SI YANKS BITE OFF SUCCESS WITH PIZZA RATS PROMO

Without a doubt, the Staten Island Yankees bitten off success last season with their “Pizza Rats” promotion. Earning nation-wide notoriety for the promotion that saw the team adopt the moniker for every Saturday home game.

Born out of a 2016 attempt to rename the team permanently: famed design firm Brandiose designed the logos. After going through 2,000 entries, the Yankees narrowed down the possible names to five options including Heroes, Pizza Rats, Bridge Trolls, Rock Pigeons and Killer Bees.

The unusual name drew press coverage from all over including Sports Illustrated, ESPN, FOX News, MLB, Cheddar, and more. The name took the internet by storm, with over 96% of posts online being positive.

“We thought the Pizza Rats brand was fun and unique when we were in the planning stages, but when we announced it last year, it took off like we never imagined,” said Staten Island Yankees President/Operating Partner Will Smith.

Just how popular was the promotion? The Staten Island Pizza Rats hats were among the top selling hats in all Minor League Baseball. The team sold more 500% more Pizza Rats merchandise than all the merchandise they sold the year before in just the first two days alone. Overall, merchandise sales increased by over 1,000% in the previous season.

The ever-popular Pizza Rats promotion is returning for the 2019 season as once again on Saturday games they will take the field beginning on opening night.

The team will take the field in new red uniforms, different caps, and a new food item will be on the menu. During every Saturday game, Chank's Pizza Cones will be available, giving fans pizza on-the-go without the mess.

The second season of Pizza Rats baseball is already off to a delicious start with fresh, hot merchandise in the team store and sure to be just as popular this year as last.

YEAR-IN-REVIEW

2018 YEAR-IN-REVIEW

The 2018 season did not bring a championship or playoff berth for the Staten Island Yankees. But the season was not without positives. Despite a slow start, the Yankees were in playoff contention up until the end of the season.

Staten Island started the season going 4-11 in June with losses to the Brooklyn Cyclones, Lowell Spinners, Aberdeen IronBirds, Tri-City Valley Cats, and Connecticut Tigers.

Thanks to stellar pitching the Staten Island Yankees turned their season around. The team was defined by the stellar pitching staff that at one point was on pace to have the third-best team ERA in league history. Despite struggling after the All-Star Break the Baby Bombers finished the season leading the league in ERA (2.60), WHIP (1.19), and strikeout-to-walk ratio; while also being second in strikeouts (684) and walks allowed (201).

The pitching staff featured several of the best pitching prospects that the Yankees organization had to offer including 2017 first-round draft pick Clarke Schmidt, second-round pick Matt Sauer, standout international signee Roansy Contreras, and more. The staff was led by Travis Phelps who was in his third season as pitching coach.

“I take tremendous pride in it,” Phelps said at the end of the season. “It goes back to last year [2018] when [Jonathan] Loaisiga was here. He’s pitching in the big leagues now and guys I’ve had the last couple of years are in Double-A, Triple-A, and knocking on the door of the big leagues. You spend so much time with them. You love seeing them grow, having success, and being a part of it. You are not the reason, but you are a part of that growth.”

Schmidt made two starts for the Yankees as part of his return from Tommy John surgery and impressed many with his quality pitches and maturity on the hill. Sauer led the team with 67 innings pitched, pitching to a 3.90 ERA with 45 strikeouts. It was right-handed pitcher Harold Cortijo who was the unsung hero of the starting rotation, starting nine games and striking out 60 batters over 51 1/3 innings.

The staff saw a lot of turnover from promotions, injuries, and trades. Right-handed pitcher Luis Rijo was traded in the middle of the game on July 30 along with Tyler Austin to the Minnesota Twins for pitcher Lance Lynn. Thus, helping the big club on their road to the 2019 playoffs. The strong Staten Island pitching staff once again was called upon to help fortify the big-league club in September when Juan De Paul was traded along with Abiatal Avelino to the San Francisco Giants for outfielder Andrew McCutchen.

Pitchers like Nolan Martinez, Daniel Alvarez, Alex Mauricio, Brooks Kriske, Roansy Contreras, Shawn Semple, Christian Morris, and Chase Hodson earned promotions meaning a large portion of the pitching staff changed throughout the season.

“We’ve had a lot of rollover,” pitching coach Travis Phelps said at the end of the season, “we have continued to maintain our ability to shut teams down. I think our guys have done a tremendous job this year.”

New pitchers like Luis Gil, Tanner Myatt, Daniel Bies, Austin Gardner, and more came in and continued the success on the mound. Staten Island also reunited with right-handed pitcher Domingo Acevedo who returned for a two-game rehab stint while Erik Swanson joined the Yankees on a minor league rehab stint as well.

Out of the bullpen though it was right-handed Aaron McGarity who had one of the most impressive seasons. McGarity made 13 appearances and allowed just one earned run the entire season while striking out 32 over 25 2/3 innings of work. The only run he allowed came in his second inning of work on August 28 against the Hudson Valley Renegades, ending a 21-inning streak of not allowing an earned run.

“If I had to say, one guy who has taken a game to a different level, it would be him,” Phelps said about McGarity. “His ability to work ahead, change speeds, and work down in the zone. He has done a great job working down in the zone and locating his fastball. Whenever he does that, his slider and changeup have continued to improve in confidence every time he goes out there to the point where he has a good idea of what he is doing and how to set up hitters when he gets ahead of them.”

Defensively, the 2018 Staten Island Yankees were among the best the New York-Penn League had to offer. They committed the second-fewest errors (67) in the league and was fourth in the league in double plays turned with 62.

On the offensive side of the game, the Staten Island Yankees struggled. Their team batting average (.213) was the second lowest in the league, they had the lowest on-base percentage (.285), and the third lowest slugging percentage (.325).

At the plate, the Yankees had 29 different players stand in the batter’s box. Among them were 2018 second round draft pick Josh Breaux who got his first base hit with the team off Mets pitcher Noah Syndergaard. Breaux went on to hit .280/.295/.370 in 27 games, serving as the primary backstop for the team.

Breaux was not the only catcher, though. In total, the Staten Island Yankees used nine different catchers throughout the season. Among them was Ryan Lidge, the cousin of former major leaguer Brad Lidge.

Andres Chaparro and Kyle Gray were tied for the team lead in home runs, each with seven. Gray’s ability to barrel up the ball lead to a breakout August that saw him slug six home runs with 16 RBIs and seven walks.

Chaparro was among the several Yankees prospects that saw themselves make significant adjustments to their game during the 2018 season.

Yankees hitting coach Ken Joyce raved about some of the improvements that the hitters made throughout the season.

“To me, [Eduardo] Torrealba has made some good adjustments, [Jesus] Bastidas got a little bit better. At times [Junior] Soto, Gray, even though the results aren’t there with the average, I thought he made great strides hitting seven home runs coming in here to pro ball. Up and down the lineup, there are certain ways each guy improved,” Joyce told Pinstriped Prospects.

Torrealba ended his 2018 season with a steady string of games, hitting .378/.452/.473 over 24 games in August with five doubles, a triple, 12 RBIs, and eight walks.

One offensive highlight though was the return of Staten Island Yankees alumni Mike Ford who joined the team for a six-game rehab stint as he was working his way back from an oblique injury. Ford, Swanson, and Acevedo were among five players to join the Baby Bombers on minor league rehab assignments.

The Staten Island Yankees were in the playoff hunt right up until the end, finally being knocked out of the playoffs by the Brooklyn Cyclones in the last series. But despite that disappointment, they had many bright spots. Whether it was the stellar pitching, strong defense, or the big-name prospects that joined the team they certainly gave fans their money worth.

Self-Park garage for Richmond County Bank Ballpark open with an all-time low parking rate of $6

As progress continues on the North Shore developments, the Staten Island Yankees are excited to present a less expensive, more convenient parking option for the 2018 season as the new parking garage is open for self-park.

The new parking garage, formerly the ballpark's left field parking lot, will be available at an all-time low price of $6 for 2018 Staten Island Yankees home games, even less than the lot's regular commuter parking rate. This rate applies to Staten Island Yankees home games ONLY.

The garage can be accessed at the corner of Nicholas Street and Richmond Terrace, with the garage's entrance located a mere 500 feet from Richmond County Bank Ballpark's Hamilton Avenue Gate. The garage's physical address is 155 Richmond Terrace, but 224 Richmond Terrace, the adjacent street corner, can be used for GPS reference. For those accessing the garage via Richmond Terrace, walk-out access to street level is located on the third level, one level up from the Nicholas Street entrance.

For handicap access to the garage, fans can enter via Jersey Street and use shuttles operated by Impark that will transport riders to the ballpark's main gates.
