BROOKLYN CYCLONES CLASS 'A' AFFILIATE OF THE NY METS

May 18, 2021

Cyclones Fans,

It's about time! For the first time in more than 600 days – welcome back! It's been a long time in the making – and at some points I'm sure we all felt like we'd never get here – but we made it. We made it through the remote learning for our kids, we made it through all the Zoom meetings and temperature checks. Now it's time to remember what "normal" feels like.

That's where we come in. For 20 years we have been a place for families, friends, neighbors, co-workers, people you sort of like in small doses but don't want to sit down and have a whole meal with – EVERYONE – to come together and enjoy some ocean air, ooooh and ahhhhh at the fireworks, share some laughs, do the Cha Cha Slide, act like we are giving away gold bars when we throw t-shirts, and oh yeah...watch some baseball too. This is what normal can feel like. Grab a hot dog and an ice-cold beverage. Sit back in your chair, ROOT ROOT ROOT for the home team, boo the umpires when you think one of our guys was safe, wipe the mustard off your face with your sleeve when you forgot to get napkins (we won't tell). Do it all. After the year that we've all been through, we deserve it.

So, while some things have stayed the same – we are still "The Most Fun Ballpark in America" – there are some new things happening. Most obvious is the name for our ballpark. We are incredibly proud to have partnered with Maimonides Medical Center to make Maimonides Park the new home of the Brooklyn Cyclones. Maimonides has been an integral part of the Brooklyn community for more than a century as they celebrate its 110th anniversary this year. It has been the place where thousands of Brooklyn residents have been born, and the place where thousands more have received life-giving care through one of their specialty units. And of course, most recently it is the place where hundreds of front-line workers fought tirelessly in the battle against COVID-19, saving the lives of countless Brooklynites. It is our honor to now have these heroic men and women as part of the Cyclones family.

There are also some other changes that you might have noticed...like we're playing baseball in May. This year marks the Cyclones first as the High-A affiliate of the New York Mets. What does that mean? Well first, it means more games. This year we will play 120 contests instead of 76, which was the norm from 2001 to 2019. It also means that the players on the field are just two steps away from making the big leagues. That means a higher quality of play on the field, and some of these guys on the field could realistically be in the major leagues as soon as next year.

Let's see. Did I miss anything? New name to the ballpark. New league for the team. Celebrating our championship club of 2019 and the countless frontline heroes who helped keep our city and borough running during a global pandemic. Rooting for the home team. Yep, I think that's just about everything. Welcome back everyone. We missed you.

A WHOLE NEW BALLGAME

BY KEITH RAAD

Welcome to High-A baseball, Brooklyn.

Coney Island has woken up from its sleep, turned on the neon lights, unleashed the roller coasters, and powdered the funnel cakes after a summer of silence. And while the same nostalgia brings us back to the boardwalk, as it has since the 19th century, the Cyclones have revamped and rebuilt their roster as a full season team.

Since the ballpark has seen fans last, the Cyclones are now members of High-A baseball. It's a full season squad with major implications on the future of the New York Mets. At this level, likened to sophomore year of high school if graduation meant big league time at Citi Field, young prospects will experience the best baseball they have seen since becoming professionals. More importantly, the borough of Brooklyn will see the best and the brightest ballplayers since the Brooklyn Dodgers.

In the “old days,” the New York-Penn League’s Short Season affiliation marked a welcome party for Mets draft picks, sometimes selected just days before Opening Day. Over a 76-game season, the newest professionals from college would get their legs under them, play in front of more fans than they sometimes ever experienced, and started to play the game for money. However, these new days represent a type of puberty for prospects. At High-A, players will dig into their strengths over 120 games and are no longer “just be happy to be here.”

Infield prospect and third baseman Brett Baty stands as a perfect example of the type of transformation that presents itself to this borough in 2021. Baty, a member of the 2019 New York Penn League Championship team, earned his call-up to Brooklyn just weeks after being selected as the 12th-overall pick of the Mets. Soaking in the bright lights of New York City, Baty’s job was to simply get a feel for life as a pro. Flash forward to today, that now-21 year old kid embarks on his first full season, 120 games, to show the New York Mets for real this time how he deserves that whopping signing bonus. He’s no longer “just happy to be here.”

Now, Baty, and the rest of the crew that returns from the 2019 team, must prove they deserve to be here. The pressure is on. The pressure from the other High-A professionals in the league thinking they're better than you, and the pressure from the guy on the bench or the level below trying to steal your spot in the lineup.

It's dog-eat-dog and Brooklyn could not be more ready for that kind of energy. As COVID-19 winds down and the world opens up, the hunger for life and getting back to reality stimulates within all of us the desire to approach life with a fervor unlike before. Every night the Cyclones will put the future of the Mets on the field. On that same night, the Yankees will do the same, or the Phillies will do the same, or the Nationals will do the same.

The league comes stock with National League East foes on a minor league level. Yes, the Staten Island Yankees are no longer a rival, but the Yankees of tomorrow have move to Hudson Valley today. The Philadelphia Phillies affiliate sits in Jersey Shore with the Blue Claws, and the Washington Nationals play as Wilmington Blue Rocks. The rivals all over are about to begin. Tough battles and great memories will be forged in Brooklyn only to be made larger in a few years at the Major League level.

Many Brooklyn Cyclones from 2001-2019 have made the big leagues. These new High-A Brooklyn Cyclones can be expected to produce more big leaguers at a much more fervent pace. These Cyclones are just steps away from the Majors.

So sit back and enjoy the show. After all, it is a summer night in Coney Island.

PUZZLE PIECE PLAYHOUSE

Prior to the start of the 2019 season, the Brooklyn Cyclones, in conjunction with Curemark, LLC, introduced a first-of-its-kind partnership called The Puzzle Piece Playhouse – a sensory safe space, designed specifically to accommodate children with Autism Spectrum Disorder, as well as their families.

The space, which is offered free of charge, is located in a newly renovated and redesigned Luxury Suite. The Puzzle Piece Playhouse is fully equipped with sensory toys, games, and tools, provided by Fun & Function, to make their experience feel like home.

The suite typically accommodates up to 12 people, but capacity will be reduced for the 2021 season based on health and safety guidelines.
