MEET THE STAFF

BRIAN MEYER MANAGER

Meyer was named the manager of the Fort Myers Mighty Mussels on Tuesday, April 20, 2021. A native of Cincinnati, Meyer joined the Twins organization in 2020 after 13 years in the college ranks. Meyer was a three-year starter at second base for Otterbein College (D-3) from 2000-2003. He earned both his bachelor's degree and Masters from Otterbein in 2005 and 2009, respectively.

The 38-year-old began his coaching career at Otterbein in 2007, spending three years as the team's hitting coach and recruiting coordinator. After helping his alma mater reach the Division III NCAA Tournament, Meyer ascended to the Division I level as an assistant coach at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio. Meyer helped the Raiders win back-to-back Horizon League titles and coached in the 2011 NCAA Tournament.

Brian moved to New Orleans in 2012, spending five years as the Director of Operations for Tulane University. Once again, Meyer found himself in the NCAA Tournament. After transitioning the Green Wave from Conference USA to the American Athletic Conference, the Green Wave reached back-to-back NCAA Tournaments in 2015 and 2016, going a combined 76-46.

In 2017, Meyer returned to the Midwest. From 2017-2019, he served as an assistant coach at Butler University in Indianapolis before being hired by the Twins. In all, Meyer has tutored 42 All-Conference selections, 17 MLB draft picks and three All-Americans.

Brian and his wife Ashley now reside in Cape Coral with their son, Walker.

COACH BIOS

PETER LARSON

PITCHING COACH

Larson will team up with Carlos Hernandez to monitor the Mighty Mussels' pitchers in 2021. A native of Williamsburg, Virginia, Larson enters his third season with the Twins organization after spending 2019 as the minor league rehab pitching coach. He was slated to coach the pitchers with Low-A Cedar Rapids in 2020 before the COVID shutdown.

The 34-year-old pitched at Ferrum College in Virginia, winning a pair of conference championships before graduating in 2009 with a Bachelor's in Business Management. The left-hander played independent professional baseball in 2011 before testing the coaching waters.

Larson got his coaching start at the high school level, leading the pitchers at Jamestown High School (Va.) and the Collegiate School in Richmond. From there, Larson spent one year at four different collegiate programs from 2015-2018. In 2015, Larson was the pitching coach for King University in Bristol, Tennessee - while doubling as the Madison Mallards' pitching coach in the Northwoods summer league.

From there, he quickly reached the Division I level at Siena College in 2016 before moving on to the University of Albany in 2017. Larson wrapped up his college tenure at Fordham University in New York City. While with the Rams, his pitching staff shattered the school record for strikeouts (536) in a season while posting the most wins (35) in more than a decade.

CARLOS HERNANDEZ

PITCHING COACH

Hernandez joins Larson as the Mussels' pitching coaches for the 2021 season. Hernandez was set to lead the Mussels' pitchers at the High-A level in 2020 before coronavirus wiped out the campaign.

The Guacara, Venezuela native began his Twins tenure in 2018, leading the pitchers on Twins' Dominican Summer League team. In 2019, he arrived in Fort Myers as the pitching coach of the Gulf Coast League Twins.

The 41-year-old enjoyed an extensive playing career. Hernandez spent 11 years in affiliated ball, including four seasons in the Major Leagues with the Houston Astros from 2001-2004. His best season came in 2002, going 7-5 with a 4.38 ERA while finishing third on the team in innings (111) and starts (21). Hernandez teamed up with Roy Oswalt and Billy Wagner to help

Houston finish with a winning record that season. Hernandez received run support from Craig Biggio, Jeff Bagwell, Lance Berkman and Brad Ausmus.

Carlos and his wife, Yobaisy, have a son, Carlos and a daughter, Mariagracia.

DEREK SHOMAN

HITTING COACH

Shomon makes his debut in affiliated ball this season after holding various positions in the Frontier independent league since 2012. Beginning as a bullpen catcher for the Schaumburg Boomers in 2012, he ascended to bench coach just two years later. After a two-year stint with the Lake Erie Crushers from 2016-17, he returned to Schaumburg as the bench coach.

Shomon played Division II baseball for the University of Illinois-Springfield, where he led the Prairie Stars in home runs in 2013. The 31-year-old co-owns an indoor baseball training facility called Athletes HQ. Located in Elgin, Illinois, the facility uses advanced technology to help train players.

The Lake Forest, Illinois native now lives in Hampshire.

RAYDEN SIERRA

ASSISTANT HITTING COACH

Sierra joins the Twins' organization after serving as the hitting and outfield coach for Florida SouthWestern State College in Fort Myers. Prior to his time in Southwest Florida, Sierra coached at Volunteer State Community College in Gallatin, Tennessee.

Prior to coaching, Sierra played for Broward College and Cumberland University before playing professionally.

Sierra was born and raised in Andres Boca Chica, Dominican Republic and currently resides in Fort Myers with his wife, Melanie.

"JUST EXCITED TO GET BACK TO IT"

HOW THE MUSSELS KEPT DEVELOPING IN A VIRUS WORLD

by John Vittas

The Mighty Mussels players haven't played in an official game in 20 months. Some of them have never played under the lights in their entire professional career. When they take the field at Hammond Stadium on May 11, it'll bring over a year of COVID struggles to an end – restoring their baseball journey back to normalcy.

"The last time I pitched under the lights was the high school playoffs," Fort Myers starting pitcher Regi Grace Jr. said. "This is going to be different but something everyone has been working towards."

"I don't even know what the emotions are going to be like," right-hander Sean Mooney said. "Once I get out there, it's definitely going to hit me. I'm super pumped up."

While 2021 has already proven to be much closer to normal, 2020 was anything but. Players returned home in late March and had to find their own places to train and new teammates to work with.

Grace Jr. teamed up with David Parkinson, a Triple-A pitcher in the Philadelphia Phillies system who was staying in a neighboring town in Mississippi.

"He was really helping me work on my mechanics so I can maximize my body," said Grace Jr. "We were really helping each other out as well as the kids around that area."

Most of the workouts took place at local parks and whatever gym the players could find.

"It was nothing fancy, no technology whatsoever," Regi said. "I knew a strength coach down there and we were working on mobility and explosion. I'm a bigger guy so I have to be able to move quick and get the ball down the hill."

Mussels infielder Keoni Cavaco returned home to California to be with his family while mimicking a spring training schedule – working out in the mornings and having the rest of the day to relax.

"It was the first time I didn't play baseball in the summer since I was like five," Cavaco said. "It was different to be staying home and only practicing, so it was a big change."

The Twins' coaches and player development officials did their best to stay in touch and provide a regular workout schedule from afar.

"We had calls with players for player plans, check-ins and to see what kind of resources they had available," Fort Myers manager Brian Meyer said. "Some of them were in-depth, some of them were just 'Hey, how you doing? Anything we can help with?' There were specific guys that we needed to do some virtual coaching with them. They would send video, we'd sit there and analyze the video and give them our viewpoints on it."

Meyer and Twins' coaches were pleasantly surprised to see how much progress could be made strictly through virtual meetings. The organization communicated regularly over zoom and assigned coaches to specific players.

"I had a group of hitters and infielders that I checked in with," Meyer said. "We kind of split that up across the organization. There were days where I would go in my home office and I'd be in there for a normal 8-5 work day. It was all virtual. It was challenging, but it was also enlightening to see that these are things we can do from a distance for offseason to come."

As the year progressed and the fall arrived, the Twins' invited groups of players back to the Fort Myers complex for instructional league and mini camps.

Once the Twins' Major League team left the facility at the end of March, the minor leaguers filled in and got back to work.

"It's almost like we never left," Grace Jr. said.

"Once you get into professional baseball, these guys are who you spend that portion of your life with. Getting back here in spring training was refreshing to see everybody."

All of the players in Minor League Baseball are following health and safety guidelines laid out by MLB – much like protocols enacted during the 2020 Major League season. As players and staff get vaccinated, rules may relax. But for now, masks are still required and teams will socially distance in the clubhouse and across extra buses on the road.

"They just want us to make sure we're safe, wearing our mask and just following everything they're telling us so we can stay on the field and play the whole year," Cavaco said.

Grace Jr. admitted that the rules can make things difficult, but that it should have no effect on the results.

"As far as affecting us on the field, if a mask is affecting you on the field – then you're not really locked in to what you're supposed to be doing," he said. "Personally, I try not to let that bother me because I'm here to do my job."

The Twins' will use Grace Jr. and his fellow pitchers in a piggyback role to start the season, meaning that two pitchers will combine to throw all nine innings, with a limit of about 75 pitches each.

"We are very mindful of the workload and not trying to tax anyone, especially in the first month," Mussels pitching coach Peter Larson said. "It's going to be critical because the adrenaline is going to be high. Missed year, they haven't pitched in front of fans. There's a lot of factors that come into play that we're going to try to take into account."

Larson expects pitchers like Grace Jr. to get experience both starting games and coming in in relief. But regardless of when he enters the game, Regi will get the chance to pitch at least 4-5 innings per outing.

"If you look at some of the guys who have progressed through the system – the Dobnak's, the Smeltzer's – they started and came out of the 'pen," Larson said. "Definitely expect to see a mixture of that."

But no matter how players are being used and what protocols they have to follow, they couldn't be more thrilled to be back out in front of a crowd doing what they love.

"It's been exciting," Cavaco said. "It kind of felt different when we first got here. We're just excited to get back to it."

"It kind of felt different when we first got here.
We're just excited to get back to it."

It all started right here.

It seems like just yesterday. You were in the backyard playing baseball with your dad, dreaming about the big game. Now, here you are. You've made the team. You're taking the field. And, we're here to cheer you on.

PETE LARSON

One thing that's come up coming off the missed year is workload volume management. That's the most important thing – that we don't blow these guys out. If you've seen our roster, we have a lot of starters. We're going to look to piggyback starters in the early months and maybe the whole season. If you look at some of the guys who have progressed through the system – the Dobnak's, the Smeltzer's – they started and came out of the pen. Definitely expect to see a mixture of that.

We are very mindful of the workload and not trying to tax anyone, especially in the first month. It's going to be critical because the adrenaline is going to be high. Missed year, they haven't pitched in front of fans. Night games is going to be a factor for a lot of these guys, since they haven't done it. There's a lot of factors that come into play that we're going to try to take into account.

It's going to be different, but I think it's for the long term benefit of these guys.

GETTING CANDID ABOUT COVID

Keoni Cavaco

I was kind of treating it like I was here, getting my work in in the morning and then just chilling with the family at home trying to stay safe from COVID. I was staying on my hitting, working out, throwing – same old, same old.

It's been exciting. It kind of felt weird and different when we first got here. Just excited to get back to it.

They just want us to make sure we're safe, wearing our mask and just following everything they're telling us so we can stay on the field and play the whole year.

REGI GRACE JR.

It's definitely something new. It's definitely something that no one here really wants to do, but we realize what's going on in the world so we are taking extra precaution.

As far as affecting us on the field, if a mask is affecting you on the field – then you're not really locked in to what you're supposed to be doing. Personally, I try not to let that bother me because I'm here to do my job.

It's almost like we never left. Once you get into professional baseball, these guys are who you spend that portion of your life with. Getting back here in spring training was refreshing to see everybody. Everyone is loose, it's just a really chill vibe. With the talent on this team, I think we can muster something good out of it.

I'm a grinder. I realized that that was the time that I could maybe catch up. Get a leg up on some people that maybe hadn't been working. In general, just work on my craft so I could come back as not the same "high school kid" that they had taken the year before.

I was working in Lowell Mississippi – nothing fancy, no technology whatsoever. I knew a strength coach down there and we were working on mobility and explosion. I'm a bigger guy so I have to be able to move quick and get the ball down the hill.

Working with David Parkinson

He was really helping me work on my mechanics so I can maximize my body. We were really helping each other out as well as the kids around that area.

At the end of the day, it's baseball. It's 60 feet, six inches – 90 foot basepaths all around the world. It was just about seeing the guys that you're going to be around the rest of the year. Everyone was checking up on each other, see how you're doing. Having scheduled wake up times, places to be – that was the new part.

We're going to dice. There's no doubt that every guy we send out there is going to do his job. We want to win it. One through nine in the lineup and everyone that toes the rubber is looking to compete.

Straightened out fastball has helped changeup, more depth

BRIAN MEYER

It was a lot of parenting. I have 2.5 year old friend. That was one of the blessings of COVID, having the ability to be able to watch him grow up for an whole year. A lot of time playing the back yard, baseball, golf, walks.

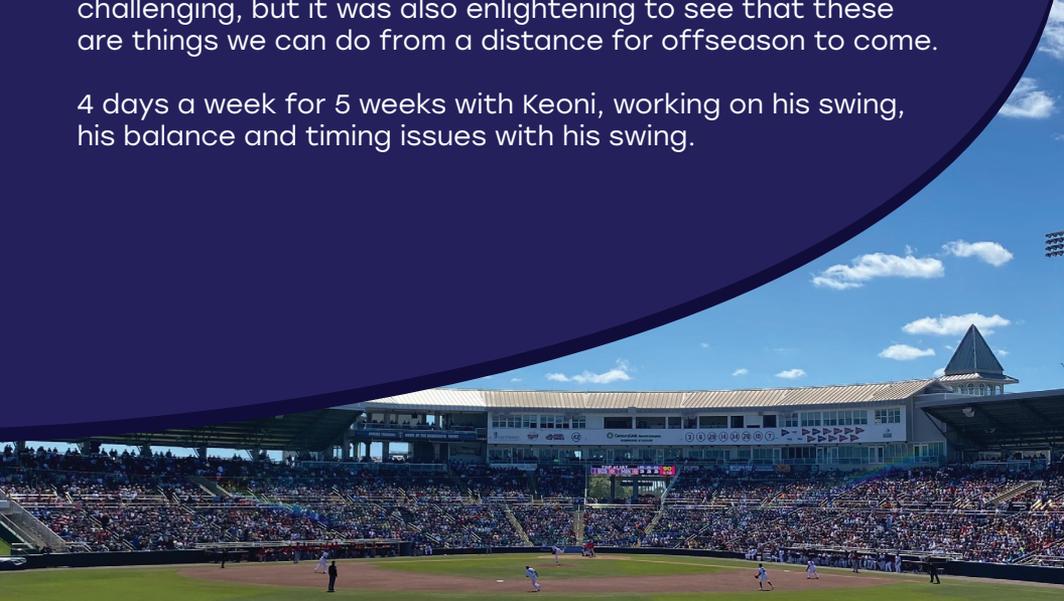

From a baseball standpoint, it was zoom calls, catching up with players and connecting with our staff. We had calls with players for player plans, check-ins and to see what kind of resources they had available and see what we could do from a distance to help them continue their journey.

I had a group of hitters and infielders that I checked in with. We kind of split that up across the organization. Once October hit, we treated it like a regular offseason.

Some of them were in depth, some of them were just 'Hey, how you doin? Anything we can help with?' There were specific guys that we needed to do some virtual coaching with them. They would send video, we'd sit there and analyze the video with them and give them our viewpoints on it.

There were days where I would go in my home office and I'd be in there for a normal 8-5 work day. It was all virtual. It was challenging, but it was also enlightening to see that these are things we can do from a distance for offseason to come.

4 days a week for 5 weeks with Keoni, working on his swing, his balance and timing issues with his swing.

Commitment, Community & Tradition

A "Coach" leads by example, guides and teaches his team the importance of commitment to each other as they work together for the "big win".

Our "Coach", Sam Bailey, born and raised on Sanibel, was an integral part of our island community. His beloved "Sanibel" has many wonders for young and old alike. Days filled with activities from boating, fishing, shelling, sightseeing, bird watching and water sports, to a lazy day at the beach. You can shop a wide array of local shops and have a leisurely lunch or dinner in our one of a kind restaurants. Whatever your favorite past-time, you will find plenty to do throughout the Islands.

"Coach" was a visionary. His goal to bring the Island communities together for a common purpose blossomed into Islands Night. With the help of local businesses and individuals alike, Islands Night has become a long standing tradition for our island communities. In 2004, Islands Night was renamed "Sam Bailey's Islands Night" in honor of our Coach.
