Notes

BREAKERS STALLED BY MAGICJACK

The Breakers lost, 2-0, last Saturday night to magicJack at home, off two goals from Abby Wambach. The U.S. Women's National team forward scored off a header in the 44th minute from Megan Rapinoe and a header in the 54th minute off a corner kick from Sarah Huffman. In front of 7,188 (Boston's second largest crowd in its WPS history), the Breakers came out and possessed the ball well in the early going, but magicJack's backline prevented a few solid opportunities for the Breakers. When the Breakers did get in on goal, their shots were just a foot or two off the mark. In the 5th minute, Meghan Klingenberg fed O'Hara in the box, but O'Hara's shot went wide. Three minutes later, Japanese international Aya Sameshima hit a ball from the top left corner of the box, but her shot was just off target.

SCOUTING SKY BLUE FC

Sky Blue is coming off a crushing loss to the Philadelphia Independence. In last Sunday's match, Philadelphia's Lianne Sanderson scored in stoppage time to give the Independence a 2-1 victory. This is the fourth meeting between the Breakers and Sky Blue FC this season. Boston went 0-1-1 in New Jersey and won, 1-0, in the team's only meeting this season at Harvard Stadium. In that May 1st game, Rachel Buehler scored the game-winner in the 53rd minute.

PLAYOFF PICTURE

It's simple for the Breakers. Win and they're in. With Sky Blue's last-minute loss to the Philadelphia Independence last Sunday, that gave the Breakers a chance to compete for the fourth and final playoff spot. A Sky Blue win or draw last Sunday would've ended Boston's hopes. A Boston win Sunday against Sky Blue will pull the Breakers level in the WPS standings with Sky Blue. Both teams will have matching 5-9-4 records and 19 points, but Boston wins the first tiebreaker (head-to-head).

FIVE BREAKERS NOMINATED FOR WPS AWARDS

The nominees for the 2011 WPS Year-End Awards were announced last week by Women's Professional Soccer, and five Breakers were on the roster. Both Keelin Winters and Meghan Klingenberg are in the Rookie of the Year category, Alyssa Naeher is up for Coast Guard Keeper of the Year, Tony DiCicco is amongst six candidates vying for Coach of the Year, and Kasey Moore has been nominated for Citi Sportswoman of the Year. Fans can vote through Sunday, Aug. 14, for all categories except for Sportswoman of the Year. That award is voted on by WPS players and head coaches. Winters and Klingenberg have had phenomenal seasons in WPS. Winters, Boston's No. 1 selection (sixth overall) in the 2011 WPS Draft has played the most minutes and has the most starts out of any WPS rookie. The University of Portland star is second on Boston in goals scored (three). University of North Carolina grad Klingenberg was the No. 4 overall selection in the WPS Draft, picked by magicJack. The South Florida based team then traded Klingenberg to Boston in June. She currently has two goals and two assists, all coming with the Breakers. Naeher leads all WPS keepers in saves (92), is tied for second in the league with four shutouts, and ranks second in the league with a 1.41 goals against average. DiCicco, who won the 1999 Women's World Cup and 2008 U-20 Women's World Cup, is in this third season with the Breakers. He is up against the league's five other coaches: James Galanis (Atlanta Beat), Aaran Lines (WNY Flash), Paul Riley (Philadelphia Independence), Jim Gabarra (Sky Blue FC), and Abby Wambach (magicJack). Moore, who is in her third year with the Breakers, exemplifies pure inspiration to both her teammates and Breakers fans. Moore joins an elite group of nominees for the Citi Sportswoman of the Year award, including Lori Chalupny (Atlanta), McCall Zerboni (WNY), Lydia Vandenbergh (magicJack), Kendall Fletcher (Sky Blue FC), and Nikki Krzysik (Philadelphia).
