled in at times for the Drama Critic and Society Editor.

After graduation from Boston College she served briefly as Assistant Registrar at Newman Preparatory School. She will continue to concentrate on the many new promotions connected with the Pats' new growth, particularly in the Foxboro area.

WILLIAM FINUCANE
General Counsel

Bill has served as counsel to the Patriots since the American Football League broke ground in 1960. A top legal executive, he has become a specialist in pro football in addition to his abilities in the many other areas of his profession.

His legal advice and talents have helped to guide the club down the road to their current solid springboard to a brighter future. He was never more helpful than in recent stadium efforts.

Bill has probably prepared more contracts over the past 11 years than many attorneys will handle in a lifetime. He also continues in a successful downtown Boston law practice with Sidney Dunn of Dunn and Finucane.

DR JOSEPH DORGAN
Team Surgeon

The Pats' genial team doctor was born in Lawrence, educated in Lowell, and now lives in Belmont. He has been with the Pats since the beginning of the team's history and has performed some critical operations that have boosted Patriots' fortunes over the years. A graduate of Holy Cross (Class of 1941), Joe also attended Tufts Medical where he now instructs.

He is a member of the staffs of Boston City Hospital, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, and Cambridge City Hospital. He is also Chief of Orthopedic Surgery at the Malden City Hospital. Joe and his wife Mary have three children, Joannie Barbara and Mary Anne. The Patriots feel fortunate in having one of the area's foremost surgeons on their team.

DR. BURTON A. NAULT
Associate Team Physician

Burt is a native of Concord, N.H. where he practices General Surgery. He is a graduate of Bowdoin College where he played football under Adam Walsh. He also graduated from Cornell Medical College, and trained in surgery at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton, Mass.

The Pats' youthful medical man has been an Associate Pshysician with the club for eleven years. He is an active participant in hockey, tennis, golf and badminton. In addition, he last year founded the new Concord Athletic Club.

The good doctor from the Granite State also travels with the Pats on the road. Burt has been married two years to the former Patricia Tucker.

WILLIAM T. BATES
Trainer

Bill Bates is entering his eleventh season as head trainer for the Boston Patriots. The 36-year-old Marine veteran of Korea started his career by attaining a bachelor's degree in physical therapy from the University of Pennsylvania in 1960. While in school Bates served the Philadelphia Warriors and the Philadelphia Eagles in assistant capacities. From 1962 until 1966 Bates doubled as head trainer for the Philadelphia 76ers to round out seven years in the NBA. He has trained two AFL all-star teams and toured Europe with NBA stars as a player-trainer.

Bill is currently in private practice in Kenmore Square as well as being Chief Physical Therapist at a local rehabilitation center. He was admitted to the American College of Sports Medicine two years ago and is also a member of the American Physical Therapy Association. He also recently has been active for the Attorney General's office on special drug abuse programs. Bill and his wife Donna, a stewardess, reside in Brookline.

GEORGE LUONGO
Equipment Manager

Going into his second year as head equipment manager is George Luongo of Winchester. Well known to many of the Pats veterans, George had helped the club in an unofficial capacity for several years, assisting particularly on game day. The rugged Italian former construction chief joined the Patriots official family last year, coming over from a previous position as an outside supervisor for a Boston piping contractor.

George and his wife Bunny have four children, George, Jr., Robert, Dianne, and Paul.

PETER C. SIRAGUSA
Entertainment Director

The Music Man of the Patriots, Peter is in charge of the Pats' half-time entertainment at home games. He has featured in his shows some of the top award-winning marching units and drum and bugle corps in the state. Many other top marching bands from New England and other sections of the East have also appeared under his talented guidance.

In addition to serving as Director of Entertainment of the Pats, Peter is Director of the Boston College and Boston Fire Department bands and was also recently selected as Director of Music Education for the Boston School Department.

Peter, a native of Belmont, resides in Brighton with his wife, the former Gloria Assanti of Arlington, and their five children, Francis, Stephanie, Peter Jr., Mark and Gloria.

DICK RAPHAEL Patriots Photographer

Dick is a Marblehead resident and a graduate of Boston University. He capably handles Patriots game action and posed player photos. In addition, he is well-known throughout national sports circles for his contributions to magazines such as Sport and Sports Illustrated. His work has become an invaluable segment of the Pats publicity and public relations operation.

Dot Doherty

Dusty Rhodes

JoAnne Hurst

Teri Gough

Bertha Pittman

Mary Reynolds

Sheilagh Duggan

Paulette Sarvay

Roberta Hudson

Geri O'Brien

Malvena Baxter

The talented secretarial force of the Patriots' front office (above) has increased at a pace parallel to that of the club's executive force. The following distaff members and their primary areas of assignment are: Dot Doherty (General Manager's office); Dusty Rhodes (Coaches' office); JoAnne Hurst (Public Relations and Publicity); Teri Gough (Business office); Bertha Pittman (Promotions and Advertising); Mary Reynolds and Sheilagh Duggan (Personnel Department); Paulette Sarvay and Roberta Hudson (Ticket Department). Additional executive secretarial work is handled by Evelyn McDonough. Handling the switchboard and fan mail are Geri O'Brien and Malvena Baxter.

Late additions to the Patriots staff as they enter training camp are assistant trainer Frank Challant from Dorchester and assistant equipment man Dennis Moriarty of Lowell.

The Team Prospectus

"E" will be the first letter in the New England Patriots' alphabet in 1971. It will stand for enthusiasm — a necessary quality in John Mazur's plans for the Patriots in his first full year as the team's head coach.

"Enthusiasm will be the big thing for our ball club this year . . . we'll look for it in everything we do. With it we can get the kind of mental attitude we're going to need to hold our own . . . the kind of mental attitude too many of the men didn't have a year ago."

These are Mazur's thoughts as he looks ahead to the 1971 season. He and his newly realigned coaching staff will have the job of leading the Patriots out of the depths of the NFL cellar, back from the poorest record (2-12) in the club's history. The team's chances for improvement are not helped by having to face one of the league's toughest schedules. During the slate's first half, six of the seven opponents were in last year's championship playoffs.

Despite the tremendous underdog role the New Englanders will play this year, the team and the organization have never had so much going for them. Among the most significant things Mazur and new General Manager Upton Bell now refer to are:

- (1) the new Schaefer Stadium in Foxboro — the team's first permanent home ever . . .
- (2) an almost unbelievable explosion of fan enthusiasm — a whopping 500 percent increase in season tickets approaching some 50,000 and ensuring record crowds.
- (3) the prospects of the first training camp in two years for recent stars Joe Kapp, Jim Nance and Carl Garrett . . .
- (4) the arrival on the scene of highly touted number one draft choice Jim Plunkett, super prospect quarterback from Stanford, and other hopefuls from the draft and the club's free agent group . . .
- (5) the likelihood of large, tough, better than average front lines on both offense and defense . . .
- (6) the qualitative expansion of the organization, the club's front office and the nucleus for future success, the club's scouting operation . . .
- (7) the fact that the Patriots have first claim on all players put on waivers in the American Conference of the NFL . . .

"Our position on waivers is a big plus for our particular goals," Mazur stated, "because we have a chance to add some bench strength from talent-rich clubs if we can't find it among the people we have in training camp. As far as our first line starters are concerned, most are top-notch men at their positions, as good as any," he pointed out, "and in some cases, better than most. Many people in the league would agree with me on this, but when you lose, your talent can be dragged down by the overall stigma of frequent defeat. This is why," the Pats' mentor concluded, "our mental attitude is so important going in."

Perhaps the biggest factor influencing mental attitude, the biggest shot in the arm any last place ball club could get to help in getting a few wins, is the presence of a new stadium and the promise of crowds at least twice as large as the Patriots are used to at home. Before now the Patriots had never had a real home. There's no way to be sure how much this will help the spirit of the team — but there is a good chance it will aid them more than anyone now expects.

Team defensive captain Houston Antwine summed it up best at a recent gathering of many of the Patriot players at a Cape Cod resort area: "All of the players I've talked to can feel it . . . the support, the interest, and the feeling that we can do it if we do it together," he said. "We know we have some darn good personnel and we know that some strange things hit us a year ago," Twine added, "but I think we're going to be ready to beat some people."

John Mazur and his staff have worked long hours putting the system together. Sam Rutigliano is the new offensive coordinator, joined by offensive aides Bruce Beatty and Jerry Stoltz. Dick Evans is the new defensive coordinator, joined by defensive aides John Meyer and Tom Fletcher. Now that preparations for training camp are close to ready, Mazur looks at the prospects of his team.

THE QUARTERBACKS — "It's good to have what looks like some depth for a change," said Mazur, himself a former collegiate and pro quarterback. The big veteran returning is Joe Kapp, the Pats' on-the-field leader who is the incumbent starter. The big new face is rookie Jim Plunkett, the sensational Stanford All-American who was the Pats' and pro football's top draft choice in 1971. "Everyone asks me to compare Kapp and Plunkett as if to pit one against the other," he added, "but heck, I like to compare them as to what they can do for each other and both can do for the ball club. Joe will have his first training camp ever with us and he just wants to win," he continued, "and Jim has the great potential and a pretty darn good quarterback to learn from. It's not a bad situation."

Another experienced hand is Mike Taliaferro, the Patriots' starting quarterback throughout the 1969 season and a starter for the East in that year's AFL All-Star Game. Last year Taliaferro was replaced by Kapp in early October after a shoulder injury led to an unsteady start. Former Yale star Brian Dowling and three year pro Kim Hammond, the man who threw to Ron Sellers at Florida State, return from last year's team. A promising newcomer in addition to Plunkett is 6'3", 220 pound rookie Mike Blake, a New Hampshire native from Baldwin Wallace who took a year out following college to play professional baseball.

Even with six quarterbacks coming to camp, the big play seems to be in the hands of either Kapp or Plunkett. The 33 year old Kapp has taken his team from the bottom to the top in both college and the pros. Plunkett also did it at Stanford last year. Now one of them seems the heir apparent to the job of taking the Patriots in that direction in the years ahead.

THE RUNNING BACKS — "We've got a good combination if they're ready," Mazur summed up succinctly. Jim Nance is the second leading all-time rusher in the NFL's American Conference. Carl Garrett was such a sensation two years ago he was named the AFL's Rookie of the Year. Nance and Garrett. Garrett and Nance. Either way they racked up more yardage than any pair of running backs in the league in 1969.

Last year neither Nance or Garrett were with the Pats in training camp. Nance signed his contract late and Garrett was away on Army duty. Both slumped in 1970 as the team's offense took a nosedive for most of the season.

"Both of them should get it back with this training camp," said Mazur, "and both have proven what they can do when they're on. With Jim it's mostly power although if he plays at the right weight, he has fine quickness too. Carl is the explosive type," Mazur continued, "but he can also overpower a lot of defensive people. With the right situation on injuries, conditioning and attitude, it could be a beautiful combination."

Garrett is backed up by last year's top rookie, Odell Lawson, and versatile former Notre Damer Bob Gladieux. Nance has big Eddie Ray, the second year former L.S.U. power back, behind him. "Odell can play at either running back spot and last year showed us something," Mazur added, "while Harpo (Gladieux) has that great heart. Ray is reporting in better shape and at a much better weight than a year ago."

For purposes of additional depth in the ground forces, at least eight free agents will get a look. These will include a highly regarded Baltimore draft choice of two years ago, Roland Moss of Toledo, and a promising small college power runner, Steve Pelot of South Dakota.

THE RECEIVERS — "Finding a couple of consistent performers, one at split end and one at tight end, would fill two of our biggest areas of need," said the Pats' head coach, "and they could either come from our current roster or we could pick someone up."

If lanky Ron Sellers can stay healthy like he did all through his collegiate All-American career, he should be the Patriots' starting flanker. A master at spectacular catches and a starting All-Star in his first pro year, Sellers could raise All-Pro havoc in an effective offense.

The key word for the competition at split end is quantity. There are veterans like Bake Turner, Bill Rademacher and Charlie Frazier. Tommy Richardson and Gayle Knief also return. Neither of the latter has seen much duty, Richardson having been lost a year ago on a waiver technicality and Knief having been acquired from the Vikings as a mid-season free agent. "We liked what we saw of Knief last year," Mazur said, "and Tommy (Richardson) has that good height, speed and hands. We've good experience in our three vets too so the best I can say now is that it's wide open."

The tight end position is thin prior to training camp. Tom Beer has moved to guard. Barry Brown is the only returning veteran. "Three of our draft choices, Dan Schneiss, Dave Hardt and Nick McGarry, and a free agent, Dick Hill, will compete with Barry for a starting job," said Mazur, "and we also might make further moves here." Schneiss and Hardt both played in the recent Coaches All-America Game. McGarry and Hill are both over 6'4".

The four rookies at tight end join at least ten new faces at wide receiver. Among them are Boston College's John Bonistalli, Maceo Coleman, Eric Stolberg and Gary Orcutt. They passed free agent tests at an early rookie camp. Al Sykes is a very fast draft choice. Bob Reed is a once very fast Minnesota Viking who has been away from NFL football for seven years but will try a comeback. A sleeper is former Dallas Cowboy taxi squadder Bob Odom, a late acquisition this summer.

A new candidate entered the picture just before training camp opened when the Pats claimed veteran NFL receiver Paul Flatley from the Atlanta Falcons on waivers.

THE OFFENSIVE LINE — "Our first five men can do the job," Mazur predicted, "but we have to add to our depth. This need was proved last year when several of our starters were lost with injuries. The unit just didn't hold up when changes were made to fill in."

The first five men are All-Star center Jon Morris, guards Len St. Jean and Mike Montler and tackles Tom Neville and Tom Funchess. Just two years ago this unit, starting together for the first time, battled Oakland and New York for their league leadership in pass protection. They also opened enough holes so that Jim Nance and Carl Garrett ended the season as the leading rushing tandem in the AFL. Last year injuries claimed Montler, Neville and Funchess. Perennial All-Star center Morris practiced at guard. As embattled quarterback Joe Kapp described the scene, "it was like the Grand Canyon opening up."

One major change is planned among the now healthy incumbents. Guard Mike Montler, a 6'5", 270 pounder who was an All-American tackle at Colorado, and tackle Tom Funchess, a 6'6", 268 pounder who because of his speed was originally drafted by the Pats as a guard, are slated to switch positions — Montler back to tackle and Funchess inside to guard. The good sized pair, both prime second round draft choices, will have a full training camp to work on the switch.

"The talent is there among our starters," said Mazur, "and if someone new shows he can take over, it has to help. We do need at least a couple of men who can take up the slack if someone gets hurt."

A good tackle prospect was added in early July when the Pats traded for 6'4", 250 pound Mike Haggerty, for the last two seasons a starter for the Pittsburgh Steelers.

A promising new guard could be former tight end Tom Beer. A highly regarded blocker at his former position, the 6'3" Beer is now up to a solid 255 pounds. One of last year's reserves, Gary Bugenhagen, and a late season acquisition, former Buffalo Bill Angelo Loukas, are returning guard prospects.

New faces in the offensive line group will be former Atlanta Falcon Gary Roberts, draft choice Layne McDowell of Iowa and four free agents, center Ken Wilson of Toledo, guards Pierre Marchando of Massachusetts and Dick Swatland of Notre Dame and tackle John Wright of Virginia Union.

THE DEFENSIVE LINE — "This could be our strongest department. If they all stay healthy, we won't take a back seat to anybody when it comes to big rough, tough customers up front," said Mazur in appraisal of his rush line for 1971. "Berger has great size and should keep improving and Ike (Lassiter) is a proven all-star type. We have very high hopes for one of our top rookie prospects, Julius Adams," Mazur continued, "and Twine (Houston Antwine) and Jimmy Hunt have more than held their own in a lot of wars up front. Twine especially should benefit from more support. He has had to do a lot all by himself."

The final status of the front four could be determined by the progress of 6'4", 266 pound rookie defensive tackle Julius Adams. The new strongman from Texas Southern was chosen by the Pats as the first man drafted in this year's second round of the draft. He showed his new coaching staff "a lot of power and raw ability" in the team's May rookie camp.

One of pro football's giants, 6'8", 290 pound Ron Berger will probably man the right defensive end spot he handled well a year ago. He will join another of the game's bigger rush line operatives, 6'5", 270 pound Isaac "Ike" Lassiter, as prime candidates for the outside positions with the front line.

Berger started off last season with a flourish as he was named the NFL's Defensive Player of the Week for his crushing performance in the Pats' regular season's opener. Lassiter, the rugged pass rusher obtained from the Oakland Raiders in a trade last year, proved an immediate boom to the Pats as he helped them set a new team record for dumping the quarterback in his first game in red, white and blue. The problem came later when an injury shelved big Ike for the remainder of the campaign.

Antwine and Hunt, shorter than most other defensive linemen, explode with over a quarter of a ton of power. They share ten years of All-Star selections and have played together longer than any pair of defensive tackles in pro football. They may thrive on the new competition.

"We expect some good competition from some of our other linemen too," said Mazur, "and most of them are new to us." Tackle Rex Mirich and Mel Witt are returning veterans. Two 6'7" heavies are rookie Hank Barton (Portland State) and Larry Jarmon (L.A. City College). They join 6'4", 250 pound Glenn Woods, a former Houston Oiler, as leading free agent prospects.

In addition, when rookie Phil Olsen chose to jump the Patriots in June, big 6'5", 260 pound second year man Dennis Wirgowski moved back from offense to defense. Some say defense fits his temperament better.

"We could come out with some pretty good depth in our rush line," the Pats' head coach concluded.

THE LINEBACKERS — "This area shows as well as any what we're after," Mazur pointed out. "Look at Chey (Jim Cheyunski), a good young middle linebacker with a real mind for the game. Behind him are five guys after his job as starting middle linebacker — six men in all at that particular position. This," he remarked, "is what you need to get better — strong competition, as strong as possible."

Behind Jim Cheyunski in the middle is returning veteran Fred Whittingham. Then there is more size than usual in the person of former defensive tackle Ed Toner, who is down to 240 and has improved his speed. A second year rookie and a first year rookie complete the lineup. Former Notre Dame All-American Bob "Bobo" Olson was injured last year. He had been the Pats' fifth round draft pick in 1970 and will try again this year at 225, over 20 pounds less than last summer. The other rookie is free agent Jerry Murtaugh, a 6'2", 220 pound first team All-American and captain of the number one ranked Nebraska Orange Bowl champs.

Big Ed Philpott and the team's Most Valuable Player, John "Bull" Bramlett, man the outside linebacker posts backed by J. R. Williamson and last year's third round draft choice, Mike "Cat" Ballou, in reserve. Much is expected from this year's fifth round draft choice, Notre Dame defensive captain Tim Kelly. He and Fighting Irish teammate Bob Neidert lead a group of rookies into the outside linebacker competition.

"Ed (Philpott) is strong and can do well against the run," the Pats' mentor added, "and Bull is an all out guy who played all banged up last year. They were parts of a defense that had some pretty good games over the last couple of years." Originally it was thought that Philpott would be moved to the middle and Cheyunski would shift outside. Such is not the case, however, as both try to maintain their positions of last season.

THE DEFENSIVE BACKFIELD—"These boys have also played very well at times. What we'll look for here is more consistency." These were John Mazur's words on the secondary. "They've been under fire the last couple of years," he continued, "especially when our pass rush went from strong to weak as last season went along." The fact was that until the halfway mark of last year's losing campaign, the Pats' pass defense was listed among the Conference leaders.

The corners are Daryl Johnson and Larry Carwell and they've kept in touch during the off-season as co-hosts of a nightly sports talk show on a Boston radio station. "This is just what we'll need around here," Mazur interjected, "plenty of togetherness." The colorful Johnson blanketed some of the league's best receivers last year but admittedly suffered a few letdowns. Carwell is extremely aggressive at his post and has the size to follow through.

The safeties are Don Webb, a ten year veteran who has retained his speed, and Clarence Scott, one of the most underrated members of the regular defense. Scott can also play cornerback.

The backup foursome has been cornerbacks Johnny Outlaw and Randy Beverly plus safeties Art McMahon and Tom Janik. Outlaw is the team's fastest man. Beverly was a starter on the Super Bowl Champion New York Jets just two years ago. Janik combines reserve secondary duty with his job as the team's punter. Mazur sums up McMahon's ability himself: "If we had 40 Art McMahons, we would be winners." McMahon broke his ankle on the day he broke into the starting lineup last November.

Former San Diego Charger safety Dick Farley has joined the Patriots as a free agent. He is a former Boston University star who was thought to be finished with pro football because of a back injury. Draft choices Lewis Swain and Jim Zikmund plus six free agent rookies bring the total to 17 in the defensive backfield competition.

THE KICKING GAME — "This is an area where we will need improvement," Mazur promised, "and it could come from one of our returning people, the holder, the mental approach or from someone new, one of our rookies." The coach's statements applied mostly to field goals, kickoffs and punting, but special teams will also come in for attention.

The Patriots will look at 11 place-kicking candidates, the most in the club's history. All-time AFL scoring record holder Gino Cappelletti and soccer style booter Charlie Gogolak return from last season. Eleven year veteran Cappelletti has won many big games for the Pats over the years. Gogolak, a one-time number one draft choice, was acquired in a trade with Denver last year.

There are a number of interesting competitors, among them an Ivy League soccer scoring champion from Harvard, a man called "Superfoot" and two other Britishers, a former top scorer among NCAA kicking specialists and several other free agents culled from the rookie camp in May.

Solomon Gomoz is the former Harvard soccer captain. He has never played football. Mike Walker was the winner of a "Search for Superfoot" contest run by a Boston radio station throughout the United Kingdom. Sgt. Peter "Tug" Wilson and Albie Evans were runners-up. All came from England and also have never played football. Gerald Warren, formerly with Green Bay and the St. Louis Cardinals, was the nation's top scorer among kickers when at North Carolina State three years ago. The other candidates are free agents Dan Rodgers, Bob Lampe, Donald Warner and Robert Jones.

Veteran punter Tom Janik will be pushed by rookie Dave Hardt and Mike Blake. Second year man Eddie Ray is also a possibility.

The Patriots special teams led the AFL two years ago. Last year they hit that effective level often, but not often enough, as several big breakdowns occurred. "Some of the real hitters get going in this department," said Mazur, "McMahon and Gladieux are tops here, as are Beer, Whittingham and J.R. (Williamson). Rademacher and Tommy Richardson have also been good special teams men," he continued, "and there have been a few others. If we add the depth we want, you'll find many of them out there on the bomb squads."

As Mazur sums it up, "We hope the talent will rise to the top and stay there. Many of our starters are as ready as they have been in a long time but we hope they will all be pushed. By the time we get into our new home, we want to be as ready as possible."

Patriots Draft Review

—Plunkett and Promise

When the Patriots drafted the number one player in the nation, All-American passing sensation and Heisman Award Winner Jim Plunkett of Stanford, they brought together for the first time the most prolific passing combination in NCAA college football history. Last year the highly touted Plunkett set a new all-time NCAA career passing record with 7,544 yards gained through the air. The man who holds a similar record mark for catching passes is the Patriots' top draft choice of 1969, former Florida State All-American Ron Sellers. The Pats' 6'4" flanker racked up 3,598 yards as a varsity receiver at F.S.U., also more than any man in NCAA history. This summer when Johnny Mazur opens his first training camp as Patriots head coach, and when the veteran Joe Kapp also reports to his first training camp as a Boston quarterback, Plunkett and Sellers will blend their talents for the first time on a football field.

In drafting Plunkett as the first choice of the 1971 National Football League draft, the Patriots spurned attractive trade offers from many of the other 25 NFL clubs. They chose in Plunkett one of the most promising pro prospects in college football history—a young man called by many the finest natural pro quarterback candidate since Joe Namath, only healthier, bigger and stronger.

His records and awards, which are still coming in, threaten to span over as long a distance as his successful aerials. "There is no question Jim is a great young prospect," said John Mazur, "obviously other clubs thought so too. We still have Joe Kapp as our number one quarterback and expect that the affect of his experience will bring Jim into our system even that much faster."

The 27th player selected by the pros in the entire draft was the Patriots second round pick, 6'3", 258 pound Julius Adams, a defensive tackle from Texas Southern University. Adams is typical of the many high draft choices coming from small colleges in that he is relatively unknown to the fans but highly regarded by pro scouts. "We have him highly rated as a defensive lineman," said John Mazur, "as a very strong boy who should help us inside gives us youth for a good future up front."

The Pats next draft choice came on the fifth round when they named another defensive player—Notre Dame linebacker and co-captain Tim Kelly—as an outside linebacker candidate. Kelly was partially considered for his ability on pass coverage. He also got to the quarterback seven times during the season on blitzes.

Offensive needs were primary for most of the rest of the way. The tight end position and the offensive line came in for attention first. The fourth man taken, 6'4", 242 pound David Hardt of the University of Kentucky, is a prospect at both tight end and on defense. Hardt (round six) is a native of Attleboro, Mass., a town just down the road from the new Foxboro stadium site, and he was also a punter and defensive lineman at Kentucky. He was a starter in both the North-South Shrine All-Star Game and the recent Coaches All-America Game.

Two Big Ten linemen were also selected as offensive line candidates. They are 6'4", 255 pound Layne McDowell of Iowa (round 10) and 6'3", 250 pound John Rodman of Northwestern (round 12). Both were also chosen to play in the North-South Shrine All-Star Game.

A pair of additional tight end prospects are 6'2", 225 pound Dan "Bull" Schneiss of undefeated Nebraska (round 11) and 6'5", 250 pound Nick McGarry (round 15) of the University of Massachusetts. Schneiss was offensive captain and starting full-back for the nation's number one team. McGarry, a sleeper with outstanding size, was ineligible as a senior due to a scholastic technicality stemming from his entrance as a freshman. This may have caused him to be overlooked in some quarters.

Speed was the key in three of the middle and late rounds. Running back Josh Ashton (round nine) of Tulsa, receiver-defensive back Lewis Swain (round 13) of Alabama A&M and wide receiver Alfred Sykes (round 14) of Florida A&M all have been clocked under 10 seconds in the 100 yard dash. All were also track men at their schools in addition to being football regulars. Swain and Sykes, in addition to their blazing speed, have good height at 6'2", 194 and 6'2", 180 respectively. Swain has been clocked in a consistent 9.4 second 100 yard dash and also did a pair of 4.5 second 40 yard speed trials in pads.

The Pats shifted back to defense with their final two choices, selecting 6'4", 192 pound safety Jim Zikmund of Kearney State (Neb.) and 6'3", 253 pound defensive end Ronald Leigh of Elizabeth City State (N.C.). Zikmund grabbed off 14 interceptions and two fumbles as a senior. Leigh, whose school produced Dallas defensive line star Jethro Pugh, joins early choice Julius Adams as a defensive line hopeful.

WBZ BROADCASTERS

After five successful years as the color analyst of the Patriots broadcasting team, Gilbert A. (Gil) Santos moves into a new role as the play-by-play man for all of the Patriots game action on Radio Station WBZ. Moving in beside him is veteran radio man John Carlson, formerly sports director of WBET in Brockton, Mass. Carlson will handle the color on all the Pats' game broadcasts of 1971.

In conjunction with his new assignment as play-by-play man, Santos has joined the full-time WBZ radio sports team. He was formerly Sports Director for WNBH in New Bedford, Mass. Patriots fans see much of the jovial Santos as he emcees many of the club's off-season and fan club affairs. He, his wife Roberta and children Mark and Kathleen, have just moved into their new home in Raynham, Mass.

Carlson is a rookie with the Pats but has covered the team closely through his sports shows in Brockton. Having played local parks league football himself, John will handle Gil's former slot, providing statistics, notes and insights on the action being described by Santos. The Pats new color man lives in Braintree with his wife Irene and children Kathryn, John and Eric.

This season marks the sixth consecutive season of Patriots game broadcasts for WBZ. Twenty games in all will be beamed throughout New England by the local 50,000 watt station.

WSMW-TV 27

Coverage of New England Patriots Games

For the second consecutive year WSMW-TV, Channel 27 of Worcester, Massachusetts will televise the New England Patriots Pre-season games.

Veteran sportscaster Bob Fouracre, a familiar voice to central New England sports fans for the past nine years, will handle the play-by-play assignment. Fouracre also hosts Sports Line and Bay State Bowling, and he has called Play-By-Play for college sports on Channel 27.

Joining Bob in handling color for the games will be former star Patriots running back Larry Garron. Larry has been active in radio sports previously but will be making his debut on television as an announcer. The former Western Illinois product was with the Pats for eight seasons. He set several team records that still stand and he was an AFL All-Star four times.

HISTORICAL HIGHLIGHTS

November 29 — Franchise awarded to William H. Sullivan, Jr.

December — Nine other equal owners announced, including Joseph E. Sullivan, the late Dan Marr, Paul Sonnabend, the late Edgar Turner, Ed McMann, Dean Boylan, Dom DiMaggio, John Ames, Jr., and the late George Sargent. Mike Holovak becomes first executive hired as Director of Player Personnel.

1960

January—Ed McKeever named General Manager. Public contest held that produced name of Patriots. Red, white and blue chosen as official colors. Lou Saban named Head Coach.

Became first professional sports club to issue public stock. William Kemble elected to represent 1600 non-voting stockholders.

July 4 — Fittingly opened first training camp at University of Massachusetts in Amherst. More than 300 players passed through camp before completion.

July 30 — Defeated Buffalo 28-7 in the first AFL pre-season game ever played. Bob Dee recovered fumble to score first touchdown.

August 14 — Presented first professional sports event ever held in Harvard Stadium, losing preseason charity contest to Dallas Texans.

September 9 — Played league's first regular season game and dropped 13 to 10 decision to Denver at Boston University Field. 21,597 fans welcomed pro football back at Boston after 11-year absence.

November 18 — Drew AFL's first sellout crowd with 27,123 for 24 to 10 loss to Houston.

January — Engineered league's biggest trade to date, acquiring Babe Parilli and Billy Lott from Oakland Raiders in return for Alan Miller, the late Dick Christy and Hal Smith.

October 10 — Mike Holovak replaced Lou Saban as head coach after 2-3 start. Mike introduced shotgun quarterback system, alternating Parilli and Butch Songin each play and had 7-1-1 for rest of season, but Houston went unbeaten to clinch Eastern title by one game. Parilli took over as No. 1 quarterback for last three games. Gino Cappelletti, converted to split end, won first of five scoring titles.

April — George Sargent died suddenly and his share of ownership was taken over by his brother Francis, present Governor of Massachusetts.

A George Sargent Memorial trophy was established to go annually to Patriot player who best exemplified qualities of the deceased owner.

Forrester (Tim) Clark took over interests of John Ames.

Holovak added new staff of Assistant Coaches in Art Spinney, Marion Campbell, and Fred Bruney.

Opened home season with 34 to 21 win over Houston at Harvard Stadium before 32,276 fans, comprising a record Boston crowd up until that time. Nick Buoniconti made first start in this game.

Babe Parilli suffered broken collar-bone in 10th game when Pats were leading Eastern Division by half-game. Ultimately lost title by same margin on final weekend.

Bill Sullivan elected President of AFL for first of two straight terms that were highlighted by signing of new five-year, $36,000,000 Television contract with National Broadcasting Co.

Shifted home field to Fenway Park.

Played home opener at Boston College to complete cycle of appearing at three Greater Boston universities with large enough playing accommodations.

December 28 — Won Eastern Division title with 26 to 8 triumph at Buffalo in AFL's only division playoff in history.

1964

Lost championship game in San Diego, 51-10.

Mike Holovak named General Manager in addition to Head Coach.

Tom Addison elected first president of Players' Association.

Compiled best season's record of all time with 10-3-1 mark, but lost Division title with 24 to 14 defeat by Buffalo in final regular season game before new Boston record crowd of 38,021 in blizzard at Fenway Park.

Gino Cappelletti, who set new scoring record of 155 points that still stands, was named AFL's Most Valuable Player.

Babe Parilli was unanimous selection as All-League quarterback.

1965

Club offices moved from original site at 522 Commonwealth Ave. to 78 Lansdowne St., adjacent to Fenway Park.

Jim Nance is signed out of Syracuse.

Despite first losing season in Holovak regime, Nick Buoniconti sweeps individual honors as unanimous All-league middle linebacker and winner of both Sargent and 1776 Club awards.

1966

Rommie Loudd joins coaching staff as first member of his race to achieve that position in AFL. David H. McConnell and Robert C. Wetenhall of New York joined list of owners after purchasing interests of Dean Boylan and Dom DiMaggio.

June 8 — Merger with National Football League is announced with Bill Sullivan having served on three-man AFL committee that effected marriage.

Led Eastern Division in quest of first Super Bowl until final weekend of season when upset by Jets in New York.

Set new Boston attendance record of 39,350 for 14 to 3 win over Buffalo.

Holovak named Coach-of-the-Year; Jim Nance the AFL's Most Valuable Player; Babe Parilli Comeback-of-the-Year; and Gino Cappelletti won fifth scoring title.

Mrs. George Sargent became first woman director.

Faced NFL opposition for first time by entertaining Baltimore Colts and Washington Redskins in preseason contests at Harvard Stadium.

Mike Holovak given new five-year contract as general manager and head coach.

Rommie Loudd named Director of Player Personnel, another "first" for his race.

Produced another "first" when first five games were played on road.

Fifth game was scheduled "home" opener played in San Diego (second time in year) when Fenway Park was unavailable because of Red Sox in World Series.

Despite 3-10-1 figures, set record for last-place club by placing seven players on East All-Star squad that edged West at Jacksonville, Fla.

1968

Mrs. George Sargent passed owner's interest to son Lee, a decorated Vietnam Marine veteran.

New Directors elected included Phil David Fine, Charles J. Richardson, Bernard Baldwin, and Dan and Bob Marr, sons of the late Colonel Dan Marr.

Ed McMann resigned as director.

Fifth annual Ecumenical Game announced for Labor Day, Sept. 2, at Harvard Stadium with Philadelphia Eagles as opponents.

Announced that scheduled "home" opener with New York Jets will be played Sept. 22 at Birmingham, Alabama because of lack of suitable Boston area site in early season.

1969

A new era began when Clive Rush was hired as Vice President and Head Coach.

George H. Sauer was named the new General Manager.

Training camp opened July 10 at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, a move back to the site of the first camp the Pats ever held.

The Patriots — with a total of only seven wins in two previous seasons — entered the final two weeks of the season with the best second half record of any Eastern Division AFL team.

Carl Garrett was named the AFL's official Rookie of the Year; Jim Nance was selected the AFL's Comeback Player of the Year.

Original Patriots Gino Cappelletti and Jim Hunt complete their tenth straight years with the Pats; Gino played in every game ever played in the AFL.

1970

The Pats had six starters on the Eastern All-Star team in the final AFL All-Star Game and AFL game before the completion of the merger into the NFL.

Foxboro was selected as the site of a new stadium to be constructed as the new home of the Patriots.

The Pats signed top choice Phil Olsen to become the first team in the new AFC to sign all of its 1970 draft choices.

Harvard Stadium announced as site of team's regular season home games for 1970.

Town of Foxboro OKs Pats' new stadium in their town in overwhelming vote.

Quarterback Joe Kapp of the defending NFL champion Minnesota Vikings signs with Pats in exchange for safety John Charles and the club's number one draft choice of 1972.

Chief offensive aide John Mazur takes over as head coach at the midway point of the regular season as Clive Rush steps to the sidelines upon medical advice.

The club eventually ends a hectic year with the poorest record in its 11-year history, a 2-12 final log, but John Mazur is given a full shot at coaching the team by being rehired for the 1971 season.

The Patriots exercise their right to pro football's first draft choice by selecting Heisman Award Winner Jim Plunkett.

Charles Sullivan takes over a spot on the Pats' Board of Directors as Phil Fine steps down to avoid any conflict of interest in his important new post as Executive Head of Stadium Realty Trust.

A new General Manager is chosen in the person of young Upton Bell, the Director of Player Personnel of the World Champion Baltimore Colts.

The Boston Patriots officially change their name to the New England Patriots.

The largest crowd in Patriots history is assured as exactly one year from the date of Foxboro's overwhelming vote to support a new stadium the club's soaring season ticket sales pass the 40,000 mark.

The team moved into its UMass training camp with over 110 prospects, the largest number since the first year in 1960.

PRO FOOTBALL HALL OF FAME

Special to the New England Patriots Press Book

From the very first day it opened its doors in Canton, Ohio, in September, 1963, the Pro Football Hall of Fame has been recognized as a most beautiful and spectacular showplace, plus a fitting honoring place for the greats of a great sport.

Now, as the Pantheon of pro football begins its ninth year, it can point with pride to a genuine "new look" brought about by a $620,000 expansion program that has nearly doubled the size of the original two-building complex.

Made possible by the expansion are several outstanding features including two bright new exhibition areas, a new 250-seat theater, a greatly-expanded research library, a large and modern gift shop and renovated executive offices.

All of the outstanding features of the original Hall of Fame — the Jim Thorpe statue at the entrance, the curving exhibition rotunda that traces the history of pro football, the Professional Football Today display featuring each of the NFL's 26 teams and much more — are still there for the visitor to enjoy.

A highlight of the new exhibition area is the Leagues and Champions room in which the stories of all the leagues of pro football are told in graphic detail. Features of the room include the histories of the National Football League and the American Football League and the Super Bowl area, located appropriately between the stories of the two leagues. As in all areas of the building where updating is dictated, changes are made each year.

Another part of the "new look" of the Pro Football Hall of Fame is the rapidly-increasing attendance. Attendance in 1970 more than doubled the gate of 1968 and indications are that perhaps 175,000 fans will visit the Hall in 1971.

JOHN GILLOOLY MEMORIAL AWARD

Two years ago the Patriots' directors voted by acclamation to establish an annual award in memory of the late John Gillooly, prize winning columnist of the Record-American, who died May 17, 1968.

The award is voted by the sports writers and sportscasters of New England to one of their own members who best exemplifies the qualities written and spoken about John—humor, desire to help the underdog, constructive writing and devotion to all New England teams and personalities.

This year's prize was bestowed upon long-time Boston Record-American cartoonist Bob Coyne. Fittingly, Coyne (below) has served for many years the same paper that the late John Gillooly staffed with such quality.

SALUTE TO PHOTOGRAPHERS

The Patriots' salute with special tribute an often overlooked group of men, without whose talents the nation's newspaper pages and television's news and sports programs would not be the same. These are the Press and Television Photographers of New England. Among them are some of the most talented men of their trade in the entire nation. Awards such as those presented at the Annual Boston Press Photographers Ball every June profess the accomplishment these men achieve with the lenses, equipment, imagination and hustle.

Regulars at the Patriots' games, both on the Photo Roof or on the sidelines, include the men of the Boston A.P. and U.P.I. staffs, Frank O'Brien and Danny Goshtigian of the Globe, Don Young of the Herald-Traveler, Mike Anderson of the Record-American, Fred Keenan of the Patriot-Ledger, Steve Van Meter of the Springfield Union and others.

Then there are the film men of WBZ, WHDH, WNAC and many of the area's other television stations, recording the game action, rushing to have it developed in time to be seen by Patriots fans within hours of the game's completion.

Notes

The Stadium Realty Trust

For a decade, everybody said it couldn't be done. Plan after plan was scuttled. But this year fans of the Patriots will enjoy the fruits of that challenge. Schaefer Stadium, home of the now New England Patriots, is a reality.

The financial creativity of Phil David Fine, Boston lawyer-banker, and the diligence of the other four trustees of Stadium Realty Trust, with the support of the financial community and confidence of 4,000 shareholders, have skillfully shaped the planning, design and construction of the new stadium in Foxboro.

With ground broken last October, the trustees have directed a magnificent team of architects, engineers and builder to complete the construction of such a vast complex in so short a time. In addition to Mr. Fine, other trustees are David W. Donahue, secretary; Rexford A. Bristol; Joseph P. Healey; and Robert H. Watts.

The stadium, designed by David M. Berg, Inc., structural engineers, with Finch-Heery of Atlanta, Ga., consulting architects, was constructed by J. F. White Contracting Co.

A special note of thanks is made to the Town of Foxboro officials and the Foxboro community for their cooperation and enthusiasm which helped keep the valuable asset of the New England Patriots here so that you can enjoy exciting professional football.

This Schaefer Stadium, unlike other stadiums in the country, is privately built. And in the interest of football fans, it is specifically designed for football action.
