NBA DRAFT 2012 NOTES

- Sixty-six players applied for early entry in NBA Draft 2012, including 49 players from U.S. colleges and institutions and 17 international players. Up until 2009, domestic early entry candidates had until 10 days prior to the draft to withdraw their names, provided they had not hired an agent. A rule change by the NCAA now requires players to withdraw their names by April 8 in order to retain their eligibility. International early entry candidates still have until 10 days prior to the draft to withdraw.
- Of the 60 players that were drafted in 2011, 14 spent time in the NBA D-League this past season, the seventh in which NBA teams were allowed to assign first- and second-year players. They ranged from the 14th overall pick (Marcus Morris, Houston Rockets) to the 52nd selection (Vernon Macklin, Detroit Pistons). Eighty-one players from the past four draft classes have played in the NBA D-League. In 2011-12, the NBA D-League's 11th season, 44 NBA players were assigned 67 times from 25 NBA teams, both record highs.
- Kentucky's Anthony Davis is the consensus top pick heading into this year's draft. He stands to have some familiar company on Draft Night, as college teammates Michael Kidd-Gilchrist and Terrence Jones are likely lottery selections, while Marquis Teague and Doron Lamb have a good shot to be drafted in the first round. Sixth man Darius Miller also figures to hear his name called in the second round. The only school in Draft history to have six players selected in one draft is UNLV in 1977. Since the Draft went to a two-round format in 1989, there have been four schools – Connecticut (2006), Florida (2007), Kansas (2008) and Kentucky (2010) with five players picked in the same draft.
- There are no international players expected to be drafted in the lottery this year. Last year marked the first year there have been four international players (who didn't play for a U.S. college) selected in the lottery – Enes Kanter (3rd, Turkey), Jonas Valanciunas (5th, Lithuania), Jan Vesely (6th, Czech Republic) and Bismack Biyombo (7th, Republic of Congo). Evan Fournier of France is considered a potential first-round pick heading into this year's Draft.
- NBA teams continue to find quality players in the second round of the NBA Draft. Sacramento's Isaiah Thomas, the 60th overall pick in the 2011 NBA Draft, went on to capture NBA All-Rookie Second Team honors, after averaging 11.5 points and 4.1 assists, while shooting 45 percent from the field in 65 games. Houston's Chandler Parsons, the 38th overall selection, earned NBA All-Rookie Second Team honors, averaging 9.5 points, 4.8 rebounds and 2.1 assists in 63 games.
- This year marks the second time in franchise history the New Orleans Hornets will make the number one selection. In 1991, the Charlotte Hornets used the top overall choice to select UNLV's Larry Johnson, who went on to capture 1991-92 Rookie of the Year honors. In 1992, the Hornets had the second overall pick and selected Georgetown's Alonzo Mourning. In 1999, the Hornets drafted UCLA's Baron Davis with the third overall pick. The Hornets also own the 10th overall selection in this year's Draft. The Portland Trail Blazers have two lottery picks as well, picking sixth and 11th overall.
- Getting the No. 1 pick doesn't guarantee that you'll be making the playoffs right away. Only four No. 1 picks have won NBA Rookie of the Year and helped their teams into the playoffs that same season: David Robinson, Chris Webber, Tim Duncan, and Derrick Rose. Only five No. 1 picks have ever led the team that drafted them to an NBA championship since the NBA/ABA merger in 1976: Magic Johnson, James Worthy, Hakeem Olajuwon, Robinson, and Duncan.
- There were seven college seniors selected in the first round of the 2011 NBA Draft. Of the 30 players selected in the first round, 19 had at least two year's experience at the college level. There were six college freshman selected, four shy of the record 10 in 2008.

- Since the lottery moved to its present format in 1994, the team with (or tied for) the best odds has won just three of the 19 lotteries: Philadelphia in 1996 (selected Allen Iverson); Cleveland in 2003 (selected LeBron James); and Orlando in 2004 (selected Dwight Howard). The NBA Draft Lottery began in 1985. Since that time, every team in the NBA has had at least one lottery pick. The San Antonio Spurs have had the longest lottery drought among all teams, having not been in the lottery since selecting Tim Duncan No. 1 overall in 1997. The Sacramento Kings are in the lottery for the sixth consecutive year, the longest active streak.
- At least one son of a former NBA player has been selected in the last nine NBA drafts: Mike Dunleavy (2002), Luke Walton (2003), Jackson Vroman (2004), Sean May (2005), Ronnie Brewer (2006), Al Horford (2007), Patrick Ewing Jr. (2008), Stephen Curry, Gerald Henderson and Austin Daye (2009), Ed Davis (2010) and Klay Thompson and Nolan Smith (2011).
- This year marks the 28th Draft Lottery in NBA history. With a record of 48-34 in 2007-08, the Golden State Warriors are the winningest team in NBA history to qualify for the Draft Lottery. The previous winningest team was the 2000-2001 Houston Rockets (45-37). The Rockets finished 13th in the drawing and wound up drafting Richard Jefferson (who was later traded to New Jersey). In 1986, both the Los Angeles Clippers and Phoenix Suns sported the two best lottery team records at 32-50. The Clippers won the top pick, which was automatically sent to Philadelphia as part of trade. The Sixers then traded the pick to Cleveland, which selected Brad Daugherty No. 1 overall. The odds were again defied in 1993 as the Orlando Magic (41-41) jumped over 10 teams to claim the top pick, which they used to select Chris Webber, who was later traded to Golden State in exchange for Penny Hardaway and three future number one picks.
- Last year, three players who played in the 2011 Portsmouth Invitational Tournament heard their names called on Draft Night. Marquette's Jimmy Butler was taken by the Chicago Bulls in the first round (30th overall). The College of Charleston's Andrew Goudelock was chosen 46th overall by the Los Angeles Lakers, while Florida's Vernon Macklin was drafted by the Detroit Pistons with the 52nd overall pick. Two other Portsmouth participants cracked the NBA: UTEP's Julian Stone spent the entire season with the Denver Nuggets, while San Diego State's Malcolm Thomas had stints with the San Antonio Spurs, Houston Rockets and Los Angeles Lakers.
- As the draft continues to get deeper each year, more "first-round talents" get pushed into the second round. While the second round affords no guarantees, teams have taken to the idea of giving a three-year contract, at a reasonable price, to players they feel may have slipped through the cracks and have great potential. A three-year deal allows the team to secure the player's "Bird rights," meaning they can exceed the salary cap in order to re-sign him. In 2001, the Golden State Warriors nabbed Gilbert Arenas in the second round, but only signed him to a two-year deal, and were unable to match the offer sheet he signed with Washington in 2003.
- In the early days, the draft used to last as long as teams desired, with the proceedings ending only when every team tired of calling out names. As of 1973, the draft lasted an amazing 20 rounds (at least it did for the fledgling Buffalo Braves, who needed all the players they could get after winning only 21 games the season before). In 1974, the league adopted a 10-round NBA Draft, a format that stayed in place until 1985, when it was scaled back to seven rounds. After three years of seven-round drafts, the draft was shaved to three rounds in 1988 and to its current length of two rounds in 1989.

(i) The player (A) is or will be at least 19 years of age during the calendar year in which the Draft is held, and (B) with respect to a player who is not an international player (defined below), at least one (1) NBA Season has elapsed since the player's graduation from high school (or, if the player did not graduate from high school, since the graduation of the class with which the player would have graduated had he graduated from high school); and

(A) The player has graduated from a four-year college or university in the United States (or is to graduate in the calendar year in which the Draft is held) and has no remaining intercollegiate basketball eligibility; or

(B) The player is attending or previously attended a four-year college or university in the United States, his original class in such college or university has graduated (or is to graduate in the calendar year in which the Draft is held), and he has no remaining intercollegiate basketball eligibility; or

(C) The player has graduated from high school in the United States, did not enroll in a four-year college or university in the United States, and four calendar years have elapsed since such player's high school graduation; or

(D) The player did not graduate from high school in the United States, and four calendar years have elapsed since the graduation of the class with which the player would have graduated had he graduated from high school; or

If a player who is eligible for the Draft pursuant to Section 1(b)(ii)(F) or (b)(ii)(G)(3) above (an 'Early Entry' player) is selected in such Draft by a Team, the following rules apply:

- (a) Subject to Section 6(b) below, if the player does not thereafter play intercollegiate basketball, then the Team that drafted him shall, during the period from the date of such Draft to the date of the Draft in which the player would, absent his becoming an Early Entry player, first have been eligible to be selected, be the only Team with which the player may negotiate or sign a Player Contract, provided that such Team makes a Required Tender to the player each year by the date specified in Section 4(a) above. For purposes hereof, the Draft in which such player would, absent his becoming an Early Entry player, first have been eligible to be selected, will be deemed the 'Subsequent Draft' as to that player, and the rules applicable to a player who has been drafted in a Subsequent Draft will apply. If the player, having been selected in a Draft for which he was eligible as an Early Entry player, has not signed a Player Contract with the Team that drafted him in such Draft following a Required Tender by that Team and is not drafted in the Subsequent Draft (as defined in the previous sentence), he shall become a Rookie Free Agent.

EARLY ENTRY CANDIDATE HISTORY

Following a lawsuit filed by Spencer Haywood, the NBA was required by the courts to grant admission to underclassmen even though their college classes had not graduated. Accordingly, in 1971 the league held a separate draft for underclassmen wishing to enter the NBA who displayed financial hardship. Beginning in 1972, such players were included in the regular NBA draft. In 1976, the hardship requirement was eliminated and the current Early Entry procedure was adopted whereby any athlete with remaining college eligibility who desires to enter the NBA Draft may do so by renouncing his college eligibility in a letter to the Commissioner postmarked 45 days before the draft.
