NBA DRAFT 2011 NOTES

- Eighty-nine players applied for early entry in NBA Draft 2011, including 69 players from U.S. colleges and institutions and 20 international players. Up until 2009, domestic early entry candidates had until 10 days prior to the draft to withdraw their names, provided they had not hired an agent. A rule change by the NCAA now requires players to withdraw their names by May 8 in order to retain their eligibility. International early entry candidates still have until 10 days prior to the draft to withdraw.
- Of the 60 players that were drafted in 2010, an all-time high 27 spent time in the NBA D-League this past season, the sixth in which NBA teams were allowed to assign first- and second-year players. They ranged from the 11th overall pick (Cole Aldrich, Oklahoma City Thunder) to the 59th selection (Stanley Robinson). Fifty-six players from the past four draft classes have played in the NBA D-League. In 2010-11, the NBA D-League's 10th season, 39 NBA players were assigned 56 times from 25 NBA teams, which are all record highs.
- This draft lacks a sure-fire number one selection for the first time since 2006, when the Toronto Raptors selected Andrea Bargnani with the top pick, ahead of LaMarcus Aldridge, Tyrus Thomas, Adam Morrison, and Brandon Roy. Greg Oden/Kevin Durant (2007), Derrick Rose (2008), Blake Griffin (2009), and John Wall (2010) were locks to go number one. There's no consensus at the top this year, with most general managers and scouts listing Duke's Kyrie Irving (point guard) and Arizona's Derrick Williams (combo forward) as the top two players on the board.
- This year's international crop is stronger at the top, with Jonas Valanciunas (Lithuania), Bismack Biyombo (Congo), Enes Kanter (Turkey), Donatas Motiejunas (Lithuania), and Jan Vesely (Czech Republic) all viewed as lottery-worthy selections. Only one international player who didn't play for a U.S. college in 2009-10 went in the first round in 2010: Kevin Seraphin, who the Bulls took with the 17th overall pick, then traded to Washington.
- The Cavaliers will make the number one selection for the fourth time in franchise history – Austin Carr (1971), Brad Daugherty (1986) and LeBron James (2003). Cleveland is the first team to have two picks in the top four since the inception of the lottery in 1985. The last team to pick twice in the top four was the Houston Rockets, who selected Ralph Sampson (1) and Rodney McCray (3) in 1983. The Milwaukee Bucks (1977), Atlanta Hawks (1975) and Detroit Pistons (1967) have each made two picks in the top four in the modern era of the draft (1966-present).
- The Timberwolves continued their lottery losing streak, falling to 0-for-14 and dropping for the eighth time. They had a 25 percent chance of winning after finishing with a league-worst 17-65 record. The highest Minnesota has ever picked is third, taking Christian Laettner in 1992 and O.J. Mayo in 2008. The team with worst record hasn't won the lottery since Orlando got Dwight Howard in 2004.
- Getting the No. 1 pick doesn't guarantee that you'll be making the playoffs right away. Only four No. 1 picks have won NBA Rookie of the Year and helped their teams into the playoffs that same season: David Robinson, Chris Webber, Tim Duncan, and Derrick Rose. Only five No. 1 picks have ever led the team that drafted them to an NBA championship since the NBA/ABA merger in 1976: Magic Johnson, James Worthy, Hakeem Olajuwon, Robinson, and Duncan.
- The Denver Nuggets own the 22nd overall pick in this year's NBA Draft. It's the first time Denver will be making a selection in the first round since 2005. That year, the Nuggets selected Julius Hodge (20th overall) and Jarrett Jack (22nd overall) in the first round.

- NBA teams continue to find quality players in the second round of the NBA Draft. Of the 30 players chosen in the second round of the 2010 Draft, 16 played in the NBA this past season. Detroit's Terrico White, the 36th overall pick in 2010, was on the Pistons' roster but didn't play due to injury. Twelve other players have their rights held by NBA teams. New York's Landry Fields (39th) averaged 9.7 points and 6.4 rebounds on his way to earning NBA All-Rookie First Team honors.
- At least one son of a former NBA player has been selected in the last eight NBA drafts: Mike Dunleavy (2002), Luke Walton (2003), Jackson Vroman (2004), Sean May (2005), Ronnie Brewer (2006), Al Horford (2007), Patrick Ewing Jr. (2008), Stephen Curry, Gerald Henderson and Austin Daye (2009), and Ed Davis (2010).
- The draft pool generally consists of college seniors, early entry candidates who've renounced their collegiate eligibility, international early entry candidates and international players who turn 22 during the same calendar year of the draft. Sometimes overlooked is the "also eligible" category, which includes players who've signed professional contracts in leagues other than the NBA before going through the regular NBA draft process, either by completing their collegiate eligibility or declaring early for the draft. In 2010, Latavious Williams of the Tulsa 66ers (NBA Development League) was selected by the Miami Heat with the 48th overall pick, then had his rights traded to Oklahoma City. Williams never enrolled in college before signing a professional contract, thus becoming eligible for the next draft. This year, there are three potential draft picks from the 'also eligible' category: Michael Dunigan (Oregon/Estonian League), Jamine Peterson (Providence/NBA D-League) and Jeremy Tyler (San Diego HS/Israel/Japan).
- This year marks the 27th Draft Lottery in NBA history. With a record of 48-34 in 2007-08, the Golden State Warriors are the winningest team in NBA history to qualify for the Draft Lottery. The previous winningest team was the 2000-2001 Houston Rockets (45-37). The Rockets finished 13th in the drawing and wound up drafting Richard Jefferson (who was later traded to New Jersey). In 1986, both the Los Angeles Clippers and Phoenix Suns sported the two best lottery team records at 32-50. The Clippers won the top pick, which was automatically sent to Philadelphia as part of trade. The Sixers then traded the pick to Cleveland, which selected Brad Daugherty No. 1 overall. The odds were again defied in 1993 as the Orlando Magic (41-41) jumped over 10 teams to claim the top pick, which they used to select Chris Webber, who was later traded to Golden State in exchange for Penny Hardaway and three future number one picks.
- Last year, two players who played in the 2010 Portsmouth Invitational Tournament heard their names called on draft night: Landry Fields (New York, 39th) and Hamady Ndiaye (Minnesota, 56th). Four others fought their way onto NBA rosters: Jeremy Lin (Golden State), Ben Uzoh (New Jersey), Marqus Blakely (Houston), and Ish Smith (Houston, Memphis). Another PIT standout from 2010 was DeShawn Sims, who was named the NBA Development League's Rookie of the Year.
- As the draft continues to get deeper each year, more 'first-round talents' get pushed into the second round. While the second round affords no guarantees, teams have taken to the idea of giving a three-year contract, at a reasonable price, to players they feel may have slipped through the cracks and have great potential. A three-year deal allows the team to secure the player's 'Bird rights,' meaning they can exceed the salary cap in order to re-sign him. In 2001, the Golden State Warriors nabbed Gilbert Arenas in the second round, but only signed him to a two-year deal, and were unable to match the offer sheet he signed with Washington in 2003.
- In the early days, the draft used to last as long as teams desired, with the proceedings ending only when every team tired of calling out names. As of 1973, the draft lasted an amazing 20 rounds (at least it did for the fledgling Buffalo Braves, who needed all the players they could get after winning only 21 games the season before). In 1974, the league adopted a 10-round NBA Draft, a format that stayed in place until 1985, when it was scaled back to seven rounds. After three years of seven-round drafts, the draft was shaved to three rounds in 1988 and to its current length of two rounds in 1989.

Section I. Player Eligibility.

(a) No player may sign a Contract or play in the NBA unless he has been eligible for selection in at least one (1) NBA Draft. No player shall be eligible for selection in more than two (2) NBA Drafts.

(b) A player shall be eligible for selection in the first NBA Draft with respect to which he has satisfied all applicable requirements of Section I(b)(i) below and one of the requirements of Section I(b)(ii) below:

(i) The player (A) is or will be at least 19 years of age during the calendar year in which the Draft is held, and (B) with respect to a player who is not an international player (defined below), at least one (1) NBA Season has elapsed since the player's graduation from high school (or, if the player did not graduate from high school, since the graduation of the class with which the player would have graduated had he graduated from high school); and

(ii)

(A) The player has graduated from a four-year college or university in the United States (or is to graduate in the calendar year in which the Draft is held) and has no remaining intercollegiate basketball eligibility; or

(B) The player is attending or previously attended a four-year college or university in the United States, his original class in such college or university has graduated (or is to graduate in the calendar year in which the Draft is held), and he has no remaining intercollegiate basketball eligibility; or

(C) The player has graduated from high school in the United States, did not enroll in a four-year college or university in the United States, and four calendar years have elapsed since such player's high school graduation; or

(D) The player did not graduate from high school in the United States, and four calendar years have elapsed since the graduation of the class with which the player would have graduated had he graduated from high school; or

(E) The player has signed a player contract with a 'professional basketball team not in the NBA' (defined below) that is located anywhere in the world, and has rendered services under such contract prior to the Draft; or

(F) The player has expressed his desire to be selected in the Draft in a writing received by the NBA at least sixty (60) days prior to such Draft (an 'Early Entry' player); or

(G) If the player is an 'international player' (defined below), and notwithstanding anything contained in subsections (A) through (F) above:

- (1) The player is or will be twenty-two (22) years of age during the calendar year of the Draft; or

(c) For purposes of this Article X, an 'International player' is a player: (i) who has maintained a permanent residence outside of the United States for at least the three (3) years prior to the Draft, while participating in the game of basketball as an amateur or as a professional outside of the United States; (ii) who has never previously enrolled in a college or university in the United States; and (iii) who did not complete high school in the United States.

Section 6. Application to 'Early Entry' Players.

If a player who is eligible for the Draft pursuant to Section 1(b)(ii)(F) or (b)(ii)(G)(3) above (an 'Early Entry' player) is selected in such Draft by a Team, the following rules apply:

- (a) Subject to Section 6(b) below, if the player does not thereafter play intercollegiate basketball, then the Team that drafted him shall, during the period from the date of such Draft to the date of the Draft in which the player would, absent his becoming an Early Entry player, first have been eligible to be selected, be the only Team with which the player may negotiate or sign a Player Contract, provided that such Team makes a Required Tender to the player each year by the date specified in Section 4(a) above. For purposes hereof, the Draft in which such player would, absent his becoming an Early Entry player, first have been eligible to be selected, will be deemed the 'Subsequent Draft' as to that player, and the rules applicable to a player who has been drafted in a Subsequent Draft will apply. If the player, having been selected in a Draft for which he was eligible as an Early Entry player, has not signed a Player Contract with the Team that drafted him in such Draft following a Required Tender by that Team and is not drafted in the Subsequent Draft (as defined in the previous sentence), he shall become a Rookie Free Agent.
- (b) If the player does thereafter play intercollegiate basketball, then the Team that drafted him shall retain the exclusive NBA rights to negotiate with and sign the player for the period ending one (1) year from the date of the Draft in which the player would, absent his becoming an Early Entry player, first have been eligible to be selected, provided that such Team makes a Required Tender to the player each year by the date specified in Section 4(a) above. For purposes hereof, the Draft in which such player would, absent his becoming an Early Entry player, first have been eligible to be selected, will be deemed the 'Initial Draft' as to that player. The next NBA Draft shall be deemed the 'Subsequent Draft' as to that player, and the rules applicable to a player who has been drafted in a Subsequent Draft will apply.

EARLY ENTRY CANDIDATE HISTORY

Following a lawsuit filed by Spencer Haywood, the NBA was required by the courts to grant admission to underclassmen even though their college classes had not graduated. Accordingly, in 1971 the league held a separate draft for underclassmen wishing to enter the NBA who displayed financial hardship. Beginning in 1972, such players were included in the regular NBA draft. In 1976, the hardship requirement was eliminated and the current Early Entry procedure was adopted whereby any athlete with remaining college eligibility who desires to enter the NBA Draft may do so by renouncing his college eligibility in a letter to the Commissioner postmarked 45 days before the draft.
