MONUMENTAL SPORTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Monumental Sports & Entertainment owns and operates three professional sports teams: the NBA's Washington Wizards, NHL's Washington Capitals and WNBA's Washington Mystics. Monumental, which merged Lincoln Holdings and Washington Sports and Entertainment on June 10, 2010, also owns and operates Verizon Center, the premier sports and entertainment venue in Washington, D.C. Additionally, the group controls the local Ticketmaster franchise, Kettler Capitals Iceplex, the Capitals' state-of-the-art training facility in Arlington, Va., and George Mason University's Patriot Center, located in Fairfax, Va.

Monumental Sports & Entertainment operates in the nation's fifth-biggest media market and is one of the largest integrated sports and entertainment companies in the country with one of the most diverse partnership groups in all of sports.

Ted Leonsis is known as one of the country's premiere businessmen having held numerous leadership positions at AOL. He is also a professional sports team owner, a film producer, a private-angel investor, an active Board member and a committed philanthropist.

During his 14-year career with AOL, the company enjoyed its greatest periods of growth and financial success. Leonsis now serves as vice chairman emeritus, having stepped down from day-to-day management at AOL on Dec. 31, 2006. He has served as AOL vice chairman as well as president of several business units, including the AOL Services Company, AOL Studios, AOL Web Services, AOL Core Service and the AOL Audience Business.

Leonsis is now the chairman of Revolution Money, an innovative new Web 2.0 payment platform and credit-card service created to transform the financial services industry by drastically altering the economics through Internet-based technology. This new payment platform also generates significant merchant and consumer benefits. Revolution Money, formerly GratisCard Inc., is a subsidiary of Revolution LLC, the investment company created by Steve Case.

In addition to Lincoln Holdings LLC, Leonsis has investments in a large group of web-related companies, including Algentis LLC, Beacon Capital Strategies LLC, Clearspring Technologies, Geneva Acquisition Corp., Mahalo, Mobile Posse, Object Video and Qloud. Leonsis serves on the board of several of these companies as well as PodShow.

Leonsis has recently become involved in filmmaking through conceptualizing and producing "Nanking," a documentary film that made its world premiere at the 2007 Sundance Film Festival where it won the Documentary Editing Award. Since that time, the film has been screened at film festivals around the globe, including the Hong Kong Film Festival, where it won the Humanitarian Award, and is already the best-selling documentary in China's history.

Dick Patrick, Vice Chairman and Chief Operating Officer, President, Washington Capitals

Dick Patrick, along with Ted Leonsis, is one of the original partners in the group that became Monumental Sports & Entertainment. A mainstay for the Washington Capitals' franchise for more than two decades, the owner, president and alternate governor continues to lead the club with his tireless effort and intense desire to continue a family tradition – engraving the Patrick name onto the Stanley Cup.

Patrick, who joined the Capitals prior to the 1982-83 season, guides the team on a daily basis. The former chairman of the NHL Finance Committee, Patrick has been instrumental in the Capitals' long-term success as a franchise both on and off the ice. Patrick was a leader in the conception and development of the Kettler Capitals Iceplex, the team's state-of-the-art training center and office building that opened in 2006 in Arlington, Va.

Raul Fernandez, Vice Chairman

Raul Fernandez is the chairman of ObjectVideo, a private technology company that develops video analytics software for automated security surveillance. He is also a special advisor to General Atlantic Partners, a growth equity firm with over $17 billion under management. Fernandez founded Proxicom, an internet services company he started in 1991 with $40,000 in savings. After taking Proxicom public in 1999 and growing his business to more than $200 million in revenue, he sold it to Dimension Data in 2001. Fernandez also serves on the board of Liz Claiborne; TROW, a Toronto-based engineering and consulting firm; ValueOptions, the nation's largest independent behavioral healthcare company and Network Solutions, the leader in web-based domain name and related services.

Fernandez, a native Washingtonian, is an active philanthropist in D.C. regional non-profits, focusing his energy primarily on educational reform. In 2000, he co-founded Venture Philanthropy Partners, a philanthropic investment organization based in Washington, D.C. Fernandez sits on various non-profit boards, including America's Promise, the D.C. College Access Program (DCCAP), the D.C. Public Education Fund and the Fernandez Foundation. He holds a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Maryland.

Sheila C. Johnson, Vice Chairman, President and Managing Partner, Washington Mystics

Sheila C. Johnson, a successful entrepreneur and impassioned philanthropist, is CEO of Salamander Hospitality, LLC, overseeing a growing portfolio of luxury properties including The Woodlands Resort & Inn in Summerville, S.C., Innisbrook Resort & Golf Club in Innisbrook, Fla., and Salamander Resort & Spa in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Middleburg, Va., which is poised to become one of the most unique retreats in the world when it opens in early 2011. Johnson is president and managing partner of the WNBA's Washington Mystics. She has long been a powerful influence in the entertainment industry as a founding partner of Black Entertainment Television (BET) and most recently as a film producer. Her film A Powerful Noise premiered at the 2008 Tribeca Film Festival in New York. On March 5, 2009 A Powerful Noise premiered in more than 450 theatres throughout the country to celebrate International Women's Day.

In 2006 Johnson was named global ambassador for CARE, a leading humanitarian organization fighting global poverty by empowering women because they have the unique power to help entire communities escape poverty. "Sheila's I Am Powerful Challenge" was instrumental in helping raise funds for CARE's important work. Johnson is also a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. An avid supporter of the arts and an accomplished violinist, Johnson dedicates her time to organizations that create opportunities for children to express and explore their creativity. She serves as chair of the Board of Governors of Parsons The New School for Design in New York and sits on the boards of VHI's Save the Music Foundation, Americans for the Arts, the Jackie Robinson Foundation, and the University of Illinois Foundation.

Jack Davies was the founder and president of AOL International and now serves on the board of directors of Scholastic, the global children's publishing and media company. Prior to joining AOL in 1993, Davies was managing director of Citicorp's London-based consumer mortgage business after serving as vice president, Europe, for RCA Records. He began his career at General Electric where he held numerous senior consumer marketing positions. Davies earned an MBA in Marketing (1973) and a BA in Political Science (1972) from the University of Rochester.

Active in philanthropy in the D.C. area, Davies serves on a number of boards including the Board and Executive Committee of Venture Philanthropy Partners. In addition he is on the board of See Forever Foundation, CharityWorks and The Washington Scholarship Fund.

Richard D. Fairbank is founder, chairman and chief executive officer of Capital One Financial Corporation, a broadly diversified financial services company ranked 130th on the Fortune 500. Mr. Fairbank founded Capital One in 1988 based on his belief that the power of information, technology and testing could be harnessed to bring highly customized financial products directly to consumers. Headquartered in McLean, Va., Capital One is the seventh-largest bank in the United States, offering a broad spectrum of financial products and services to consumers, small businesses and commercial clients. With the company's newly acquired subsidiary, Chevy Chase Bank, F.S.B., Capital One has approximately 1,000 branch locations in New York, New Jersey, Louisiana, Texas, Maryland, Virginia, and the District of Columbia. Additionally, Capital One has international businesses in the United Kingdom and Canada.

Capital One has been widely recognized for its entrepreneurial culture, progressive work place, and community engagement. Recently, Capital One has been named to: Fortune's "100 Best Companies to Work For," Fortune's "20 Great Employers for

MONUMENTAL SPORTS & ENTERTAINMENT

New Grads," BusinessWeek's "Best Places to Launch a Career," Working Mother's "100 Best Companies" and DiversityInc's "Top 50 Companies for Diversity." Capital One also was named to Fortune Magazine's list of "Top Companies for Leaders," ranking second in North America and fifth globally. Under Fairbank's leadership, Capital One has demonstrated a strong commitment to philanthropy and volunteerism, supporting a number of area programs focused on community redevelopment and youth education, including DC Cares, the DC College Access Program and Junior Achievement. Fairbank has been recognized for his community and industry leadership, including his 2008 appointment to the President's Council on Service and Civic Participation. He also was honored as a 2008 Washington Business Hall of Fame Laureate and was named "2006 Banker of the Year" by the American Banker. Fairbank holds an MBA from the Stanford Graduate School of Business and a bachelor's degree in economics from Stanford University.

Inc., which built many local industrial and commercial facilities, schools in Prince George's, Montgomery and Frederick counties, the first wing to Frederick Memorial Hospital and Coblenz Memorial Hall at Hood College in Frederick, Md. Cohen served admirably as a captain in the U.S. Army's 90th Infantry Corps of Engineers in World War II and was presented with a Purple Heart, a Silver Star and a Bronze Star. After serving his country, he earned a bachelor of science degree in architectural engineering from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in 1946.

Cohen, a native of Frederick, Md., served on the Hood College Board of Trustees from 1983-1995 and was named trustee emeritus upon his retirement. He was recognized with an honorary doctorate of humane letters in 2006. In 2009 Cohen and his late wife, Etta, were inducted into the Hood College Hall of Fame for their dedicated commitment to Hood College athletics.

TED LEONSIS

Chairman & Majority Owner

Ted Leonsis is known as one of the country's premier businessmen and a pioneer in the Internet industry, holding numerous leadership positions at AOL in his 15-year tenure, including vice chairman and president. He is founder and chairman of Web 2.0 start-up SnagFilms; chairman and investor in Clearspring Technologies and Revolution Money, a company that he recently sold to American Express; a film producer; a private-angel investor; an active board member; and a committed philanthropist.

Leonsis recently founded and launched SnagFilms, a Web 2.0 company that brings the best nonfiction films to a global web audience. He is also the chairman of Clearspring Technologies, the leading provider of cross-platform social network and syndication services; as well as Revolution Money, an innovative new Web 2.0 payment platform.

Leonsis is the founder, chairman and majority owner of Monumental Sports & Entertainment, which owns the Washington Capitals, the WNBA's Washington Mystics, the NBA's Washington Wizards and Verizon Center. Monumental also controls the Baltimore-Washington Ticketmaster franchise; Kettler Capitals Iceplex, the Capitals' state-of-the-art Arlington, Va., training facility; and George Mason University's Patriot Center. Leonsis led a group that originally purchased the Capitals and a minority share of the Wizards and Verizon Center in 1999. The group purchased the Mystics in 2005 and the other entities in 2010.

In addition to Monumental, Leonsis has investments and/or sits on the board of directors for several companies: Algentis LLC; Beacon Capital Strategies LLC; GridPoint; Triporati; Mahalo.com; MediaBank; Groupon.com; MobilePosse; ObjectVideo; SB Nation; TidalTV; and Zedge. Leonsis is also on the board of directors of Georgetown University, his alma mater, and is listed as one of the institution's most distinguished alumni by numerous publications.

Leonsis is a film producer having conceptualized and produced "Nanking," a documentary film that tells the story of the Japanese invasion of Nanking, China, in the early days of World War II. "Nanking" made its world premiere at the 2007 Sundance Film Festival, where it was awarded the Documentary Editing Award, and was released by THINKFilm in December 2007. The film won a Peabody Award and was nominated for three Emmy Awards, winning the Emmy for Best Historical Programming in 2009. The film aired on HBO and is available on DVD.

While at the 2007 Sundance Film Festival, Leonsis coined the phrase "filmanthropy" to describe a new category of filmmaking that sheds light on important issues around the world and activates discussion as well as new volunteers and new funds to benefit a social cause. Leonsis is also the producer of "Kicking It," another example of filmanthropy, which debuted at the 2008 Sundance Film Festival. "Kicking It" aired on ESPN and Netflix. His third film, "A Fighting Chance," will debut in late 2010.

Leonsis recently published a book, "The Business of Happiness: 6 Secrets to Extraordinary Success in Work and Life," which examines what actually makes people happy. Business and financial success doesn't necessarily yield happiness, he writes, but happiness certainly can lead to professional and personal success. The book examines the six tenets to happiness, shares relevant anecdotes that readers can apply not only at work but also in their everyday personal lives. Everyone wants to be happy and successful at what they do, and Leonsis' book provides the roadmap to achieving that happiness.

Leonsis is a committed philanthropist and is very involved with numerous charities, including Best Buddies, See Forever Foundation, Venture Philanthropy Partners, YouthAIDS and others through the work of the Leonsis Foundation.

Early in his career Leonsis was the founder of several new media companies, including Redgate Communications Corporation, a pioneering new media company that in 1993 was the first company acquired by AOL. He was also the founder of six personalcomputer magazines, authored four books and worked on the introduction of the IBM PC and the Apple Macintosh. He co-invented a very successful board game called "Only in New York" and served as a marketing executive with Harris Corp and Wang Laboratories.

He once served as mayor of Orchid, Fla. Among his many honors, Leonsis has been named Washington's Businessman of the Year, a Washingtonian of the Year, one of the 20 most influential people in sports, one of America's most creative executives and a top 10 entrepreneur of the year. Leonsis blogs daily at TedsTake.com. Originally from Brooklyn, N.Y., and later, Lowell, Mass., he now lives in McLean, Va., with his wife and two children.

SHEILA C. JOHNSON

Mystics President & Managing Partner

Sheila C. Johnson is a successful entrepreneur and impassioned philanthropist.

As a partner in Lincoln Holdings, Ms. Johnson is the only African-American woman to have ownership in three professional sports teams, the WNBA's Washington Mystics, the NBA's Washington Wizards and the NHL's Washington Capitals. Ms. Johnson is President and Managing Partner of the Mystics.

As CEO of Salamander Hospitality, a company she founded in 2005, Ms. Johnson oversees a growing portfolio of luxury properties. Woodlands Inn, in Summerville, SC, is one of only a handful of properties in North America to receive the prestigious Forbes Five Star and AAA Five Diamond ratings for both lodging and dining. In 2008, Travel + Leisure selected Woodlands as the #1 hotel for service in North America and #3 in the world (it was the only US hotel ranked in the Top 10). In 2007, Ms. Johnson acquired Innisbrook, a Salamander Golf & Spa Resort. Set on 900 acres, this 72-hole resort in Innisbrook, FL hosts the annual PGA TOUR's Transitions Championship and the LPGA Legends Tour Open Championship. The company is also building the much-anticipated Salamander Resort & Spa, located in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Middleburg, VA.

Ms. Johnson is a partner in ProJet Aviation, a comprehensive aviation service company specializing in aviation consulting, aircraft acquisitions, management, and charter services based in Winchester, VA. She is also a partner in Mistral, the makers of fine bath, body and home products.

Ms. Johnson has long been a powerful influence in the entertainment industry as a founding partner of Black Entertainment Television (BET) and most recently as a film producer. In partnership with other investors, her first film, Kicking It, premiered at the 2008 Sundance Film Festival in Park City, UT. She executive produced her second film, A Powerful Noise, which premiered at the 2008 Tribeca Film Festival in New York, and her third film, She Is The Matador. Her latest film, The Other City, about the HIV/AIDS crisis in Washington DC, will premiere at the Tribeca Film Festival in April 2010.

In 2006 Ms. Johnson was named global ambassador for CARE, a leading humanitarian organization fighting global poverty by empowering women because they have the unique power to help entire communities escape poverty. "Sheila's I Am Powerful Challenge" was instrumental in helping raise funds for CARE's important work. Ms. Johnson is also a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

A fervent supporter of the arts and education, Ms. Johnson was recently appointed by Barack Obama to the President's Committee on the Arts and the Humanities and serves as Chair of the Board of Governors of Parsons The New School for Design in New York. She sits on the boards of Americans for the Arts, the Jackie Robinson Foundation, the Tiger Woods Foundation, the University of Virginia Curry School of Education, Howard University and the University of Illinois Foundation.

An accomplished violinist, Ms. Johnson received a Bachelor of Arts in music from the University of Illinois, as well as honorary degrees from numerous other institutions. Ms. Johnson lives in Middleburg, VA, is married to the Honorable William T. Newman, Jr. and has two children.

GREG BIBB

Chief Operating Officer

Greg Bibb is entering his first season as the Executive Vice President of Business Operations for the Washington Wizards and recently completed his third season at the helm of the Washington Mystics as the team's Chief Operating Officer. Bibb's new responsibilities with the Wizards include overseeing all business functions for the organization including communications, community relations, game operations, new media and the camps/clinics program.

Under Bibb's leadership, the Mystics have experienced a tremendous amount of business growth. In his three seasons with the Mystics, the team's ticket revenue and attendance have experienced tremendous growth. The Mystics increased its corporate partners while the organization's brand continues to expand and the team's reach broadens across the greater Washington, D.C. marketplace. The organization's hard work and improvement were recently recognized by the DC Chamber of Commerce, which tabbed the Mystics as the region's 2009 Emerging Business of the Year.

A 12-year veteran of the sports industry, Bibb joined the Mystics with experience in all facets of sports management, including ticket sales, corporate sponsorship and branding. Prior to his arrival in Washington, Bibb spent two years as the President of Hantz Group Sports & Entertainment where he was instrumental in the launch of the Detroit Ignition of the Major Indoor Soccer League (MISL). He has also served as the Executive Vice President and General Manager of the Philadelphia KiXX soccer team. Prior to joining the KiXX, Bibb was the Director of Public and Media Relations with MISL.

A native of Hershey, PA, Bibb is an avid runner. He currently sits on the board of the Greater Washington Sports Alliance as well as Most Valuable Kids, an organization dedicated to providing sports and entertainment experiences for underprivileged and underserved children. Bibb also serves as an adjunct professor at Georgetown University. Bibb graduated Magna Cum Laude from Marist College in 1996. Bibb and his wife Tara currently reside in Arlington and are proud parents to daughter Adelyn Grace, 3 and infant son Caden.

ANGELA TAYLOR

General Manager

Angela Taylor is completing her second season as the Vice-President and General Manager of the Washington Mystics. Under her leadership, the Mystics won 20+ games for the first time in franchise history in addition to winning the Eastern Conference regular season. Taylor brings over 15 years of player personnel experience to the Mystics. Prior to joining the Mystics, she served as the Vice-President of Business Operations for two years with the Minnesota Lynx. In her position with the Lynx, Taylor oversaw all business operations, including ticket sales, marketing, fan relations, public relations, community relations, interactive services, and corporate sponsorships. She was responsible for creating initiatives to build community awareness, marketing the Lynx brand in the Twin Cities area, and enhancing ticket sales and strategic alliances.

Prior to joining the Minnesota Lynx & Timberwolves, Taylor spent more than nine years with the WNBA League Office based in New York City, most recently as Senior Director, Player Personnel. While at the League Office, she was primarily responsible for all player-related matters and issues including collegiate & international player evaluation, player marketing, and player programs. Taylor joined the staff at the WNBA League office in June 1997 as Coordinator, Player Personnel was promoted to Manager in October 1999, Senior Manager in 2002, Director in 2004, and Senior Director in 2005.

Prior to joining the WNBA League Office staff, Taylor was an assistant coach for the women's basketball teams at Stanford University, Texas A&M University, and the University of Arizona. A four-year varsity letter winner at Stanford University, Taylor helped guide the Stanford women's basketball team to two NCAA national championships (1990 & 1992), three NCAA Final Fours (1990-92), and one Sweet Sixteen appearance (1993). Additionally, as an assistant coach at Stanford, Taylor's Stanford teams went to back-to-back Final Fours in 1996 and 1997. While an assistant coach at Stanford, she had the opportunity to work with 1996 Olympic Gold Medal winning head coach Tara VanDerveer.

In 2006, Taylor co-founded The CHANCE Foundation, an organization whose mission is to Create Hope and Access for our Nation's Children through Education. The CHANCE Foundation helps provide at-risk youth with the support, guidance, tools and resources needed to navigate the college application process. She is also the founder of Networks Sports Consulting. Taylor's community and philanthropic activities include serving on the board of Ronnie Lott's All-Stars Helping Kids Foundation, the Stanford Athletic Department as well as the Stanford Buck/Cardinal Club.

A native of Mountain Home, Idaho, Taylor graduated from Stanford University in 1993 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Economics and earned her MBA (with an emphasis on Marketing and Management) at New York University's Stern School of Business in May 2002.

JULIE PLANK Head Coach

Julie Plank is completing her second season as the Head Coach of the Washington Mystics. Under Plank's leadership, the Mystics recorded its first 20+ wins season and made back to back playoff appearances for the first time in franchise history. Plank joined the Mystics following a season with the Minnesota Lynx, coaching Olympian Seimone Augustus and 2008 Sixth Player/Woman of the Year, Candice Wiggins. Prior to joining the Lynx coaching staff, Plank spent eight years with the Indiana Fever as an assistant coach and director of scouting. There she helped lead the team to four playoff appearances including the 2005 and 2007 Eastern Conference Finals.

Plank served as an assistant coach for the U.S. Women's National Team from 1999 through the 2000 Olympic Games in Sydney, Australia and helped lead the U.S. to gold medal victories in the 1999 U.S. Olympic Cup and the 2000 Olympics.

Plank began her coaching career in 1984 at Capital University in Ohio. She spent two years as an assistant coach, helping Capital to a 39-8 record (.809). Overall, she has helped three different NCAA women's basketball programs to a 343-104 record (.767)

Plank's coaching career includes spending 10 years (1986-95) alongside Tara VanDerveer at Stanford University where she assisted the Cardinal to eight consecutive NCAA Tournaments (1988-1995), four Final Four appearances (1990-92, 1995) and two NCAA championships (1990, 1992). Plank also served as the lead assistant coach at Vanderbilt University from 1997-99 and oversaw the school's recruiting and scouting efforts. In 1998, she was ranked the fifth-best NCAA Division I assistant coach in the nation by Women's Basketball Journal.

A native of Columbus, Ohio, Plank attended Ohio State University where she was a three-year starter at point guard and helped lead the Buckeyes to a 23-5 record and the University's first Big Ten Conference women's basketball title in 1983. Plank attended Bishop Hartley High School and led her team to two Ohio state high school championships. In February 2001, the school retired her No. 13 jersey in honor of her accomplishments.

MARIANNE STANLEY Assistant Coach

Marianne Stanley returns for a second stint with the Washington Mystics. Stanley coached the team as an assistant in 2001 and head coach in 2002 and 2003. She brings a wealth of experience to the Mystics. Stanley has over 20 years of coaching experience at the collegiate level with stops at Stanford, University of California-Berkeley and University of Southern California. In 2007, she assisted C. Vivian Stringer during Rutgers University's run to the NCAA Championship game. Stanley is also very familiar with the WNBA. In addition to her stop in Washington, she has also been an assistant coach with the Los Angeles Sparks and the New York Liberty.

Stanley has earned numerous accolades throughout her career. She was named the Pac-10 Conference Coach of the Year in 1993, the Sun Belt Conference Coach of the Year in 1984 and 1985, and an All-American selection as a player in 1975 and 1976 at Immaculata College. In 2002, she was voted the WNBA Coach of the Year. That same year she was also inducted in the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame. She finished her second season as an assistant coach with the reigning Russian League and Russian Cup Champions UMMC Ekaterinberg which features WNBA players Cappie Pondexter, Deanna Nolan, Ann Wauters, Sandrine Gruda, and Candace Parker.

Off the court, Stanley has been an active member in the community, lending a hand to groups such as Hoops for Africa, the YMCA, Hope House Foundation and National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Stanley's daughter and son-in-law, Michelle and Jonathan Worden, live in Long Beach, Calif., with their children, Madelyn, Jonathan, Jr. and Dylan.

2010 TEAM NOTES

History in the Making:

The Mystics won 22 games for the first time in franchise history. The Mystics are one of four teams that won 20+ games this season and clinched the number one seed in the Eastern Conference where they will face the fourth-ranked Atlanta Dream. The Mystics previous record was 18 wins which was set during the 2006 season. Their 19th win was collected in an 80-71 win over the Seattle Storm on August 15 at the Verizon Center and their 20th over the San Antonio Silver Stars on August 17. Their 21st win was collected in their last regular season home game against the New York Liberty on August 20 in front of a crowd of 13,109 Mystics fans. The Mystics ended their regular season on a six game winning streak with their last win coming on the road against the Atlanta Dream on August 22. The Mystics ended the season 22-12, with an impressive .647 winning percentage.

Compare and Contrast:

Two of the Mystics best seasons prior to this year came in 2002 and 2006. In 2002, the Mystics advanced to the Eastern Conference Finals and eventually lost the series to the New York Liberty 1-2. The Mystics went 17-15 in the regular season and averaged 66.7 points per game while shooting .422 percent from the field. In 2006, the Mystics made it to the playoffs again and lost in the first round to the Connecticut Sun. The Mystics went 18-16 in the regular season and averaged a record high 80.8 points per game, and a franchise high .460 from the field. This year, the Mystics are averaging their second best, 76.9 points per game, and shooting their third best, .451 from the field. Washington is also averaging their second best, .775 from the free throw line this season.

From MIP to Potential MVP:

Mystics forward Crystal Langhorne has stepped up big in guard Alana Beard's absence, leading her team to the playoffs for the second consecutive season. The 2009 Most Improved Player already surpasses her season averages from last year which consisted of 12.0 points per game and 7.9 rebounds per game. Through 33 games this season, Langhorne is first on her team and 10th in the league in scoring (16.3 ppg) and first on the team and fifth in the league in rebounds per game (9.7 rpg). Langhorne is third in the league in total rebounds (330), and has posted 15 double-doubles this season, four were consecutive. Langhorne ranks second in the league in minutes per game (34.1) and in total minutes played (1,158). In the Mystics win over the Phoenix Mercury on June 27, forward Crystal Langhorne posted a new career high 31 points. In just her third season, Langhorne reached her 1,000th career point in a win over the Atlanta Dream on August 3. Langhorne was named Eastern Conference Player of the Month for the month of June and also was named Player of the Week for games played the week of June 21 where she averaged 27.7 ppg, 12.3 rpg, 2.7 spg and shot 69% from the field.

Most Improved Player 2010?

In nine games this season, Mystics forward Monique Currie has scored 20+ points. In the first two games, Currie led the team in scoring with 21 and 27 points. In their loss against the Seattle Storm on May 25, Currie led all scorers once again with 24 points. In the last two games, Currie posted 22 points in the Mystics win over the Chicago Sky on June 11 and scored 20 points in the win over the New York Liberty on June 12. In the Mystics loss against the San Antonio Silver Stars on July 29, Currie led all scorers with 22 points, shooting 6-for-9 from the field, 2-for-2 from three point range, and a perfect 8-for-8 from the free throw line. In the Mystics loss against the New York Liberty on August 6, Currie led her team with 23 points, shooting 7-for-14 from the field and 9-for-10 from the free throw line. In the Mystics win over the Seattle Storm on August 15, Currie once again led all scorers with 25 points, shooting 7-for-13 from the field, 6-for-6 from the free throw line, and hit a career high five three-pointers in seven attempts. In their most recent win over the Atlanta Dream on August 22, Currie led all scorers with 20 points, shooting 6-for-10 from the field and a perfect 8-for-8 from the free throw line. Her current scoring average is 14.1 points per game. This is the highest scoring average Currie has had in her four-year career.

Head of the Class:

At the beginning of the season, many people counted the Mystics out due to an ankle injury that had star player Alana Beard sideline for the season. Plank, however, was able to succeed with a 10-player active roster and lead her team to potentially finishing the regular season in first place in the Eastern Conference. The Mystics are currently in first place in the East with one game remaining in the regular season. Under the guidance of Plank, the Mystics are having one of their best seasons in their franchise history. The team is 22-12 (.647) which marks a new record for totals wins in one season. This is also the first time the Mystics have reached 20+ wins and have reached the playoffs in back-to-back seasons.

Playoff Bound:

With the Mystics 80-71 win over the top-ranked Seattle Storm on August 15, the Mystics clinched the final spot in the Eastern Conference, making it to the playoffs in back-to-back seasons for the first time in franchise history. The Mystics previous playoff appearances came in the 2000, 2002, 2004, 2006, and 2009 seasons.

Home Cooking:

The Mystics went 13-4 at home this season (8-3 against Eastern Conference teams, 5-1 against Western Conference teams).

Perfect 10:

Mystics forward Monique Currie has shot perfect from the free throw line in 15 games so far this season. In the Mystics win over the Atlanta Dream on August 22, Currie shot a perfect 8-for-8 from the free throw line. Currie shot perfect from the line in four consecutive games played June 25 through July 1. Currie ranks 8th in the league in free throw shooting (150-for-171, .877).

Season Highs:

In their most recent win over the Atlanta Dream on August 22, the Mystics posted a season high 29 points in the second quarter and 54 total points in the first half. The Mystics also set a new season record for total rebounds in a game, pulling down 48 in their win over the Dream. The Mystics current record for most rebounds is 51 boards which came in a double overtime win over the Sacramento Monarchs on June 25, 2002. Also, in their win over the Dream, the Mystics dished out a season high 25 assists, with guard Lindsey Harding leading the pack with eight assists, and reserve forward Marissa Coleman setting a career high with five assists. In the Mystics win over the Minnesota Lynx on August 13, the team posted a new season high in defensive rebounds (37). The Mystics also held the Lynx to six fourth quarter points and 18 total points in the second half. In their win over the Connecticut Sun on August 10, the Mystics outscored the Sun 33-16 in the third quarter, setting a new season high for total points scored in the third quarter. In the Mystics win over the Phoenix Mercury on June 27, the Mystics scored a season high with 28 points coming in the first quarter. Against the Chicago Sky on June 11, the Mystics shot a season-high .617 percent from the field and .643 percent from three-point range.

Big Timers:

Mystics forward Crystal Langhorne finished second in the league in minutes per game (34.1) and second in total minutes with 1,158. Last season, Langhorne averaged 29.8 minutes per game and earned her spot in the starting lineup after 12 games of coming off the bench. Guard Lindsey Harding finished in sixth place averaging 33.2 minutes per game and third in total minutes with 1,130.

First Fan:

President Barack Obama attended the Washington Mystics' 87-62 win against the Tulsa Shock on Sunday, August 1. President Obama is believed to be the first sitting U.S. president to attend a WNBA game.

Career High Performance:

Mystics guard Lindsey Harding scored a career high 33 points in the Mystics win over the Indiana Fever on July 30. Harding shot 11-for-18 from the field, 2-for-3 from three point range, and a perfect 9-for-9 from the free throw line.

Double the Fun:

Mystics second-year forward Marissa Coleman posted her first career double-double in the Mystics recent win over the Tulsa Shock on August 1. Coleman scored a season high 14 points and tied her season and career high in rebounds grabbing 10 boards.

Mystics Milestones:

Forward Crystal Langhorne surpassed her 1,000th career point after scoring 15 points in the Mystics win over the top-ranked Atlanta Dream on August 3. Center Chasity Melvin surpassed 500 career assists after dishing out three assists in the Mystics win over the Indiana Fever on July 30. Guard Lindsey Harding surpassed her 1,000th career point after scoring 24 points in the Mystics win over the Phoenix Mercury on June 27. Guard Katie Smith dished out her 1,000th career assist after a season-high six assists in the win over the Mercury on June 27. Center Chasity Melvin surpassed the 10,000th minute of her 11-year career in a win over the Los Angeles Sparks on June 24. Forward Nakia Sanford surpassed her 1,500th career point after scoring 11 points in the Mystics overtime win over the Chicago Sky on June 19. Melvin reached her 2,000th career rebound after pulling down two rebounds in the Mystics win over the Sky on June 11. Melvin ranks ninth in all-time history with 2,118 total rebounds. Currie reached her 1,500th career point after scoring 18 points in the

2010 TEAM NOTES

Mystics win over the Connecticut Sun on May 30. Smith surpassed 5,500 career points after scoring 15 points against the Sparks on May 28.

All-Star Addition:

In the off-season, the Mystics added 11-year WNBA veteran guard Katie Smith to their roster. Smith is a three-time Olympian and two-time WNBA Champion. She is the most prolific scorer in American women's basketball history, scoring a total of 6,879 points (WNBA and ABL). She is also the third all-time leading scorer in the WNBA with 5,446 points in her career. In a career that spans over a decade, Smith averages include 15.7 points per game, 3.1 rebounds per game and 2.8 assists per game.

Player of the Month Honors:

Mystics forward Crystal Langhorne was named the league's Eastern Conference Player of the Month presented by Kia Motors for her standout performances throughout the month of June. This is the first season that the league has presented this award. Langhorne posted four consecutive double-doubles and had four games of 20+ points, leading the Mystics to a 6-2 record for the month of June. Langhorne also posted two career-high performances. Against the Los Angeles Sparks on June 24, Langhorne scored a career-high 27 points along with a career high five steals and 14 rebounds. Three days later against the defending champion Phoenix Mercury, Langhorne posted a new career high 31 points along with 10 rebounds. Langhorne was previously named Player of the Week for games played the week of June 21 against the Chicago Sky, Los Angeles Sparks and the Phoenix Mercury, the first of her professional career.

Record Highs:

The Washington Mystics posted a new franchise record in points scored in a single game when they defeated the defending champion Phoenix Mercury 107-104 at the US Airways Center on July 1. The Mystics also scored a record-high 65 points in the second half. Previously, the Mystics all-time high stood at 106 points in a single game which came in a win over the Mercury on June 20, 2007. The Mystics previous high for points in the second half was 63 against the Utah Starzz on July 19, 1998.

All-Star Status:

Three Washington Mystics players received All-Star honors in this year's "WNBA vs. USA Basketball: The Stars at the Sun." Crystal Langhorne led the list of reserves while Lindsey Harding and Monique Currie were added following injuries to the Atlanta Dream's Sancho Lyttle and Seattle Storm's Lauren Jackson. This marked the first time three Mystics players were named All-Stars. All three Mystics players were also in the starting lineup. Harding posted team highs in rebounds (7) and assists (4) in the 99-72 loss to USA Basketball.

Breast Health Awareness:

The Washington Mystics, in partnership with corporate partner Sibley Memorial Hospital, held its third annual auction benefiting the Sullivan Center for breast health on August 1 following the team's 87-62 victory over the Tulsa Shock. This year's auction raised over $68,000 shattering last year's proceeds of $39,000.

Breaking the Spell:

The Washington Mystics defeated the Eastern Conference defending champions, Indiana Fever for the first time in seven tries on May 15. The last time the Mystics defeated the Fever was on July 8, 2008 with a 50-48 victory. Last Saturday against the Fever, a Blue Devil and a Terrapin led the way for the Mystics. Monique Currie and Crystal Langhorne, integral members of this heated rivalry, scored 21 and 19 points respectively while together grabbing 15 of the team's 35 rebounds.

Plank's Progress:

For two consecutive seasons, Mystics head coach Julie Plank has led the Mystics to 3-0 starts. The last time the Mystics began with a winning streak was in 2002 when the team started out 7-1 and eventually made it to the Eastern Conference Finals. After her rookie season as head coach, Plank has been a tremendous addition to the Mystics organization. Including the playoffs, Plank posted a 16-20 season with a .444 winning percentage last season. This ranked her fourth among Mystics head coaches. Plank is behind Michael Adams (18-20, .473 winning percentage), Richie Adubato (35-40, .466 winning percentage, including playoffs) and Wayne "Tree" Rollins (24-28, .461 winning percentage). Plank turned the Mystics around from a 10-24 record the season before and led them to the playoffs for the first time since 2006.

Washington Mystics win WNBA's Eastern Conference

By Katie Carrera

ATLANTA - As the visitors poured pressure and points on the Atlanta Dream on Sunday afternoon, one thing was glaringly apparent. These were not the Washington Mystics everyone had grown accustomed to over the first 12 years of franchise history.

The mediocrity and lack of optimism that were so commonplace in previous seasons have been replaced by swagger and an expectation of success that were on display as Washington didn't squander an opportunity to prove how far it has come.

With an unrelenting focus, the Mystics established an early lead that grew to 24 points and hovered around that mark for nearly half of the contest as they handled Atlanta easily, 90-81, on the last day of the WNBA's regular season to clinch the first Eastern Conference regular season title in organization history.

The victory gave Washington its sixth straight win, the No. 1 seed heading into the postseason and home court advantage through at least the first two rounds of the playoffs. The Mystics (22-12) will face the fourth-seeded Dream (19-15) in the first round, a best-of-three series that begins Wednesday at Verizon Center.

"We all just wanted that number one seed without having to depend on other teams for it," said forward Crystal Langhorne, who tallied 18 points and 11 rebounds for her 16th double-double. "We had our little slumps earlier this year, but this is the best time for us to be playing really well, the end of the season. We're all happy about this, but we want to win the championship. And why not? Why can't we win it? That's our goal."

Washington's win negated any impact by the outcome of games played by fellow playoff-bound East opponents. New York (22-12), earned the second seed after defeating Connecticut, 88-87, in overtime. It held the tiebreak against Indiana.

Although Washington and New York are in a two-way tie with overall records, the Mystics hold the top spot because of a better head-to-head record. Atlanta could not improve upon its fourth-place ranking regardless of the outcome Sunday.

The Mystics took about five minutes to settle in for the high-stakes contest, starting with a 4-for-14 shooting performance in front of the 9,570 in Philips Arena, but their determination to control their own fate quickly showed.

A 13-2 run that stretched from the first quarter into the second allowed Washington to establish a 30-16 lead that was a sign of things to come.

Fueled by a dominant inside game - Washington outscored Atlanta in the paint 46-30 - the Mystics expanded the lead and capitalized on 10 turnovers in the first half.

Conversely, Washington, which entered the contest with the second-highest turnover average (17.38) in the league and has long struggled to quell its own miscues, committed only four turnovers and took a 54-37 lead into halftime.

"We took care of the ball and that's the key for us," said Coach Julie Plank, who has led the team to back-to-back postseason appearances for the first time in franchise history in her two years at the helm. "We're a really good shooting percentage team, so we have to limit those turnovers to get more chances, especially when we're not shooting well at the beginning. Our rebounding was huge too, we came in knowing it couldn't just be Langhorne. We needed a group effort on this one and we got it."

Anchored by towering Erika De Souza (6-foot-5, 190 pounds) and Sancho Lyttle (6-4, 175), Atlanta has consistently been one of the top rebounding teams in the league. But Washington allowed only Lyttle (11 rebounds) to haul in more than five boards. Meanwhile, Langhorne and Chasity Melvin led the Mystics with 11 and 9 rebounds, respectively, but every player on the roster added at least one to make sure Washington won the rebounds, 48-36.

"I think we can rebound with them, they're so big but we're a good rebounding team too," Langhorne said. "When we're able to battle on the boards with them and slow their transition game down at the same time, we've been successful."

It wasn't until the fourth quarter that the Mystics' lead reached its most inflated at a 24-point edge, but the Dream fought to shrink the deficit to single digits in those final 10 minutes. Atlanta finally started to haul in the rebounds that are so crucial to jump-start its offensive style of play and tallied 30 points.

For a team that prides itself on defense, allowing an opponent such a big surge didn't sit well with the Mystics and had a temporary dampening effect on their victory.

But it also reminded Washington of how it must maintain the focus that helped it dominate the majority of the contest when the playoffs begin.

"You almost hate when you have a big lead like that early and keep it for so long," said Melvin, who last appeared in the playoffs during her first stint with the Mystics in 2006. "Early on it showed how focused we were, but it's hard to maintain that focus throughout. They're going to be ready Wednesday and we know that we've got to be equally prepared to protect that home court we wanted so much."

Much at stake when Washington Mystics play New York Liberty on Friday

By Katie Carrera
Washington Post Staff Writer
Friday, August 20, 2010; 12:15 AM

Nakia Sanford can safely say that in her seven previous years with the Washington Mystics she's never played with the opportunity the team possesses in the final weekend of this WNBA regular season. Rather than scraping and fighting for the slimmest hope of making the playoffs, Washington sits in a position of power.

At 20-12, the Mystics have already guaranteed that this is the most successful regular season in the franchise's 13-year history. They've clinched a berth in the postseason, where they will appear in consecutive years for the first time, and now they're competing to be one of the top two seeds and gain home-court advantage in the first round.

"It's so nice to not be fighting just for fourth place," said Sanford, who is the longest-tenured Mystic. "The pressure really is off in the sense that we can think about reaching goals rather than fighting to just make it in. We don't have to win these games, we want to win home-court advantage."

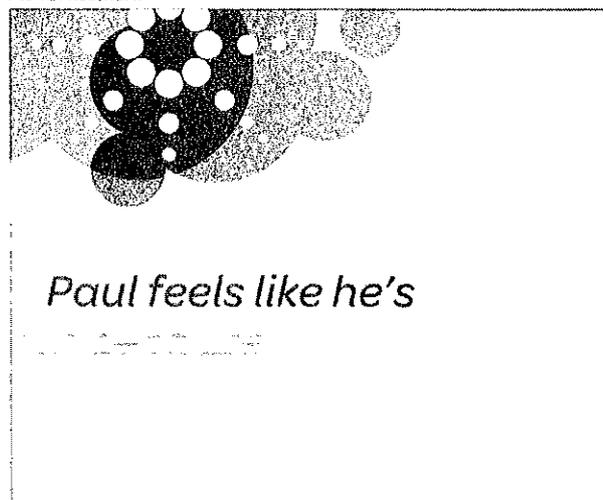

Whether the Mystics get the chance to play two playoff games at Verizon Center, where they are 12-4 this season and have consistently played with moxie, in the best-of-three first round series hinges on the result of their final two regular season contests against fellow playoff-bound Eastern Conference teams New York and Atlanta.

If Washington defeats both the Liberty (21-11 after Thursday's 95-85 win over Tulsa) and Dream (19-14) it is guaranteed to finish as at least the second seed in the East with home-court advantage. While the Mystics and New York could still close the regular season with identical 22-12 records, a Washington victory Friday night would give the Mystics the first tiebreaker over New York with a better head-to-head record. The season series between the two teams stands at 2-2 heading into the game.

Should the Mystics lose to New York, they would need to beat Atlanta on Sunday and also have Indiana (21-11) lose its two remaining contests to leapfrog into the second spot by virtue of tiebreakers against the Dream and Fever to gain home court.

"We've talked about it and really, we don't have to worry about what other teams do. And now it's exciting to know that we control our own destiny," Mystics Coach Julie Plank said. "We're all excited to have the opportunity to still possibly win the East or get a top seed. Playing at home with so much at stake [Friday] is great for us, it's going to be a huge game and we know New York has been playing very well."

Advertisement

Winners of 10 straight, the Liberty has been the hottest team in the WNBA since the all-star break. New York defeated the Mystics twice (75-67 on July 15 and 85-77 on Aug. 6) as it fought its way from last place in the Eastern Conference standings to a playoff berth and is challenging for the conference crown.

For its most recent win, New York, which has one game against Connecticut left after facing the Mystics, thrashed Indiana in an impressive 78-57 win on Tuesday that prevented the Fever from clinching the top seed.

Led by MVP candidate Cappie Pondexter, who is averaging more than 21 points per game, the Liberty has discovered the cohesion it lacked early in the season.

"It just seems like they figured how to play together," Washington point guard Lindsey Harding said. "They're playing Cappie's aggressive style now, sometimes it takes a while for a team to gel like that, but they are now. The key against them is to do a great job defending Cappie and make her take tough shots. Even so, she's going to get hers, so we have to make sure no one else on their team gets hot at the same time."

In addition to determining who gets home court, these final two regular season games give the Mystics a chance to extend their four-game winning streak and set a tone against teams that they might face next week in the first round of the playoffs.

"We're all excited to play New York right now," Sanford said. "Both teams are playing well and it's going to be an extremely tough test for us with the playoffs coming up, but I don't think we'd want it any other way."

The Case for Mo Currie: Mystics GM Angela Taylor on Her Most Improved Player

by LJRotter on Aug 19, 2010 8:00 AM EDT in WNBA 0 comments

As the regular season winds down and followers of the WNBA begin to cast their votes for the end-of-season awards, I sat down to chat with the General Manager of the Washington Mystics, Angela Taylor, to discuss Monique Currie and the case for her as Most Improved Player of 2010. In a recent article from QMcCall about the top contenders for this season's MIP award, Currie was listed as #2 behind the Liberty's Leilani Mitchell.

While Mitchell's improvement came as a result of increased shooting efficiency and better decision-making as a point guard, Currie's all-around game has been affected by the loss of the Mystics' franchise player, Alana Beard, and the need for her to step into a primary role-player position.

Before our interview began, Taylor mentioned to me that she was surprised by the amount of attention the competition for MIP was receiving this season, but she was more than happy to discuss why her player is deserving of the award.

How do you think, just from watching her last year to this year, that Monique's game has changed or improved?

I guess first when I look at the most improved award, for me, when you're looking at the criteria, I wanna look at three different things. First is- who's improved their game? And then the second is who's improved statistically? And finally, whose improvement has had a direct impact on the team's performance? And if you look at Monique, she's one of the few players in the league that I can say across the board meets each of those criteria.

She's improved her game tremendously in the off-season. She went overseas, she had a great year in Italy and then she finished it off in Russia. And you see that she's done a couple different things, like she handles the ball much better, so that was one of the things she worked on in the off-season. She also looked at her middle game... she can get to the rim, she finishes very well, she gets to the free throw line, and she shot a pretty high percentage from the floor, but it was the middle game- being able to take whatever the defense gives you, making better decisions- she's gotten better there.

And then you also look at her, I compare her to Tamika Catchings, one of the few players that can fill up the stat sheet in a lot of different categories and so she's done that as well. So she's sharing the ball, and...creating opportunities for her teammates, and so her assists are up. She can rebound the ball offensively and defensively so she's one of the better offensive rebounders from the three position. She can run the floor and then she's scoring pretty well for us, and she's defending and her steals are up as well so I look at that improvement in a lot of different categories.

And then you know, obviously statistically she's improved. From points per game she's up from 8 to 14 so, what, a 70% increase? She's up in rebounding about 14% or 15% as well, and then you look at her shooting percentages across the board- she's always been a great free throw shooter- but her free throw percentage has gone up in the top 5 in the league. Her three-point field goal percentage; she was our best three-point shooter last year at 38% but now she's at 44%, which is huge. And then also to be able to get to the free throw line as one of the top 5 in the league, in fact, getting to the free throw line and getting those attempts, she's really improved her game in a lot of different categories.

And then, you know, Alana Beard is out. Alana's our franchise player and so she's done this under the auspicious position of not having our player, our main player there. And having to be the go-to player from the start, she was really the catalyst for us this season, so I think that those three criteria, Monique has met.

How much do you think her increased statistics and improvement is a result of Alana not being on the floor?

You know, I think that it's a combination, more scoring opportunities, a little bit more responsibility. All of our players knew coming into the season that everyone was gonna have to step up their game to make up for the loss of Alana Beard because she does so much for this team. So you look at Monique and I think she took that personally and as an opportunity for her to step into her game.

But I also think that improvement happened before Alana was injured and before we knew that she was injured. But you look at some other candidates, I think, for most improved player, their stats have improved but they ... may be a secondary player ...and Monique is having to be a primary role for us this year, so under those circumstances I've been impressed with her play.

A lot of people wrote the Mystics off after losing Alana Beard to injury. In spite of that, they have had a stellar season. Do you think that's as a result of players like Monique Currie and Crystal Langhorne stepping up, or if it's more of a team cohesion that's really given them their success?

It's both. You know, you look at, with Alana being out, a lot of times you experience success when there's obstacles put in your way. And so our team really stood up to the challenge of having Alana not being in the lineup this year... You know, Julie Plank, our head coach, says 'The Tough Ten'. We have 10 players who all have known that they had to step up their games so from Lindsey Harding to Matee Ajavon to Monique Currie to Marissa Coleman, everyone knows that on any given night we need somebody to elevate their game. Consistently that's been Crystal Langhorne and Monique Currie.

And finally, Crystal [Langhorne] won the Most Improved Player award last year and you have Monique who's really considered as one of the top contenders. Do you think there's something about this team that's conducive to allowing players to grow?

Absolutely. It's part of our vision. I think Coach Plank and I both share the fact that in order to get your team better a lot of times you can't control where you're gonna be in the draft or who you're gonna draft. You can't control free agencies, but you can control getting your players better. So player development has been one of the primary things that we focused on from Dr. Johnson to Ted Leonsis we realized as an organization we need to develop or talent from the inside out and if we do so, and then you're able to add pieces here and there, then you will be able to build a long-term successful program. So player development has certainly been something that has been a strong focus for us, and I think it started with Crystal Langhorne last year and I think a lot of her teammates, Crystal motivated her teammates to use the off-season as a platform for getting better and improving their game as well.

* * * * *

The interview with Taylor was conducted prior to the Mystics' ugly victory at home against the Minnesota Lynx. After the game, I asked Currie herself why she thought she might be in contention for the award and she jokingly told me that after that night's performance she wasn't deserving of it at all. But then she said, "I think it's a variety of things. You know, I'm definitely always working in the off-season to get better, trying to expand my game and add new things to it. Also the opportunity had presented itself for me to be a bigger contributor to the team with Alana missing the entire season and just being more aggressive and just playing, and I don't know much about what I'm in the running for, but I just try to go out there and do the best that I can."

Washington Mystics clinch WNBA playoff berth with win over Seattle Storm

By Katie Carrera

Washington Post Staff Writer

Sunday, August 15, 2010; 11:47 PM

The Washington Mystics had trailed since midway through the first quarter in a tight matchup against the WNBA-leading Seattle Storm when they began to rally in the third. It's been Washington's favorite 10-minute frame all week and against the Storm, which has long since clinched the top seed in the Western Conference and the league's regular season crown, the Mystics staked their claim once more.

As the Washington defense refused to cower when facing a roster full of all-stars, the Storm blinked. Offensive fouls by Swin Cash and Lauren Jackson on consecutive Seattle possessions led to the Mystics tying the score then taking a lead off a jump shot by Lindsey Harding. The game continued in close fashion, but Washington never trailed again in an eventual 80-71 win over Seattle (25-6) that brought the 9,438 at Verizon Center on Sunday afternoon to their feet for the final minute.

"Playing against a team like that, they play hard they're physical, they have people who have a variety of things and you gauge yourself" with games like this, veteran guard Katie Smith said. "You understand the level that you need to be at every night. It's fun to play against teams that are good and executing and playing well."

By winning their third straight contest combined with a 79-66 Connecticut loss to Indiana, the Mystics (19-12) clinched a playoff berth in the Eastern Conference and set a new franchise record for wins. This playoff berth marks the first time in Washington's history that it will appear in the postseason in consecutive years. Indiana (21-10), New York (19-11) and Atlanta (19-13) have also sealed their trip to the playoffs.

Where the Mystics will finish, however, remains to be determined. Seeding hinges on the results of their three final regular season contests, including games against New York and Atlanta with tiebreakers against each team and perhaps home-court advantage in the first round up for grabs.

you're in control," Smith said. "It's really nice that it [won't] have to come down to the last game of the season when you need to win or you're not in. Now we have to play for a high seed."

In the third quarter, Washington's ability to consistently hit three-point attempts fueled a 13-4 run that allowed the Mystics to regain the lead. Led by Monique Currie, who tallied 25 points and a 5-for-7 performance from three-point range, including two during that stretch, Washington finished 9-for-19 behind the arc as part of a 26-for-60 overall shooting effort.

-- FEVER 79, SUN 66: In Uncasville, Conn., Tamika Catchings scored 26 points to help Indiana eliminate Connecticut from playoff contention for the second straight season. Indiana (21-10) increased its lead in the East to 1 1/2 games over idle New York.

-- LYNX 84, SILVER STARS 78: Lindsay Whalen scored 21 points, including six free throws in the final minute, and host Minnesota tightened the Western Conference playoff race.

Washington Mystics run over Tulsa Shock in front of President Obama

By Katie Carrera
Washington Post Staff Writer
Monday, August 2, 2010; D02

By the end of the first quarter Sunday it was clear that the Washington Mystics weren't about to waste their chance to make an example out of the Tulsa Shock, the worst team in the WNBA -- especially not with a few special guests in attendance.

In front of a crowd of 9,008 at Verizon Center that included President Obama and his youngest daughter, Sasha, the Mystics defeated the Shock, 87-62. It was their largest margin of victory this season.

"If you've got the president of the United States here, that's the ultimate home-court advantage for us," said Marissa Coleman, who recorded 14 points and 10 rebounds for the first double-double of her WNBA career. "When you put it all in perspective not too many professional athletes get to meet the president, let alone play in front of them, so for us to be one of the select few is big for women's basketball."

President Obama saw the Mystics (15-10) win their second straight to maintain their hold on third in the Eastern Conference standings, two games behind the first-place Atlanta Dream (18-9) and maintaining a single-game lead on fourth-place New York (14-11).

Although Tulsa (4-22) owns the worst record in the league, the Mystics were careful not to underestimate the Shock, especially with Washington just coming off a three-game losing streak that they snapped on Friday with a 77-73 win over Indiana (16-9).

"We didn't want to come in here and take them lightly but we wanted to come in and continue on a roll," point guard Lindsey Harding said. The losing streak is "over in my mind. It has to be. If we go on another losing streak like that we could be out [of the playoffs]. Each game is going to feed something to us and count so hopefully we're going in the right direction."

Heading into a key week of three road games against Eastern Conference foes Atlanta, New York and Connecticut, the Mystics got just the confidence boost they needed against Tulsa, which committed 18 turnovers and shot just 33.8 percent. Washington had six players reach double figures -- Monique Currie (15), Katie Smith (15), Coleman (14), Crystal Langhorne (11), Chasity Melvin (10) and Harding (10) -- as the team committed just 11 turnovers and shot 41.4 percent.

The game also gave Coach Julie Plank a chance to rest some of her usual workhorses -- Currie (31 minutes) was the only starter to play more than 26 minutes -- as the Mystics' roster of only nine active players received a much-needed break overall.

Advertisement

"It was a statement win as big as we beat them by, so definitely it's going to give us a lot of momentum," Coleman said. "I think this [upcoming road trip is] going to give us the opportunity to show what we're made of and what kind of character, what kind of fight that we have."

•LYNX 72, STORM 71: Seimone Augustus scored 24 points as Minnesota snapped Seattle's 13-game winning streak.

Augustus scored six quick points early in the fourth quarter to extend Minnesota's dwindling lead and became the second-fastest player in WNBA history to reach 2,500 career points, behind only Cynthia Cooper.

Sue Bird scored 16 points and Tanisha Wright added 15 for Seattle (22-3), which saw its franchise-best winning streak end.

•MERCURY 97, SKY 96: Diana Taurasi scored 35 points, including two free throws with 3.7 seconds left, to help Phoenix secure the win over Chicago.

Sylvia Fowles had 12 of her career-high 35 points in the fourth quarter to lead the Sky.

•LIBERTY 71, SUN 67: Cappie Pondexter scored 24 points, including the 3,000th of her career, to lead New York to a victory against Connecticut.

Pondexter reached the milestone in 154 games, the second fewest in WNBA history. She also propelled the Liberty to a win in a game that came down to the final minute. She hit three free throws in the final minute to give the Liberty a 70-67 lead.

•DREAM 90, FEVER 74: Iziane Castro Marques had 22 points, Angel McCoughtry scored 20 and Atlanta took over first place in the Eastern Conference with a victory over Indiana.

It was the fourth victory in a row for the Dream, which improved to 10-2 at home.

Mystics making overdue run in crowded WNBA East

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Mystics recently turned in their best all-around effort of the year after a morning tipoff and their performance vaulted them from third to a tie for first - a place Washington hasn't been this late in the season in eight years.

It's been that kind of season in the WNBA's Eastern Conference, where no team has a losing record and only three games separated top from bottom going into Thursday's games.

"It's going to go down to the wire," said veteran guard Katie Smith, who had six points and five assists in Wednesday's 82-72 victory over the Atlanta Dream. "It's going to be pretty wild for the fans. The games are going to be so tough because everybody's fighting for their lives."

It can make a player's head spin trying to keep up with the daily standings flux, but the Mystics are more than happy to have a role in it. The franchise that hasn't accomplished much of anything in its 13-year WNBA existence finally seems to have its act together.

"All the pieces," said swingman Marissa Coleman, "are coming together at the right time."

Even though all the pieces aren't there. The Mystics' best player, Alana Beard, had ankle surgery before the start of the season and won't play this year. While her teammates were in the locker room discussing the win over the Dream, Beard was in the trainer's room going through her rehab.

But the Mystics have survived Beard's loss because they finally have a cohesive organizational game plan, led by their own version of Dr. J. The upswing began with team president and part-owner Shelia Johnson's infamous rant in August 2008, when she declared that the franchise hadn't "moved one ounce" in its history and that she "might as well shut down" the team if doesn't start winning.

She then hired a new general manager, Angela Taylor, and a new coach. Longtime college and WNBA assistant Julie Plank became the 11th Mystics coach in 13 seasons, a genuine article compared to some of the gimmicky hires of the past.

Plank took Washington to the playoffs last year - albeit with a 16-18 record - and Wednesday's win improved this year's record to 13-7 and the first-place tie, at least temporarily, with the Indiana Fever. The last time the Mystics were in first place this late in the season was on July 30, 2002.

"Having an owner like Dr. J, she's come in and totally just put her foot down and turned a lot of things around," Beard said. "She's passionate about it. This is something she cares about. To win it for her, you can't put it into words what it would mean. She's done a great job putting people in place. We have a coach that's come in and really understands what it takes."

Majority owner Ted Leonsis promotes the Mystics on his blog, noting that the team's commitment to build with youth through the draft takes a page out of the same philosophy he used to turn the NHL's Washington Capitals into perennial contenders.

"A rebuild plan that seems to be working again, eh?" Leonsis posted after Wednesday's win.

But Leonsis is concerned about empty seats at the Verizon Center. The Mystics remain one of the top-drawing teams in the league, but their average of 9,250 is 20 percent down from last year. Ironically, this comes in the same year that Leonsis took down the large, much-derided "WNBA ATTENDANCE CHAMPIONS" banners from the Verizon Center rafters.

"I must confess ... I am surprised and a bit disappointed that more people aren't coming to the games," Leonsis wrote this week in a blog entry that read more like a commercial. "This is a great brand of basketball. Prices are very affordable. The games are fun and quite competitive. The women are stellar athletes. It is a great value for families. Come on out to a game."

Veteran Katie Smith's contributions to Washington Mystics are adding up

By Jorge Castillo
Washington Post Staff Writer
Wednesday, July 21, 2010; D06

As the Washington Mystics practiced last week at Verizon Center, a day after losing to the New York Liberty, Katie Smith watched and kept score while her teammates participated in four-on-four closeout drills. With only nine healthy players on the roster and all-star Crystal Langhorne also sitting out most of practice to rest her ankle, the team needed bodies. But logging just less than 32 minutes per game a year after suffering a herniated disk means the 36-year-old Smith can get away with watching a few drills.

Now in her 12th WNBA season, Smith signed with Washington in the offseason after deciding she didn't want to follow the Shock and its new coaching staff to Tulsa from Detroit. She was brought to the Mystics to provide depth off the bench for a back court already featuring four-time all-star Alana Beard, Lindsey Harding, Marissa Coleman and Matee Ajavon. But when Beard, the team's leading scorer last season (15.9 ppg), injured her left ankle less than two weeks before training camp started and underwent season-ending surgery, Smith's role in 2010 changed before the season even began.

The 5-foot-11 Smith has started in all but one of the team's 19 games this season, averaging 9.6 points in 31.8 minutes per game during the team's 12-7 start. Although that's a career low for Smith, the number was supposed to be lower.

"I told Katie I didn't anticipate her playing 32, 33 minutes every night, but she does what we need her to do to win," Coach Julie Plank said in a telephone interview last week. "Some nights she doesn't score points and probably has the biggest impact to our winning because she's a great defender and really a great leader for us. Sometimes I forget she's 36 years old and she sure doesn't play like it."

Smith has taken the unexpected load in stride.

"You never know exactly how it's gonna go," the three-time Olympic gold medalist said. "It's kind of what I've been doing my whole career. Some days it's more than others, some days you just got to take care of yourself. If my number's called to play that much then I'm going to be in there doing what's asked of me and fighting through whatever as a lot of people are doing now."

The points per game average is a far cry from when she was consistently among the league's leading scorers in the early 2000s but she said that's not her role now like it was when she was playing for the Minnesota Lynx early on in her career. In 2001, she led the league in scoring (23.1 ppg) and in 2007 she became the first professional women's basketball player to score 6,000 career points, which she did in the WNBA and two seasons in the American Basketball League combined.

Her numbers dipped during her five seasons in Detroit, where she didn't average more than 14.7 points per game for a season. But she traded the scoring for wins. In Detroit, she led the Shock to two championships in 2006 and 2008, when she was named WNBA Finals MVP.

That doesn't mean she hasn't filled it up when needed, though. In back-to-back games against last season's two finals participants, Indiana and Phoenix, Smith scored 21 and 25 points, respectively. The Mystics won both games.

"Everyone knows Katie's a winner," Langhorne, the team's leading scorer and rebounder, said. "She's won at every level. She's very selfless so having someone like that on the team can only help."

Smith's back injury was so troublesome in 2009 that during the offseason she contemplated retirement. The herniated disk caused numbness and weakness in her left leg and made her wonder whether it was worth the risk to her long-term health. It eventually improved enough to continue her career and she joined Plank, a fellow Ohio State alum, and the Mystics.

"She knows what it takes to win in this league and that you have to bring it every night," Plank said. "She gives our team a lot of poise and confidence when she's out on the floor especially in closer games. She's a calming influence to our players out there."

In Sunday's 61-59 loss against Chicago, Smith struggled from the field, going just two of 12 from the field for five points. But she wasn't the only one. The Mystics went cold after a scorching start, shooting 35.1 percent from the floor for the game, including four of 16 from behind the arc.

Sitting in third place, a half-game ahead of Connecticut in the congested Eastern Conference standings, Washington is in the midst of its first losing streak since late May and will host an Atlanta team riding a three-game losing streak on Wednesday. The second-place Dream (14-8) started the season 6-0 and 13-4 but have struggled since and are now a half-game ahead of the Mystics. They are led by three all-stars: MVP candidate Angel McCoughtry, Iziane Castro Marques and Sancho Lyttle, who returned to the lineup in Saturday's loss against Connecticut after suffering a concussion.

The teams have met once this season, an 86-79 Dream win at the Verizon Center on June 5, and will meet twice in Atlanta after Wednesday's matchup.

Langhorne Making Mystics Contenders in the East

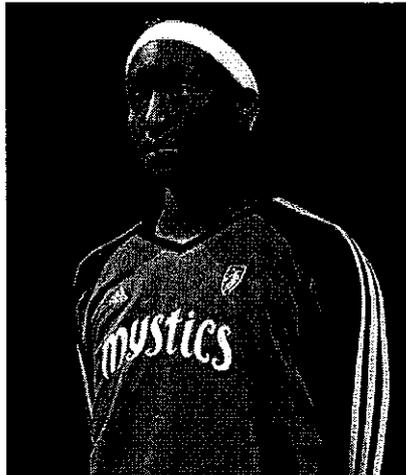

Posted Jul 21 2010 3:17PM

The toughest stretch of the season is ahead for the Washington Mystics. Ten games. Eight against Eastern Conference opponents. Their ultimate success could be determined by how these next three weeks pan out.

"I still think we're going to be headed in the right direction," Mystics center Crystal Langhorne said.

How well Langhorne's navigational skills are depends on her ability to excel. Thus far, the 23-year-old has stood out as the Mystics' top player this campaign. Langhorne is among the league's Top 10 in points (16.8, 8th), rebounds (9.7, 5th) and minutes (34.6, 2nd). She also ranks behind four of the league's biggest stars — Tina Charles, Erika de Souza, Sancho Lyttle and Sylvia Fowles — for double-doubles (8).

"She's our go-to player," Mystics head coach Julie Plank said. "Sometimes I think she just gets beat up in there, but she'll just do whatever it takes to win."

Crystal Langhorne is the key behind Washington's success in 2010.

Ned Dishman/NBAE/Getty Images

There was uncertainty heading into the season for Washington after four-time All-Star Alana Beard went down with an ankle injury. How would they survive in the East without their superstar? The easy answer was that someone had to step up. That individual became Langhorne.

"She's the first one in the gym, the last one to leave. She's totally unselfish," Plank said. "She gives our team a lot; a lot of confidence."

For the week that ran June 21 to June 27, Langhorne was recognized as the WNBA's Eastern Conference Player of the Week. This was the first such honor for Langhorne, who paced the Mystics to a 2-1 record on 27.7 ppg during that span. Statistics like that also helped her earn her first trip to the Stars at the Sun game.

"I think her awards, accolades are well deserved," Plank said. "I was happy to see her get an All-Star team, and I think she's a legitimate MVP caliber candidate."

The truth is: It isn't surprising to see Langhorne producing so well. Last season, when she was named the league's Most Improved Player, she dropped 12 points and grabbed nearly eight rebounds a night in the nation's capital. Plank rewarded her for those numbers by naming the Maryland product the Mystics' starting center for the 2010 season.

Putting Langhorne on the floor nightly with Katie Smith, Lindsey Harding and Monique Currie has worked well. Washington's 13-7 record positions them atop the East, tied with the Indiana Fever and a half game ahead of the Atlanta Dream. The organization has never won more than 18 games, a total they're on pace to surpass, especially if they can get through these next 10 games. Four of those are against the Fever and Dream. The other six come against the Connecticut Sun and New York Liberty, a team which is in last place, but only 3.5 games out of the top spot.

"The East is playing really well. It's usually the West that is doing that," Langhorne said. "From top to bottom, everyone is playing really well. It's great competition."

The toughest part of the upcoming contests, especially for Langhorne, may be inside the paint.

"We're going to have to rebound against them," Langhorne said. "Chicago has Sylvia. Connecticut has Tina Charles. Atlanta has de Souza and Sancho. When you're playing against teams like that you have to rebound. You have to defend against them."

Washington's success depends on Langhorne's ability to stop and score against those individual opponents. It's a tall order, but the reward could put them one immense step closer to the ultimate goal: a WNBA championship.

Currie, Harding added to all-star team

Washington Mystics Monique Currie and Lindsey Harding have been named as replacement players on the WNBA squad for Saturday's WNBA All Star Game (a matchup between WNBA all-stars and USA Basketball women's national team).

From the WNBA news release:

Currie, a fifth-year forward, will fill the spot vacated by the Seattle Storm's Lauren Jackson, who suffered a concussion last Saturday against the Los Angeles Sparks. Harding, a fifth-year guard, will assume the roster spot vacated by the Atlanta Dream's Sancho Lyttle, who also is sidelined with a concussion.

The Mystics now have three players participating in the game, including Crystal Langhorne, Washington's leader in scoring (17.0 ppg) and rebounding (9.8 rpg), who was voted to the WNBA squad earlier this week by the league's head coaches.

Washington Mystics set their sights on conference champion Indiana Fever

By Katie Carrera
Washington Post Staff Writer
Tuesday, June 29, 2010; D03

Less than a half-hour after defeating the defending WNBA champion Phoenix Mercury, the Washington Mystics' thoughts turned to the Indiana Fever. After all, it is the Fever that won the Eastern Conference a season ago and knocked the Mystics out of the playoffs.

More important, Indiana represents the type of team Washington strives to be. How the Mystics (9-5) perform against the Fever (9-5) Tuesday, several players said, should provide an accurate measuring stick for their progress roughly halfway through the 2010 season.

"They play hard, they're a good team, they have really good players. I think wanting to face them is just a competitive thing," veteran guard Katie Smith said. "You want to play against a good team that expects to win. We want to be that. We want to be that consistent and we have a chance to prove that. We're all still battling and jockeying for position in the East, still trying to stay in the mix for playoff spots, so obviously it's a huge game in a lot of ways."

The Mystics say they've moved beyond the memory of 2009, when Indiana tormented them by winning all six meetings between the two teams. Even Washington's season-opening 72-65 win over the Fever on May 15 seems distant, as both franchises have evolved this season in similar ways.

Heading into the 7 p.m. game at Verizon Center, Indiana and Washington have allowed the fewest points per game in the league, giving up just 71.64 and 72.64, respectively. Both thrive off their defense and ability to force opponents into making mistakes -- for example, Indiana's league-best 11.21 steals per game.

"These are the games I love," the Mystics' Nakia Sanford said. "It's a battle of wills, who can make the fewest mistakes and who can take advantage of whatever the defense gives them. They're very, very aggressive on defense, but that means that we'll have to use options. If we can go to our second and third options and if we're patient we should be okay offensively."

Washington Mystics set their sights on conference champion Indiana Fever

While the Mystics must try to avoid falling into the Fever's defensive trap, they also must slow Indiana's two-headed monster of Tamika Catchings and Katie Douglas, who have long histories of success against Washington. Last season, Douglas set an Indiana record for points in a game (34) against the Mystics, and Catchings scored at least 19 points every time she faced Washington.

"We can do things to slow them down, we've got to take away what's comfortable," Monique Currie said. "We know them pretty well; they're mostly the same team that they were last year. While we have Katie Smith, who will help us out defensively especially with Tamika, who has been a handful for us since forever it seems. Players like [Catchings] and Katie Douglas you can't expect to stop them, but you can take things away from them. I think that's what we have to do."

Mystics note: Crystal Langhorne was named the WNBA's Eastern Conference player of the week for the first time in her career after her efforts in three games last week. The third-year forward scored 83 points on 34-for-49 shooting during that span.

Monique Currie is low-key about her lofty output for Mystics

By Katie Carrera
Washington Post Staff Writer
Saturday, June 19, 2010; D03

To Monique Currie, her emergence as arguably the Washington Mystics' best player this season was necessary. Perhaps it was even mandated by the predicament her franchise faced without its established star and by Currie's personal desire to begin asserting herself in games rather than letting the play dictate her actions.

She doesn't make a show of her staggering statistics -- which, more than a quarter of the way through this season, are career highs in most categories -- or ask for the attention they warrant. One of the Mystics' most versatile players only hopes that she can help lead her team back to the playoffs for the second consecutive season.

"It feels good to be able to perform consistently on a nightly basis and that's something that I constantly tried to accomplish in my career," Currie said earlier this week. "In this game, you've got to keep working you can't give up when things don't go the way you want them to. Things fall into place when they should."

Currie's struggle to find consistency has been well documented throughout her first four WNBA seasons, which is why when she started the 2010 campaign with 48 combined points in two games, many wondered if it would last. A month and 10 games into the season though, Currie's ability to be a game-changer has not wavered.

Heading into Saturday's contest against the Chicago Sky (4-7) at 7 p.m. at Verizon Center, Currie leads Washington (6-4) in scoring (17.9 points), steals (2.3) and free throw percentage among players with at least 10 attempts (86); and is tied for second among the Mystics in field goal percentage (49.2) and is second in rebounding (5.2). All career-best marks.

"Since I've been in the league, I feel like I've just kind of been sliding under the radar," said Currie, a Washington native who attended Bullis. "I haven't been too high, I haven't been too low, but a lot of the time I kinda just stood in the background and let things happen. This year what's a little bit different is I'm a little more aggressive and I'm taking charge and making things happen."

Chosen third overall in the 2006 draft by the now-defunct Charlotte Sting, Currie went first to Chicago before being traded to her hometown Mystics in 2007. She played through several systems during Washington's tumultuous rotation of coaches, but she's thriving in a second year under Coach Julie Plank's direction.

A go-to player in high-pressure situations, Currie is relied upon for her rebounding and defensive steadiness as much as her scoring and now level-headed shot-selection. When Currie became a restricted free agent at the end of the 2009 season, the Mystics eagerly tried to keep her in Washington.

Advertisement

"There were a few other teams trying to sign her," General Manager Angela Taylor said. "People saw the potential in her and know that she's one of the few players that can fill up a stat sheet with all the things she can do. Last year, number wise, might not have been her best, but she just needed time on the court and a definitive role."

Alana Beard, whose season-ending ankle surgery created the opportunity for Currie to lead the Mystics, always believed that her friend and former Duke teammate possessed the ability to guide a WNBA team.

"I've known for so long what she has in her," Beard said. "I've seen her work, I've seen her practice and I've seen her be the best player on this team in practice. But for some odd reason when she got in the game, it didn't translate. Now everything is clicking. Everything is transferring for her. That's what everyone's been trying to get out of her for so long and I'm glad it's finally here."

The WNBA is worth it.

Kyle Weidie | June 15, 2010 | 12:38 pm

A couple weeks ago, I was invited to cover a WNBA game, the Washington Mystics versus the Connecticut Sun. Some people snickered. Some asked why. Some didn't care.

And that's fine. This post isn't to convince anyone that the WNBA is great or that it's even better than they think. Plain and simple, the WNBA is worth it. Worth the effort to make sure it works. Worth the support and subsidization of the NBA ... although, the current level of the NBA's assistance is somewhat mysterious.

WNBA president Donna Orender was recently interviewed by Fortune's Poppy Harlow on CNMoney.com. When asked if the league gets financial support from the NBA, Orender carefully said, "We are an entity that runs ourselves, but with ... I would say we have support from the NBA, but there's always been these rumors that they're writing big checks for us ..." Harlow interrupted and implored Orender to clear the record on if the WNBA stands on its own feet financially. Orender responded, "At the league level, we do. Yes." A bit vague, but certainly indications of progress from Orender.

Individual teams, however, are another story. A report by the Atlanta Journal-Constitution's Henry Unger last December indicated that the Atlanta Dream, in its second season of existence, lost $3 million, although official financial numbers are disclosed.

Over the league's existence, six teams have folded: the Portland Fire (2000-02), Miami Sol (2000-02), Cleveland Rockers (1997-03), Charlotte Sting (1997-06), Sacramento Monarchs (1997-09), and Houston Comets (1997-08). The Comets won the first four championships in league history. The Detroit Shock, winners of three championships in the past seven seasons, most recently in 2008, relocated to Tulsa for the current season.

Orender responded to trouble keeping teams afloat by comparing the WNBA to the struggles of other leagues in their youth, specifically citing the NFL and the NBA. Clearly, however, an apples to oranges situation. In this day of new media and high technology market research, the ability to penetrate markets and pinpoint target audiences is vastly different from trying to grow a sports league over 50 years ago.

Fact is, a growing audience has been hard to come by for the WNBA, evident by the league's attendance history. In its fourteenth year, the league is young, but it's not that young. According to WNBA attendance records on WomensBasketballOnline.com, in the league's first seven seasons, the league-wide attendance average was 9,560. In the last six years, the league-wide average has been 7,999. The reported average game attendance for the first four weeks of the 2010 season is 7,198. That's not exactly growth.

"We're watching [attendance numbers] very carefully," said Sheila Johnson, Washington Mystics president & managing partner, when I spoke with her after Ted Leonsis' introductory press conference as majority owner of the Washington Wizards. "I think the league has grown in many ways as far as our fan base, but we're still struggling a little bit with sponsorships."

Johnson, who also serves a vice-chair of Monumental Sports & Entertainment, the ownership group that controls the Wizards, Mystics, Washington Capitals and the Verizon Center, also pointed more toward societal factors as an influence on attendance. "I still don't think society as a whole has really embraced the female athlete as they should," she said in terms of goals to increase the WNBA's fan base. "And so it's something we're constantly working on and we're struggling with, and trying to really get the message out there of the importance of women and sports. Once society can start seeing its strengths, I think it's going to grow."

Cultural factors also come into play. For the most part, professional women basketball players get paid more overseas than they do in America. Thus, women's pro basketball is more embraced in other countries. The WNBA's summertime schedule does allow many players to participate in dual leagues, but that comes with the sacrifices of increased injury risk and shorter careers. But if the WNBA had a winter schedule, they simply couldn't compete, with foreign women's leagues or with the NBA.

NBA commissioner David Stern projected that his league's owners would collectively lose $400 million this season. It's the economy, stupid (and a CBA that allows NBA owners to take "stupid pills," as Ted Leonsis would say). NBA union head Billy Hunter recently called the $400 million figure, "baloney." Nonetheless, the health of the WNBA is certainly affected by the overall health of professional basketball in the United States, something which will improve in a better economy.

There are positive signs for the WNBA. Before the 2009 season, Stern said he was forecasting the league to finally break even. And in April, the Seattle Storm signed a marketing deal with Microsoft to put the name of the company's search engine, Bing, on the front of their jerseys. Orender said it was a "seven-figure plus" deal. LifeLock and Farmers Insurance have similar deals with the Phoenix Mercury and Los Angeles Sparks respectively.

Sheila Johnson said jersey sponsorships can be the difference. "We are definitely looking into it," when asked if the Mystics were considering the option. "That marquee sponsorship really does make the difference between our being in the red and being in the black. So we have been constantly talking with major corporations to see if we can get a marquee deal."

Johnson also sees Ted Leonsis' majority ownership of the Wizards as a plus specifically for the Mystics franchise. "The beauty about what we're doing here is we're going to be able to kinda blend the Wizards and the Mystics back together, as far as sponsorship sales, as far as even being able to sell packages." Six of the 12 current WNBA teams have connections with NBA ownership groups.

Still ... surely none of this matters to you. It all comes down to the product, right?

If you're a fan of men's basketball, it's probably not a two-way street toward fandom of women's basketball. Same sport, different games ... the main discrepancy coming in athleticism.

Men's basketball is more athletically entertaining in contrast to general human athletic capabilities. This can't be argued. Not to say women's basketball isn't athletically astounding in its own way, just very small in comparison to a pool of the world's greatest athletes. But athleticism is not a point that should be focused upon as a quality of the WNBA game anyway.

In fact, it's somewhat arrogant to consider the merits of the WNBA solely based on the idea that NBA-caliber athleticism spoils you from watching the women's game. If the game of basketball is all about dunking and athletic feats, then you aren't appreciating or getting the nuance of the sport, much less why people compete in the first place.

So the WNBA is not for you. It doesn't matter. The WNBA provides an alternative outlet for those passionate about basketball in ways that needn't matter to everyone.

The WNBA is for someone ... for young girls to cultivate a love for the game with the tangible goal of playing at the highest professional level in the United States ... for promotion of the sport on a worldwide level to both men and women, and not just across cultures, races, religions and ethnicity.

Through all the struggles, criticism and growing pains, the WNBA is worth the effort and worth the presence. For the greater good of the game of basketball, the WNBA is worth it.

After the game I attended, I spoke to a couple WNBA players, Marissa Coleman and Monique Currie of the Washington Mystics and Tan White of the Connecticut Sun, about the role their league plays in the ambassadorship of the game of basketball, especially for girls.

Every Mystics player scores in 82-65 rout of Liberty

By Katie Carrera
Washington Post Staff Writer
Sunday, June 13, 2010; D02

With time winding down in the third quarter Saturday night, the Washington Mystics left no doubt who controlled this game. They already held a double-digit lead over the New York Liberty for most of the second half, but the Mystics delivered a knockout blow when Lindsey Harding and Marissa Coleman hit three-pointers 25 seconds apart with less than two minutes remaining in the period.

The late flurry allowed the Mystics to enter the fourth quarter in possession of a daunting 20-point advantage that eventually resulted in a dominant 82-65 win over the Liberty in front of 8,492 at Verizon Center. For the second time in as many nights, Washington refused to let an opponent back in a contest it dictated having finally found its killer instinct.

"We wanted to come out and be aggressive," said small forward Monique Currie, who had 20 points and a career-high six steals. "We had a conversation amongst ourselves about how we need to be tougher and how we need to finish teams and put teams away and I think we were really focused on executing that."

The full team meeting came right before this weekend's slate of back-to-back games. Washington (6-4) had lost four of its past five and the Mystics wanted to locate their grittiness and swagger and did they ever. The team that averaged 75 points per game, only a half point better than their opponents' average heading into Friday, evolved into an efficient and seemingly effortless offensive machine.

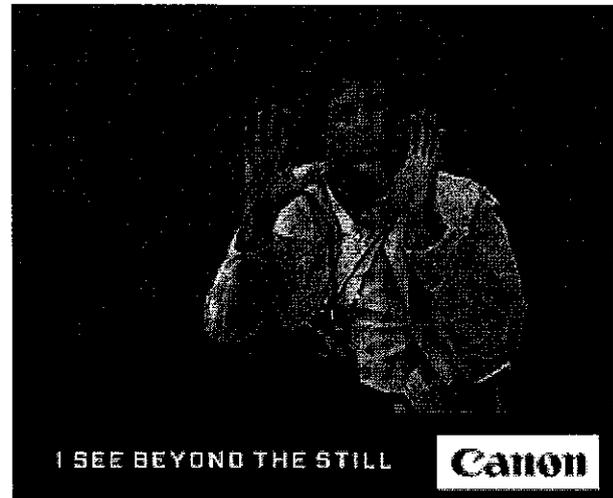

New York (4-5) never led as the Mystics refused to relent after a hot start. Currie, who tied with the Liberty's Cappie Pondexter for the game high in points, tallied eight of the team's first 10 points and helped establish a 23-12 lead by the end of the first quarter.

Unlike other games this season though, the Mystics offense was not one-dimensional. Four players -- Currie, Crystal Langhorne (13), Lindsey Harding (13) and Matee Ajavon (11) -- posted double-digit totals. More impressive was that each of the Mystics' 10 players scored in the victory, marking the first time the team has done so during the 2010 season. Along with the well-balanced scoring output, nine Mystics saw at least 11 minutes of playing time and none received fewer than six.

"That's exactly how we're going to win," Harding said. "You can't just depend on one person to do this or do that because sometimes people will have off nights, they'll get exhausted, they'll get tired. If we have everybody on the floor doing their part and contributing it puts us in the best position to win."

Shooting with a 50 percent success rate from field-goal range, the Mystics continued to attack the Liberty, who committed 21 turnovers in the game, including 14 in the first half alone. Conversely, Washington recorded a new season low in turnovers with only eight against New York.

"That's been an issue for us, taking care of the ball," Coach Julie Plank said. "I think we worked on execution and moving the ball better and putting some different sets in and I definitely think it was big to be disruptive to New York."

Washington Mystics Turning Heads

Loudly stating to WNBA, "Don't count us out."

by Stephen Litel / @stephenlitel

One of the surprises early into the WNBA season is the play of the Washington Mystics. After a season-ending injury before the season began to team star Alana Beard, many wrote off the squad. Yet, the team wanted to make a statement early on to the doubters, essentially saying, "Don't count us out." With a record of 3-0 out of the gate, the Mystics statement rang throughout the WNBA very loudly.

"We want to steal as many games as we can on the road," said new Mystic Katie Smith. "Obviously, Indiana is the measuring stick for the East with what they did last year and their whole squad is back. It's early, but as I said, we'll take whatever we can. For us, it's about getting wins and trying to get better every night."

Team general manager Angela Taylor loves her team. She is working to build a team that will compete for a WNBA championship and appreciates how her team is beginning the 2010 season. Before their home win against New York, the Mystics went on the road into two hostile arenas and came away with wins.

"We always think of the WNBA season as a sprint, so you do really need to get off to a good start and sustain it in order to challenge and compete for one of four spots in the playoffs," said Taylor. "It was important for us to get off to a good start and we have some new pieces on our roster. We had a great training camp, so to go on the road and win against two really good teams is nice. Home openers for our opponents too. Indiana was hanging their banner and talking about all the wonderful things last year and then come to Minnesota. It's Lindsey Whalen's first home game in Minnesota with a great crowd on hand and get another victory. It's nice, but we also need to continue to improve."

Even with their early season success, the Mystics would much prefer to have the injured Alana Beard on the court with them. After all, Beard is a career 16.2 point per game scorer, but her greatest asset may be on the defensive end of the court. She is ferocious on defense, making life difficult for the opposing team and her offense does not allow them to let up on the other end of the court. Undoubtedly, it would be wonderful to have her on the floor, but the team has enough talent without her to compete.

"Obviously, you wish she was out there because she adds so much to the team offensively and defensively," said Smith. "She's just such a threat and a competitor, but that's the way it is. Everybody has things here or there throughout the season, but for us, we were able to prepare for it, understanding that all of us have to be ready to play every night. It's not 'Lindsey has to do it all,' 'Monique has to do it all' and I don't have to do it all. It's just a matter of everyone understanding what we're trying to get done and we all have to be mentally and physically ready to play. We have to pick up the slack by committee."

Without Beard, the team is still very talented and they are stepping up to the plate, as needed. Players like Katie Smith and Lindsey Harding are playing well, as is Nakia Sanford after taking some criticism for her play in the past. Yet, the player doing the heavy lifting to this point is Monique Currie, who is an early front-runner for the MVP award. Currie is averaging 22.0 points per game on 56% shooting and 50% from behind the three-point line. She is also hitting her free throws at an amazing 95% clip.

"You know that injuries happen in sports and you can never prepare to lose your franchise player, but if you look at Monique Currie, Lindsay Harding, Katie Smith and all these players we have on our roster, everyone knows that they have to step up," said Taylor. "On paper, everything looks different than what actually happens on the court, so I think the season is just beginning and we realize that we are one of twelve teams that has an equal opportunity to win a WNBA championship and that's our mindset going into it."

But how is this all possible? It would have been understandable for the team to go through the motions during the season, expecting in their own hearts and minds that they would miss out on the playoffs. However, they have gone the other route, choosing to prove many people wrong who doubted them.

"I think that goes back to last year with the way we finished the season," said Taylor. "Playing in the playoffs against the eventual Eastern Conference champion Indiana Fever, we felt we were very competitive in that series and had an opportunity to move on. You know, a possession here or there and we could have moved on, so there's a lot of confidence coming out and we have a lot of those players returning. The entire off-season has been focused on not just getting to the playoffs, but getting beyond the playoffs. That's the foundation."

That experience in last season's playoffs build a confident foundation, making the team believe that they are capable of great things. Of course, Katie Smith—who is a WNBA legend—always expects great things of herself and her teams. Even though she is only about a week into her Mystic career, she sees the potential of her new team and chooses to be an emotional leader for the squad, never allowing them to get down on themselves.

"I think we can play with anybody," said Smith. "Every night is going to be tough because if you don't show up, you're going to get beat. We have the individual players, but we also have a great group and our defense will keep us in games when we're not shooting the ball well. We will compete every night, we will be in ball games and it's just a matter of making those plays down the stretch to hopefully get those W's."

Crystal Langhorne, who is averaging 15.0 points and 9.3 rebounds per game, sums up the Mystics mindset for the 2010 season perfectly. When asked if fans, as well as the media wrote off the 2010 Washington Mystics, Langhorne spoke bluntly.

"Yeah, I think so, but we don't want to listen to that too much," said Langhorne. "We know the team we have and what we are capable of and I think we have great players on our team and play well together. We do want to prove some people wrong."

So far, they are turning many heads.

WNBA President Orender says she has always "fundamentally believed" in the Mystics' talent

May 22, 6:43 PM · Andrew Tomlinson - Washington Mystics Examiner

WNBA President Donna Orender stopped by the Verizon Center to talk about the Washington Mystics and the league before last night's Mystics win over the New York Liberty.

One of the first things that Orender touched on was the Mystics success this year. She said she thought the Mystics could succeed before they started the season. To her, the team has worked as a whole to replace Alana Beard and is better off for it.

"I have always fundamentally believed that they had a broad base of talent here. I think they have players with the right character," Orender said. "Because they are so tight and close, when what happened to Alana Beard happened, I think it encouraged her team to step up. I think it is bringing out the best in her teammates. When she does come back, I think they are going to be really good this year."

The Mystics are just one of the many teams in the WNBA who have already had one or more significant injuries. Due to all of the injuries, the debate about whether a team should be able to replace an injured player has yet again come up. To Orender, there is no problem with the current system.

"[A player can be replaced,] they choose not to replace that player, that's their choice. We are coming off of our best competitive year in history with 11 players," Orender said. "Everyone figured out a way to make it work. It is like fine-tuning fantastic competition because the ability to get a seat on that bench is really difficult. I will tell you that it is working really well."

With the early success that Tulsa has seen, it would seem as if the WNBA would be eager to add more teams to the league. That is not the case however. Orender talked about following a set path before expanding again.

"There is a lot of discussion and I think we have learned a lot about this business to know, especially with Tulsa, that everyone won't follow the same path, but there are certain benchmarks you want to hit," Orender said. "As a perspective owner said, I don't want that perspective timeline to get in the way of my success."

One major thing that Orender wanted to stress was the success that the league has seen in the last two years. To her, there is nothing but optimism in the WNBA right now.

"We are coming off of our best playoffs, not just on the court, but in terms of overall people's interest," Orender said. "When you have Peyton Manning up in the box and Larry Bird challenging the community and Steve Nash on the other side and Larry Fitzgerald sitting courtside ... I find a lot of optimism in that. This league has nothing but opportunity."

Mystics' Crystal Langhorne Scores a Milk Campaign Ad

After grabbing consecutive rebounds on the court, Washington Mystics forward Crystal Langhorne knows that low fat chocolate milk helps her rebound off of the court. Milk contains nine essential nutrients and a unique mix carbohydrates, protein, fluids and electrolytes to help her body refuel and replenish so that she's able to bounce back for her next big game or grueling practice.

Langhorne is the most recent athlete to join the National Milk Mustache "got milk?" Campaign and don the famous Milk Mustache. She joins other basketball all-stars who include Diana Taurasi, Chauncey Billups and Deron Williams. These athletes are keenly aware that what they ingest can make a significant difference in their performance.

"Crystal's a great role model for active teens as she shows how drinking low fat milk, eating right and training hard can bring you to the top of the game," said Miranda Abney, senior marketing manager at MilkPEP.

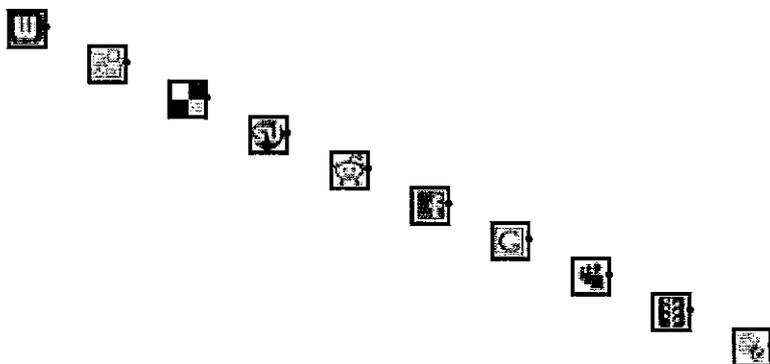

"We're proud to have Crystal join the ranks of so many other milk-drinking athletes who can talk personally to the performance benefits of milk."

Langhorne's ad copy reads: "Rebound. got milk?" and encourages others to go to bodybymilk.com to learn more about the nutrients found in milk that help athletes refuel after a workout. Langhorne unveiled her new "Body By Milk" ad during the Mystics 2010 home-opener at the Verizon Center, Fri., May 21 during a pre-game ceremony.

As training camp opens, Washington Mystics prepare for life without Alana Beard

By Katie Carrera
Washington Post Staff Writer
Sunday, April 25, 2010; D02

For the past two months as Alana Beard and Marissa Coleman worked out in preparation for the upcoming WNBA season, the veteran would tell the youngster that she shouldn't be shy anymore: She is no longer a rookie and it is time for her to elevate her presence as a member of the Washington Mystics.

As training camp opens Sunday at Verizon Center, Coleman won't be the only young player taking on additional responsibility as the Mystics begin to assemble a team that for the first time since 2003 won't have Beard on the floor.

"I would love to have Alana there obviously but it's an opportunity that's presented itself and I'm going to step up to the best of my ability," Coleman said. "I think we'll all have to."

Beard, Washington's franchise player, underwent successful surgery on her left ankle on Tuesday and is expected to miss the 2010 season. Beard will remain with the team as she rehabilitates, but the Mystics must find a way to make up for her scoring (a team-high 15.9 points per game in 2009), defensive prowess (team-high 72 steals) and her fiery on-court leadership.

Further complicating things is that the WNBA no longer has an inactive or injured-reserve list, simply 11 active roster spots per team, meaning Beard will remain on the active roster despite the injury. That gives Washington 10 open positions to fill by the regular season opener on May 15.

"We just have to get the best mix of players," Coach Julie Plank said. "It may not always be the shooters, the pure defenders, but it's going to be who complements each other and has a lot of versatility. The returnees will have to be better. The rookies will have to keep improving. Everyone's going to have to pick it up, and I think our players are willing to do that."

Washington's depth at guard and small forward should help soften the blow of Beard's absence. Free agent signee Katie Smith injects additional leadership and scoring to a group of key returning players, including speedsters Lindsey Harding and Matee Ajavon along with versatile swing players Coleman and Monique Currie. Kristen Mann and Kristin Haynie, whom Washington acquired as part of the Sacramento dispersal draft, could also fit into the mix.

The chance for additional responsibility is exciting for Coleman as she enters her second professional season, recovered from the ankle injury that disrupted her rookie campaign. She returned from her European team early to prepare for the new season, and she feels the poise that made her a dynamic presence at Maryland has returned.

"Looking back on last season, I didn't handle a lot of things the way that I normally would. The injury kind of messed with me a little," said Coleman. "Being here, working out with Alana, feeding off her energy and seeing how hard she works has really helped me get a lot of my confidence back."

Meanwhile third-year forward Crystal Langhorne will try to lead a renaissance in the post, where there should be a strong competition for roster spots between rookies Jacinta Monroe, Jenna Smith, Shanavia Dowdell and a host of returning players. But it will be Langhorne, who emerged as a cornerstone for the Mystics in her second season, with an opportunity to embrace an even larger role helping to mentor the rookies while improving her own game.

"We all know that although Alana's going to be here . . . the players on the floor will need to spark each other. We'll all have to be ready for new roles," said Langhorne, who averaged 17.1 points and nine rebounds per game for Rivas (Spain) during the 2010 EuroLeague season. "I've been working on a few parts of my game, trying to get my right-hand shots a little bit better and my ballhandling to cut down on turnovers, and I'm excited to just have a chance to get better this year."

Mystics notes: Several players will not be in attendance on the opening day of training camp because their seasons overseas have not yet concluded. They are: Harding (Lithuania), Ajavon (Turkey), Currie (Russia), Chasity Melvin (Turkey), Mann (Lithuania), Lauren Ervin (Turkey) and Carla Thomas (Croatia). The WNBA stipulates that Washington can have a maximum of 15 players on a training camp roster on any given day. The Mystics must trim their roster to a final 11 players by May 14.
