A Message From
Deane R. Beman
PGA Tour Commissioner

The PGA Tour has a realistic goal—to present the finest expression of competitive golf in the world. Part of the goal, too, is to encourage a desire among those who play the game to become even more skillful and to develop an interest in the sport among non-golfers.

With the cooperation of our cosponsors, the PGA Tour provides a stage on which the finest golfers in the world compete nearly every week of the year which also serves to inspire golfers of all abilities to become better players. Television, with its millions of armchair fans, has helped develop interest among those who did not play the game before first turning on their TV sets.

At the same time we feel our players represent a side of professional sports that is unique in this age. Golf demands that each player also serves as a referee, and he is obliged to call penalties on himself. No other sport asks as much of professional athletes, and we feel that the PGA Tour professional epitomizes the best in sportmanship.

BEST 1977 FINISH: T-10—Tucson Open.

1977 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered-29; In money-17; Top ten finishes-1; Stroke avg.-73.08.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1960 Western Amateur and 1969 Canadian Open (non-Tour event). 1959 Walker Cup team. 1969 and 1973 Ryder Cup team.

Tommy Aaron tried mightily to reverse his scoring slump in 1977 and his start looked promising. He tied for 10th in his second tournament of the year, the Joe Garagiola-Tuscon Open, winning $3,850. Unfortunately, it turned out to be his best finish of an otherwise lackluster year.

For 13 years Aaron had been a regular on the PGA Tour's list of top 60 money winners. During that span he won the 1973 Masters in his native Georgia.

The slender man with the picture, upright swing won the Georgia Open three times and the Georgia and Southeastern Amateur twice each before turning pro in 1960. He also was a finalist in the 1958 U.S. Amateur and won the 1960 Western Amateur before venturing out on the PGA Tour the following year.

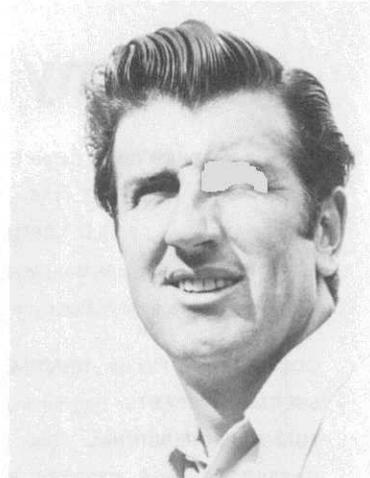

From 1961 through 1973, Aaron never missed the top 60 money list, despite the fact that victory eluded him until the 1969 Canadian Open. Meanwhile, he acquired a reputation for second-place finishes until he beat Sam Snead in an 18-hole playoff in Canada. The Canadian was not a PGA Tour event that year, but Aaron considers it a national title.

The following year he silenced the "brides maid" talk by winning the Atlanta Classic, beating back challenges of Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, Tom Weiskopf and Jack Nicklaus, all of whom lurked within three strokes at one point or another in the closing holes.

Late in 1974, Aaron displayed some encouraging signs by surviving the cut in 11 of 13 tournaments, but the 11 finishes were not solid enough to keep him from falling out of the top 60 money list for the first time in his career.

In 1976 he entered 30 tournaments and made a check in 18, while missing the cut 10 times. His stroke average was 73.9 going into the Masters, but he improved it before the year was out to 72.5.

George Archer's return to the good times in 1977, in which he regained his place among the Top 60 money winners after a three-year absence, actually began in the Fall of the previous year. That's when he said he surprised even himself by winning the Del Webb Sahara Invitational.

After sinking to a low point in his long career in 1975 with less than $10,000 in official earnings, Archer kept telling everyone who asked during 1976 that his game was recovering. "My hand is getting stronger," he said, referring to his left hand that was almost powerless from a torn tendon in the wrist, requiring surgery in the spring of 1975.

But, entering the Sahara Invitational, he had won only $8,062 for all of 1976, and $4,700 of that resulted from a fourth-place finish in the Quad Cities Open. Then he strung together rounds of 67-66-69-69 to win by two strokes over Dave Hill and Don January.

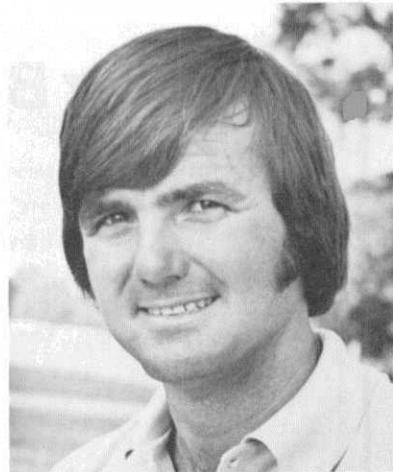

"I really didn't expect to win this year," Archer said, "but I knew my game was getting good enough to win next year."

Exceptionally tall men like Archer seldom play the game with excellence, and no other man standing 6-feet-5 has accomplished what George has in Golf. A legendary putting stroke has helped overcome whatever shortcomings tall men are supposed to experience.

Archer began playing golf at age 12 around his native San Francisco and he gathered an exceptional amateur record before he turned pro 13 years later. In 1963 alone he won the Trans-Mississippi Amateur, the Northern California Open and the San Francisco City title, reached the semifinals of the U.S. Amateur and was low amateur for the third straight year in the Lucky International in his home town.

As a pro he has won 12 events, including three in 1968, but the year following was his most memorable when he captured the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am and his one major championship when he beat out Billy Casper, George Knudson and Tom Weiskopf to take the Masters.

Wally Armstrong's official earnings dipped only a few hundred dollars last year, but it wasn't because he wasn't trying. He played a herculean schedule of 35 tournaments. He made checks for seven straight weeks through the Pleasant Valley Classic, missed the cut in Canada, then earned eight straight checks through the Ohio Kings.

Wally's life is marked by diligence. He not only works hard on the PGA Tour, but he is active in the Tour's Bible study group.

He started golf at age 12 on a nine-hole course outside his home in Indianapolis. His game progressed markedly in high school and he won the State scholastic title in 1963. He accepted a scholarship to the University of Florida, where he captained the Gators in 1967 and earned All-America honors.

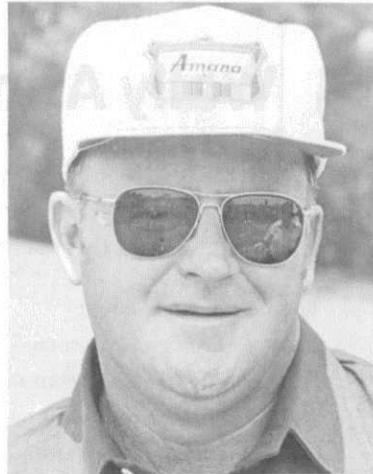

He turned pro in 1970 but missed in the Tour Qualifying School twice before earning his Approved Tournament Player's card late in 1973. Success on the mini-tours had convinced him, meanwhile, that he would make it someday.

His rookie year of 1974 was divided into two segments of accomplishments. In the first five months, Wally made the cut in only one major event and earned $262.66 at Los Angeles. The remainder of the year he collected more than $30,000 and finished strongly with a tie for second at Las Vegas and for third at San Antonio.

"Part of it was just getting adjusted to the Tour," Armstrong said, "and part of it was the teamwork that developed with my younger brother, Tom. He was my caddie from the Gleason, late in February of 1974, until the Atlanta Classic in 1975."

He missed the cut in half of his 34 events in 1975, but he was second to Jerry McGee at Tallahassee, among five finishes in the top 10. He improved greatly in 1976 by missing the cut only seven times in 35 starts, with a tie for third at Houston the best of his seven top 10 finishes.

When pros reach Miller Barber's age, 47 this March 31, there is normally some talk that his skills are in decline. Barber went without a victory for three years following the 1974 Ohio Kings Island Open, but he stayed close to the $100,000 level in money-winnings without apparent problems. Then, late last season, he struck yet another blow for the PGA Tour's relative oldtimers.

Entering the final round of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic early last October, Barber trailed leader George Archer by six shots. But on Sunday at Silverado CC in Napa, Calif., Barber put a seven-under 65 on the board and won the $40,000 first prize by two shots!

From 1967 through 1974, Barber won one tournament a year, and only Jack Nicklaus matched that consistency of performance over those same eight seasons. In the late Winter of 1975-76 he picked up a check for $911 by tying for 43rd in the Tournament Players Championship. This off-form effort would have gone unnoticed except for the fact that it made him the 10th player to pass $1 million in PGA Tour purses.

Barber remains one of the busiest players on the Tour. In 1976 he played in 34 events and made money in 26, the same number he cashed checks from in 1975 while playing in 33. He hasn't missed the Top 60 money list since 1962, his fourth year on Tour.

Barber first ventured out on the Tour in 1959, but he did not make it a full-time occupation until members of the Apawamis Club in Rye, N.Y., where he was serving as pro, urged him to give it his best effort. Starting in 1963 he never was close to falling out of the Top 60.

In 1973 he lost playoffs to Jack Nicklaus at New Orleans and to Bert Greene in the L&M Open, but the year was to wind up as his most lucrative. In the first World Open at Pinehurst, N.C. which carried the first half-million-dollar total purse, Barber won the record $100,000 first prize at the end of 144 holes.

1977 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered-33; In money-22; Top ten finishes-8; Stroke avg.-71.61.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1974 Eastern Amateur and Falstaff Amateur champion. 1975 Dixie Amateur and Western Amateur champion, semi-finalist U.S. Amateur. All-America selection and captain of University of Florida golf team.

It was inevitable that Andy Bean would become a professional golfer. As a youngster, he lived on Jekyll Island, Ga., where his father was associated with a golf course.

When Andy was 15 the family moved to Lakeland where his father purchased a course and named it Jekyll-Hyde. "I've been lucky," says the big, good-natured fellow, because my parents never made me do much work around the course. They let me go play." And play he did.

During the early 1970s, he was one of the nation's outstanding amateurs. In 1974 he won the Eastern and Falstaff Amateurs. In 1975, he won the prestigious Western Amateur, plus the Dixie Amateur and was a semi-finalist in the U.S. Amateur, losing to Fred Ridley, the eventual winner.

Andy also gained All-America honors while at the University of Florida and was co-captain of the golf team.

When you look at Andy, it is easy to visualize this six-foot-four, 210-pounder in football pads. He laughs, "I did play football for a couple of years in high school, but when I could see all the guys getting bigger than me, I figured it was time to quit and concentrate on golf."

Andy turned professional in the fall of 1975 and attended the Qualifying School at Walt Disney World. He finished in seventh place.

During his rookie year of 1976 on the PGA Tour, his play was disappointing, especially to himself. "It was mainly temperment," he said. "I knew I had the game to play out here, but when I'd make a mistake I'd get hot at myself, and that would make everything worse. I wasn't able to manage my game."

His best PGA Tour event finish was a tie for 17th in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic. He won $10,761 for 139th place that year.

"The last couple of months of 1976, I spent a lot of time going over the things I felt I did wrong," he said. "I was better prepared when I went west for the Phoenix Open. My game was in a lot better condition and I was hopeful that my temperament was, too."

Andy tied for 19th in the Phoenix Open and then he started the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open with a 74. On the second day, though, Andy turned in a sparkling 64 and that was the day the new year dawned. He finished tied for 10th.

After a so-so effort in the Bing Crosby, he tied for seventh in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open and followed with a solo fourth in the Hawaiian Open.

The week prior to his victory in the Doral-Eastern Open, he missed the cut in the Florida Citrus Open. "That hurt my pride," he said. "I was glad to see Gary Koch win, though (they were teammates at the University of Florida)." The Monday of Doral week, when Andy congratulated him, Gary responded, "If I can win Citrus, you can win Doral."

Andy led all four days on the Blue Monster course and the victory became a birthday present. He was 24 on the final day, March 13.

Frank Beard failed to crack the top 100 money-winners in 1977, but he did improve on 1976 by about $7,000. It was disappointing, however, because at the end of 1976 Frank had tied for third at Pensacola, and his followers were hopeful.

A year and a half earlier, in the 1975 U.S. Open at Medinah, Beard had reason to hope that his long slump was ending when he held a three-shot lead over Tom Watson entering the final round. But he slipped to a final 78 and a tie for third position.

The slide from leading money-winner in 1969 was gradual until 1972 when Frank earned only about half as much as in the previous year. He improved slightly in 1973, thanks to a check for $23,200 for losing a four-way playoff in the $300,000 World Open.

But in 1974 he earned $16,000 less, and 1975 marked his least official earnings in more than a decade. Except for the U.S. Open, in which he finished only a shot out of the playoff between John Mahaffey and eventual winner Lou Graham, a tie for ninth at Quad Cities was his best of 1975. He made money in only a third of the 36 tournaments he entered that year.

Before his tie for third at Pensacola at the end of 1976, Frank's best that year was a tie for 20th at Milwaukee. He entered 36 tournaments and made money in only 10.

Beard won 11 events in his first nine years on the PGA Tour, disregarding the brief appearance in 1962. He won the Tournament of Champions twice, and in five straight years beginning in 1967 he earned more than $100,000.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1965 Rookie of the Year. Winner 1965 Mexican Open. 1973 Ryder Cup team.

Homero Blancas has been bothered by a variety of ailments in recent years. Blancas underwent knee surgery following the 1974 season. He said he developed bad habits in his swing because of his knee and that was the cause of his two-year slump. Last year he was bothered by back problems. The result of all this was a three-year drop out of the Top 60 money list, and in 1977 an alarming dive to 132nd.

The drop last year would have been even worse, except for a tie for 10th place at San Antonio which awarded Homero with his best of only 10 checks in 1977, $3,450. Earlier, he missed the cut in seven straight events he entered, Kemper through Westchester.

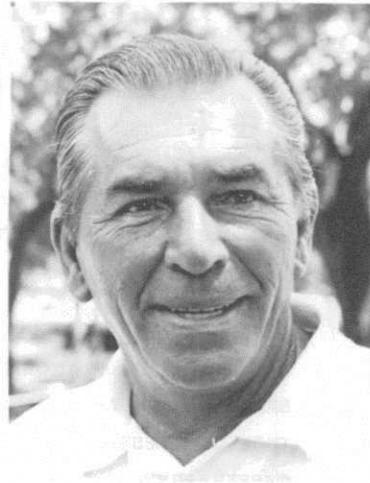

Blancas attracted considerable attention as an amateur, especially during his years at the University of Houston in the early 1960s. He scored 55 one day on the 5,002-yard Premier course in Longview, Tex., and twice he was chosen to the All-America teams.

After turning pro and joining the PGA Tour, he won the Mexican Open and, although that event was not an official one on the U.S. tour, he was chosen Rookie-of-the-Year for 1965. He won at Seattle the following year for the first of four official victories on the PGA Tour.

The year 1970 was apparently his finest, as he won the Colonial National Invitation in his home state of Texas and bettered $100,000 in purses accumulated. At Fort Worth, Homero beat out Lee Trevino and Gene Littler by a stroke each.

After a dip in earnings in 1971, Blancas returned to the $90,000 level in both 1972 and 1973, winning the Phoenix and Monsanto Opens, respectively. While defending at Phoenix in 1973, he scored 31-30-61, which stood through the entire schedule as low round that year. He also qualified for the Ryder Cup team in 1973.

For two years, Julius Boros was within $10,000 of the $1 million level in career earnings on the PGA Tour, and last year he played until he reached it. Julius tied for 59th in the Pleasant Valley Classic, and though his check for $493.75 hardly paid his expenses that week in July, it lifted him over the barrier to become the Tour's 14th millionaire. Later that afternoon, however, Raymond Floyd won the $50,000 first prize and he, too, became the winner of more than $1 million on the PGA Tour.

Boros turned his back on a career as an accountant and headed out on the PGA Tour in 1950 at age 30. He became one of the all-time gallery favorites. Two years later he won the U.S. Open at Northwood in Dallas and 11 years after that he captured the same title at Brookline, Mass., by defeating Arnold Palmer and Jacky Cupit in a playoff.

His third major title was the PGA Championship, which he won in 1968 at San Antonio by again beating back a challenge from Palmer. Several weeks later he won his 18th tour event at Westchester at age 48. He has not won on the Tour since.

It was at Westchester that Boros came closest to victory again, when in 1975 he lost a playoff to Gene Littler on the first hole. He paced himself through the extreme heat to score rounds of 70-66-70-65 for a remarkable total of 17-under 271. He bogeyed the first extra hole to lose.

Boros has said he will continue to play the Tour as long as he is able, but he has been troubled with back and hip ailments in recent years. When asked not long ago about retiring, Julius replied, "Retire to what? I already play golf and fish for a living."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1973 Canadian Amateur and 1974 Porter Cup, North-South Amateur, and New York State Amateur. As professional, won 1975 Scandinavian Open and 1975 Kerrygold (Ireland). 1975 Walker Cup team and 1975 World Amateur Cup team.

Victory continued to elude George Burns in 1977, but it was only his second full year on the PGA Tour and triumph was just inches from his grasp twice in North Carolina. He tied for second at both the Greater Greensboro and Kemper Opens.

Burns came on Tour from the Fall 1975 Qualifying School, in which he was runnerup to Jerry Pate. In his first full year, 1976, he was third three times, in the Crosby National Pro-Am, the Houston Open and the World Open, and earned more than $85,000. Only Pate and Bob Gilder surpassed that showing among rookies that year.

At Houston in 1976, he was in front late in the afternoon of the final day but his putter betrayed him down the stretch. At Pinehurst, in the World Open, he was tied for the lead after the first round, led alone after the second and third but closed with 73 and wound up a stroke out of the playoff between Raymond Floyd and Jerry McGee.

"I've been in position to win before, but I think I started to count the money too early," he said of those near misses.

Burns was too busy playing all sports in high school on Long Island to concentrate on golf. He lettered in football and basketball and entered the University of Maryland with the primary purpose of playing football, in addition to earning a degree.

He was a defensive end for the Terps, but recalls, "I realized I wasn't going to go anywhere in football." He concentrated on golf from his freshman year forward.

However, it was a full year after his graduation before he blossomed as a force in amateur golf. While working for two years in the New York City area in sales and promotion, he had a chance to play often, and in 1973 he won the Canadian Amateur. The following year Burns won the Porter Cup, North-South Amateur and the New York State Amateur.

Burns was selected to play on the Walker Cup team in 1975 and also on the U.S. side in the World Amateur team championship. "Playing for my country on those teams always will be among the biggest enjoyments I've had in sports," he says today.

It is easy to point to Billy Casper's recent record on the PGA Tour and figure that the middle-aged gentleman is probably content to be tending his fruit orchards in Utah. But the competitive fires which helped him win three major championships and almost $1.7 million still burn.

As recently as 1975 Casper topped the $100,000 level for the eighth time in a 10-year stretch, commendable enough for a man who plays in fewer than two dozen events a year. That year, after skipping three straight tournaments while wife Shirley was presenting him with their 10th child, Billy won his 51st tour tournament with a 17-under total of 271 at New Orleans.

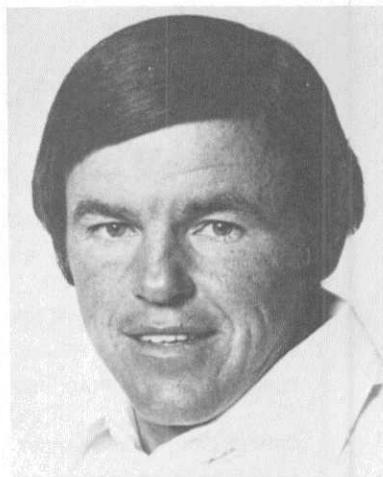

In 1976 he scored the first sub-30 for nine holes of his competitive career with a 29 on the back nine at El Dorado during the Bob Hope Desert Classic. He held a one-stroke lead until the final round, when a 74 dropped him to ninth place.

Often forgotten is the fact that Casper was the second man to earn $1 million in purses, when he won the Los Angeles Open in January 1970. He topped the golden barrier less than two years after Arnold Palmer did so.

The year 1970 also was notable for his winning the Masters title in an 18-hole playoff with fellow San Diego great Gene Littler.

Five times Casper won the Vardon Trophy, which is awarded annually to the member of the PGA of America with the lowest scoring average for at least 80 official rounds on Tour. Casper also qualified to play on eight straight Ryder Cup teams, from 1961 through 1975.

At the end of the 1975 and 1976 PGA Tour seasons, Jim Colbert was able to muster strong finishes which kept his career on track. However, in 1977 he was forced to drop off the Tour for seven straight weeks in the Spring and Summer because of a bad knee and he didn't return to form. Jim fell to 106th on the money list, his lowest since he was a rookie.

Colbert earned four straight checks from the Heritage through New Orleans, providing almost $12,000 of his year's total of $20,102. However, after excusing himself from the Tour the next seven weeks, his best finish was a tie for 17th in the Canadian Open.

In 1975, Colbert was securely in the Top 60 money list for the year, but he teamed with Dean Refram to win the Walt Disney World National Team Championship to extend his string of victory years to four. A year later, he needed a high finish late in the schedule to stay among the Top 60, and he got it by tying for fourth in the Southern Open and cashing a check for $4,637.

Although born in New Jersey, Colbert grew up in Kansas and was an all-State football player and winner of the Kansas State Junior golf title at age 11. He entered Kansas State University on a football scholarship but golf was to be his career, especially after placing second in the 1964 NCAA championship.

Jim easily cracked the Top 60 money list in his second year on the Tour and, after falling out of the top 100 in 1968, he won the Monsanto Open the following year in Pensacola. He won the Greater Milwaukee Open in 1972 and closed with a 65 to finish second to Jack Nicklaus at Westchester, earning $53,350 in those two events alone.

Colbert added a victory at Jacksonville in 1973 but his best year was still ahead. A week after placing fifth in the 1974 U.S. Open at Winged Foot, Jim entered the final round of the American Golf Classic trailing Forrest Fezler by three strokes. A final 70 at Firestone landed him in a four-way playoff, which he won on the second hole for the $34,000 first prize.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1966 British Amateur, 1974 World Cup individual title; joined with Dale Hayes to win team title for South Africa. Winner 1975 South African Open. Represented South Africa in 1970, 1974 and 1976 World Cup. Has won 10 professional tournaments in South Africa.

Bobby Cole waited a long time for the 1977 Buick Open. He had labored for nine years on the PGA Tour without tasting victory, but that moment came on the Elks Country Club course in Flint, Mich., last September when he won the $20,000 first-place check by a stroke over Fred Marti.

"I always felt I was good enough to win in America," the slim South African said, "but I could never be consistent enough. I finished second twice, to Lee Trevino in the 1974 New Orleans Open and to Hale Irwin in the 1975 Western Open, but that was as close as I could come."

He had known success elsewhere, though, and that added to his frustrations here. As an 18-year-old in 1966, he won the British Amateur. Three times he has represented his homeland in the World Cup competition, and, in 1974, he won the individual title and joined with Dale Hayes to capture the team title, too.

"That," he says with emphasis, "was one of the biggest weeks of my life."

Bobby started to play golf at age 11 because of a knee injury, suffered while competing in a rugby match. "I was told I had to give up sports that required running," he said.

He was a powerful hitter of the ball and it wasn't long until he was being compared with the great Gary Player. "As a kid, I looked up to Gary, just as youngsters in this country look up to Jack Nicklaus or Arnold Palmer. You get certain impressions, and sub-consciously, I suppose, I copied him and our mannerisms became similar."

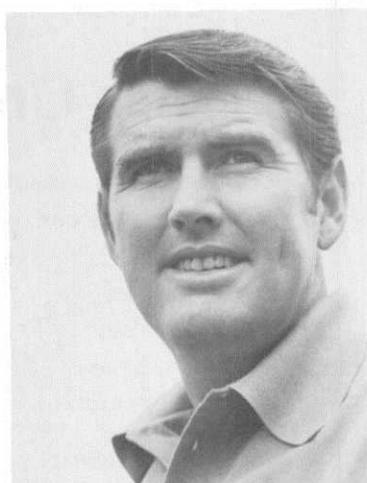

He has won 10 times in South Africa, but his lone national title is the 1974 South African Open.

He prefers to play a left-to-right game, but adds with a grin, "that can change from week to week. Generally, driving is the strongest part of my game, and it has been my putting that has hurt me."

The week before the Buick, he finished tied for 10th in the Colgate Hall of Fame Classic in Pinehurst, and that set up the victory. "I was playing well and went to Flint with a lot of confidence," he added.

He was tied for the lead until the 71st hole and it was there that he won it. He lofted a six iron to within 2½ feet on the par three hole and made it. He finished with a 17-under 271.

The tall, quiet man from Texas with the distinctive follow-through on his golf swing passed his 40th birthday last year by playing his way into the Top 60 money list very comfortably for the 13th straight year.

Coody ventured out on the PGA Tour 15 years ago after a productive amateur career which included 30 victories in his native Texas alone. He qualified for the 1960 and '61 U.S. Opens while serving a three-year hitch in the Air Force. He reached the semifinals of the U.S. Amateur in 1962, earning an invitation to play in the Masters. This major championship was to provide Coody with perhaps his greatest moments in the game.

He led the 1969 Masters by a single stroke with three holes to play, but he decided to play defensively and he bogeyed in to fall to fifth place. Two years later he closed with birdie-birdie-par-par and won.

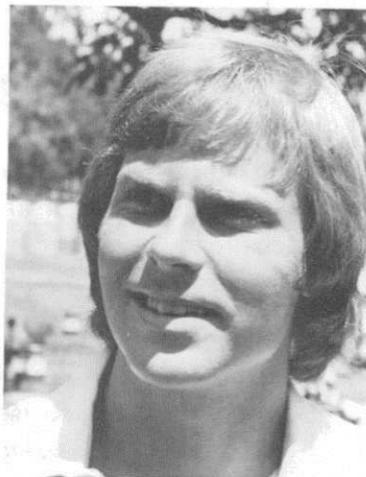

That major title earned him a spot in the 1971 World Series of Golf, then a four-man event, and he won the $50,000 first prize, which was considered unofficial money at the time.

Coody has been winless since then on the PGA Tour, but in 1973 he won twice in Great Britain, the Wills Open in England and the John Player Classic in Turnberry, Scotland.

The year 1975 was to yield his second highest total in dollars to that time, more than $86,000, although he began modestly enough by missing the cut in three of his first four tournaments. In 1976 his most notable performances included a tie for fifth in the Masters and a tie for eighth in the PGA Championship.

During the rain-interrupted PGA at Congressional CC outside Washington, Coody fired a third-round 67 for a two-stroke lead. However, he slipped to 10 strokes higher in the last round.

It appeared that Ben Crenshaw might top his 1976 season when he won the 1977 Colonial National in early May in Fort Worth, but 1976 proved to be a tough act to follow. In 1976, Ben's third full year on the PGA Tour, Crenshaw won three tournaments and more than a quarter-million dollars.

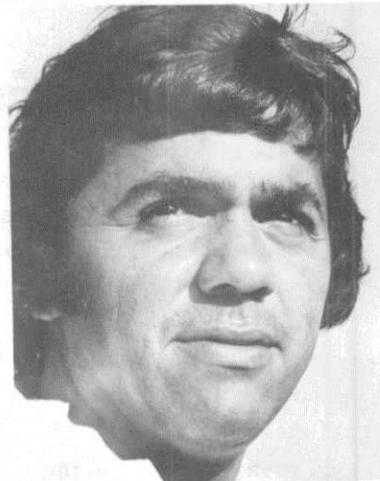

In mid-Summer 1977 Ben suffered through an inexplicable period when he failed to break 80 in three straight rounds in the Canadian and Greater Hartford Opens. Then, during the first round of the PGA Championship at Pebble Beach, he asked to be excused before turning in a score for nine holes.

Crenshaw came to the Tour in the Fall of 1973 after compiling an amateur record seldom authored by anyone. It didn't include the U.S. Amateur title, but he did win the NCAA championship three years running, sharing it with U. of Texas teammate Tom Kite in 1972.

In his first appearance after earning his approved Tournament Player's card for the PGA Tour, he won the San Antonio-Texas Open. He followed with a second place in the 1973 World Open, then a 144-hole, $500,000 event, and wound up the short year with more than $76,000 earned in only nine tournaments. He also averaged 69.9 strokes for 42 competitive rounds.

He was winless the next two years while undergoing a thorough examination of his long swing, but he placed in the top 10 in three 1974 events, and in 1975 he finished only a shot back in the U.S. Open at Medinah after his two iron from the 71st tee splashed in the lake and resulted in a double-bogey five.

Rod Curl believes the axiom about "practice makes perfect" doesn't apply to everyone. He practices regularly but it was an extended session of beating golf balls in mid-Summer of 1974 that almost ended his career.

Rod was making it big that year. He had reached the upper echelons of professional golf, winning the Colonial National Invitation Tournament in Fort Worth after a tense duel with Jack Nicklaus the final day.

When the PGA reached the B.C. Open in mid-July, Rod, in his desire to keep improving, stood on the tee and hit golf balls until he ran out of daylight.

"It was off hard pan," he says, and the result was a painful left wrist. He hardly played at all for the last three months, yet collected $120,154 for the year. He tried to play early in 1975, but says, "I wasn't ready physically or mentally. It was June or July before I felt I could play without the pain."

Only a second-place finish in the Kaiser International Open in Napa, Calif., saved the year, keeping him in the Top 60 with $59,599 for 35th place. He continued to struggle with the wrist in 1976, though losing considerable distance off the tee. Finally, in October, he underwent an operation on top of the wrist for the removal of a cyst. However, his $31,402 for the year dropped him from exempt status for 1977.

As the new year blossomed, it was frustrating. In his first 10 starts, he missed seven cuts and failed to qualify for another. Then the strength gradually started to come back and, beginning with the Heritage Classic, he put together an impressive consistency record and easily moved back into the exempt class.

His most impressive stretch was in late Summer as he tied for fifth in Philadelphia, tied for sixth in Hartford and tied for eighth in the Westchester Classic, earning more than $21,600 in those three starts.

Rod is three-fourths Wintu Indian and was named "Yoso" by his mother. "That's the name of a flower in northern California," he explains. Extremely interested in Indian affairs, this past summer Rod played in the all-World Indian Open in Salt Lake City. He won it easily.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1972 and 1973 All-American. 1972 North and South winner. 1973 Walker Cup team. 1973 low amateur, British Open.

Danny Edwards did not start playing golf until he was 14, but since then he has been hooked on the game. To illustrate his early disinterest in the game, he still recalls with a smile that as a youngster in Oklahoma, he and his friends "used to set off firecrackers on the Fourth of July on this great big lawn. It wasn't until years later that I realized the lawn was a fairway on a golf course."

Although he started to play five or six years later than most of his peers on the Tour, Edwards went about the game with determination and soon began to plan a professional career in golf.

At Oklahoma State he became the Big 8 champion in 1972 and 1973 and was named to the All-America teams in the same years. He also won the Southeastern Amateur, in Columbus, Ga., in 1972.

As a member of the 1973 Walker Cup team, he remained overseas to compete in that year's British Open and finished as low amateur. He turned pro later that year but failed to pass the PGA Tour Qualifying School.

He immediately began to prepare himself for another try at the Qualifying School by playing in Europe, Japan and Australia. He showed steady improvement overseas, including a 10th place finish in the Swiss Open, ninth in the German Open and fifth in the British Open, all in 1974. After further competition in the Far East, Edwards returned to the United States and earned his playing privileges at the Qualifying School.

He played in 33 tournaments in 1975 and won money in 23. His best finishes were T13 in the Byron Nelson Classic; T15 in the IVB-Philadelphia and T16 in the Kemper Open.

In 1976 Edwards played in 32 tournaments and won money in 17. He was encouraged by one finish in the top ten. That was the Ohio Kings Island Open where he tied for fourth.

Going into the 1977 Greater Greensboro Open, Edwards had finished 20th or better in eight of his nine starts. After his victory Edwards credited his younger brother, Dave, with helping his game. Dave was a member of the Oklahoma State NCAA national championship golf team.

Said Danny: "He was with me in Arizona and worked with me. It's helped in every phase of my game. I'm driving it longer and I'm hitting everything more solidly."

Edwards won at Greensboro with a 276, 12 under, and was only challenged twice during the last round as he won by four strokes. He said afterward: "This is the end I've been working toward. It's the end and it's the beginning. The beginning of the goals and dreams I have. Now that I've broken the ice, maybe the other will come."

"I feel I have the kind of game that is suited to the major championships. It's a consistent, solid game. I feel like I have built my game on a good foundation . . . learning to qualify, then to make the cuts, then to play well. I feel it's a foundation that won't crumble, that will keep me at a high level of consistency."

Dave Eichelberger is proud to be a Texan, but he will always have a special place in his heart for Milwaukee.

He has won two events since joining the PGA Tour in 1967 and both were the Greater Milwaukee Open, in 1971 and in 1977. In the years around those victories, he admits he has had to do some struggling.

His biggest year was 1971, when he earned $108,312 to finish ninth on the money list. "That year took me by complete surprise," he says. "I always thought I was capable, but I never dreamed I would be that successful in one year."

He believes that may have led to some of his problems since then. "I tried too hard to duplicate it and I'd lose patience quickly. I worked hard at my game, beat a lot of balls, but it didn't do much good."

He did return to the Top 60 in 1973 with a tie for second in the Sahara Invitational in Las Vegas being the one that put him over the hump. For a variety of reasons, he slumped to $12,780 in 1975, his lowest since 1969.

Gradually, his game started to come back in 1976, and early in 1977 it began to resemble his 1971 form.

"I started to hit it better in the Spring than I had for four or five years, and I can't tell you why," he said. "Several players have given me little bits of information that I've tried, but nothing in particular seemed to work. Mainly, I think my problem was one of alignment."

Prior to the triumphant return to Milwaukee, Dave tied for sixth in the Houston Open and duplicated that finish in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

His week at the Tuckaway Country Club for the GMO started with a one-under 71 that left him two strokes off the lead. His 68 the second day moved him into a tie for second, but now he was three strokes in back of Keith Fergus.

A 36-hole final on Sunday was scheduled after rain washed out the scheduled first round. After the morning segment, Dave was tied for the lead with Barney Thompson at eight-under 208.

Entering the final round, Dave thought he let the tournament get away with bogeys at the seventh and eighth holes, but he came through with a solid back nine, sinking birdies at the 11th, 12th and 16th holes.

While playing the 16th, he was tied with Morris Hatalsky at nine-under but his birdie there and Hatalsky's bogey at the 18th gave Dave a two-stroke victory at 10-under 288.

Dave started in the game at age 13 in the junior program at his family's club in Waco, Texas. It wasn't until he went on to Oklahoma State University that he decided that he wanted to make a career in the game.

Lee Elder's two victories on the PGA Tour were occasions for any competitor to remember, aside from the normal rewards from winning.

At Pensacola in 1974, Elder came through with his first triumph by sinking an 18-foot birdie putt on the fourth playoff hole of the Monsanto Open. That was drama enough for anyone, but the victory also qualified him to become the first black to earn an invitation to play in the Masters.

Almost exactly two years after the Pensacola triumph, Elder won the 1976 Houston Open while he was sitting in the clubhouse. Because the first round was rained out, a double round was scheduled that Sunday and Elder, although only six shots back of the lead, was in the first threesome to tee off in the morning. He shot a five-under 67 to trail by one and, while the other leaders were teeing off No. 1 in the afternoon Elder was starting on the 10th.

He closed with a 69 for a 10-under 278 total and was persuaded to stay, although he wanted to catch a flight home to Washington, D.C., before the awards ceremonies were scheduled. An hour and a half later the remainder of the field finished and he won by one stroke over Forrest Fezler.

The year between those two victories was disappointing to Lee. Not only did he fail to survive the cut in the 1975 Masters, but he wound up the year in 81st position on the money list with only three top-10 finishes. It was only the second time in his eight years on Tour that he missed the Top 60 money list.

Elder qualified for the PGA Tour in the Fall of 1967 and in his first full year he caused a stir by tying for first in the American Golf Classic and taking Jack Nicklaus to the fifth extra hole before losing.

Speaking as a married man and a father, Raymond Floyd said, a couple of years ago, "I've just begun to like to play golf. Some of this feeling has come from maturity, but I've been applying myself and working hard. The game's enjoyable for me."

By now, his peers and onetime critics have an idea of what Raymond meant. With two victories in each of the last two years, plus his passing of the million-dollar mark in official career earnings in 1977, Floyd is without question one of the world's top-ranked players.

Floyd grew up in Ft. Bragg, N.C., the son of an Army man who is now co-owner of the Cypress Lakes Club in Fayetteville. Although he was exposed to golf at an early age, Ray almost chose to pursue baseball, until he won the National Jaycees Junior Golf Title in 1960. He turned pro the following year, joined the Tour in 1963, won the St. Petersburg Open as a rookie and only twice has failed to finish among the Top 60 money-winners since.

In 1972 and 1973 Raymond was in a slump, but he rebounded smartly with more than $100,000 in earnings in 1974 and then started to win again. Perhaps his most notable victory was in the 1976 Masters. Raymond won it by eight strokes, tying Jack Nicklaus' tournament record of 17-under 271.

In 1977 he was tied with Ben Crenshaw for the lead after three rounds of the Byron Nelson Classic in Dallas and he held a three-shot lead entering the final day of the Pleasant Valley Classic. On both occasions he reported in with two-under 69s in the final round to win, beating out Nicklaus and a designated field in the latter event at Sutton, Mass.

High finishing rounds spoiled Rod Funseth's performance in 1977—particularly in the Masters and U.S. Open. Rod was tied for the lead at the midpoint of the Masters but finished over par the last two days and tied for 14th place.

Following a five-under 67 in the second round at Augusta National, placing Rod in a tie with Tom Watson for first position, he called his wife, Sandi, at home in Napa, Calif., to reveal the good news. But according to Rod, she immediately inquired whether he had made the cut.

Ten weeks later, Rod again was in good position at the Open in Southern Hills following 69-70, but he fell back to tie for 10th. At that, it was to be his second best finish of 1977. Between those two majors, Funseth missed four straight cuts, Houston through Memphis.

At the end of last year's official schedule, Rod closed with a three-under 68 at Pensacola to earn $1,087 and clinch an exemption among the top 50 career money winners.

In 1976, Funseth finished with 69-67 at San Diego to tie for seventh, but that was to be an exception to his pattern through most of the year. In the Memorial Tournament, a final-round 77 dropped him four-strokes out of the playoff. A last-round 75 in the 1976 U.S. Open settled him into a tie for 11th, and a closing 74 at Tucson dropped him to a tie for 13th.

Funseth worked as an assistant pro for five years before venturing on the PGA Tour in 1961, and it was another four years before he cracked the Top 60 money list. Victory in the 1965 Phoenix Open helped him begin a stretch of three straight years on the exemption list.

Rod began 1973 by winning the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open and wound up with almost $90,000 in official purses that year, but in 1974 he was troubled by a hand injury and a tie for third in the Crosby was his lone top 10 finish. He jumped 40 places on the money list in 1975 after recovering from the injury.

There just might be something in Al Geiberger's long career on the PGA Tour that he prizes right up there close to his unprecedented 59 at Memphis. That record 13-under 59, scored on the 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club course outside Memphis late last spring, should be cast in bronze. (See the section on 1977 Tournament Statistics for a complete description of this round.)

But ask the quiet man how he regards another achievement on another Colonial CC layout, this one the 7,190-yard par-70 course in Fort Worth. When the Tournament Players Championship was held there in 1975, Geiberger merely shot this excellent course to pieces with a total of 10-under 270. Knowledgeable observers still marvel at that piece of work.

His victory in the 1966 PGA Championship at Firestone, where he won by a comfortable four-stroke margin, is not easily forgotten, either. But after gaining that title, Al endured a succession of personal and physical problems, the latter sending him home to California for long periods.

In 1973 he broke out of a four-year earnings slump and regained a spot among the Top 60 money winners. In 1974 he ended a string of eight years without victory by winning at Las Vegas by three strokes.

He twice won in 1975, beating Gary Player with a nine-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole at the Tournament of Champions, in addition to that triumph at Fort Worth.

And he won twice again in 1976, including the Western Open on the brutal Butler National course in Oak Brook, Ill. His four-over 288 at Burler was the highest winning score on the 1976 Tour.

Gibby Gilbert, who was christened C.L. Gilbert, Jr. and never given a first name, earned seven straight checks starting the 1977 PGA Tour, through the Doral-Eastern Open. He had good reason to expect another productive year. He also tied for 16th in the Tournament of Champions to collect $4,347. But that was to be his best official payoff of the year.

In early June Gibby pulled a muscle in his rib cage while hitting a shot in the second round of the Kemper Open, and he missed 11 weeks of play. He did not return until the Colgate Hall of Fame Golf Classic in Pinehurst. Two months later, facing the loss of his exemption for the first time in five years, Gilbert teamed with Grier Jones to win the Walt Disney World National Team Championship. When Jones dropped a four-foot birdie putt on the final hole to win, Gibby had his exemption for another year.

Despite the lack of a given name, Gibby began to make a name for himself in golf early in his native Chattanooga, after taking up the game at age 13. In 1962 he quit the University of Chattanooga, married and two years later became an assistant pro in Hollywood, Fla.

Gilbert finished second to Bobby Cole in the 1967 Qualifying School but struggled for 2 1/2 years before winning the Houston Champions tournament. Recalling that victory years later, he said "I didn't consider myself a good player, but I believe I have become one in the last couple of years."

In 1971 he recorded six straight birdies in the Westchester Classic and finished the year again over the $60,000 level. But he slipped badly in 1972, and by the following Spring he was considering giving up the Tour, when his play improved suddenly.

A highlight of 1973 was a course-record 62 at Pinehurst No. 2 during the World Open. It shattered the record on the famed course by three strokes, although Tom Watson matched it a week later during the 144-hole event.

Maybe it is his passion for golf club design that keeps him away from the practice tee early in the season, because David Graham once explained his pattern of playing best late in the schedule by saying, "I don't work hard enough on my game early in the year."

However, in 1976 he tied for fifth in the Crosby Pro-Am in January and never let up, eventually winning twice in the summer. He collected almost triple his best previous official earnings for a year with a total of $176,174.

When Graham finished only a stroke behind Andy Bean in the Doral-Eastern Open in March, 1977, he must have felt another exceptional year was in store for him.

It was not to be, although he easily accumulated his second best total earnings in six full years on the Tour. His best stretch covered nine weeks through the end of May when he tied for 11th at the Heritage Classic and for sixth place in the Masters, was seventh alone at the Tournament of Champions and tied for sixth, 13th and 12th in the Nelson, Memorial and Atlanta Classic, in that order.

Graham was only 16 when he turned pro, but his tournament career did not begin until the late 1960s in his native Australia and on the Far East circuit. A tournament-record 62 helped him tie for first in the 1969 Singapore Open but he lost the playoff. He came to America the following year and failed to earn his playing card at the 1970 Qualifying School, but the very next week he and Bruce Devlin won the World Cup for Australia.

In 1971, in addition to winning the Caracas Open and the Japan Air Lines Open, Graham succeeded in the Tour School. In his rookie year of 1972, a full decade after turning pro, he won the Cleveland Open by beating Devlin on the second playoff hole.

Lou Graham is pleasant company and a man with a disarming sense of humor. But the question often arises, how can one play golf so well with so few victories to show for his abundance of talent? Lou has been playing the PGA Tour since 1964 and won only three tournaments.

In 1977 he again topped $100,000 in earnings and set a personal high for money winnings, but again without a victory. He had one second-place finish. He was runnerup in the U.S. Open, the championship he won in 1975 at Medinah.

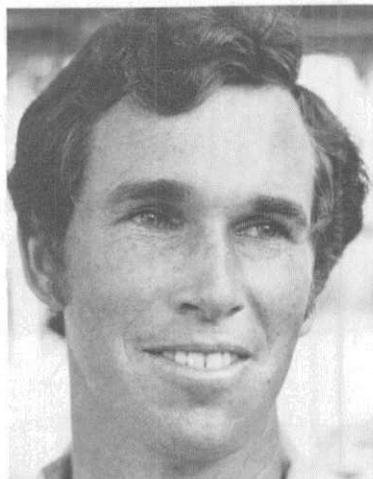

But his second place in the Open at Tulsa last year climaxed a string of performances which revealed, again, what talent he possesses. In four tournaments over a five-week stretch, Lou was fourth in the Memorial, third in Atlanta, tied for fourth in the Kemper and second in the U.S. Open.

His triumph in the 1975 Open followed by one week his 34th-place finish in Philadelphia, where he opened with a 65 but then played terribly at times. "I've got no business going to the U.S. Open this week and playing a hard golf course like Medinah," Lou told his wife, Patsy. He then stunned not only all of golf but himself.

Graham shot 74-72-68-73 to tie John Mahaffey for first, then beat the young Texan by two strokes with par 71 in the 18-hole playoff.

Graham turned pro after discharge from the Army in 1962 and worked at two clubs near Baltimore before striking out on the Tour in 1964. He won his first Tour event, the Minnesota Classic, three years later and only once since then, when he needed surgery to repair tendinitis in his left hand in 1969, has he failed to finish among the Top 60 money winners.

In 1977 Hubert Green did not match his achievement of a year earlier when he won three consecutive tournaments. However, considering the circumstances, he attained a certain amount of immortality by winning a single event—the U.S. Open.

Green was never out of first place in the 77th U.S. Open Championship at Southern Hills in Tulsa, but millions recall that he beat Lou Graham by a stroke after playing the final four holes knowing there had been a telephoned threat to his life.

After Green finished second to Jack Nicklaus in Nicklaus' own Memorial Tournament, Graham said Hubert was playing so well that he was going to win the Open four weeks hence. Green started out at Southern Hills with a one-under 69 that tied him with six other players, then he led by one stroke at the end of each of his succeeding rounds of 67-72-70.

In the late winter of 1976, after he missed the cut in the Florida Citrus Open, Green decided he had better play in the Doral-Eastern Open the following week because he needed the work. In his next 12 official rounds he scored over 70 only once as he won Doral by six strokes, the Greater Jacksonville by two and the Heritage Classic by five—finishing with 73 at tough Harbour Town Links for that one score over 70 in that string of rounds.

Green turned pro two years after graduating from Florida State, passed the Qualifying School in the fall of 1970. In his rookie year he won the Houston Open by beating Don January in a playoff. He hasn't been out of the Top 60 money list since, although he experienced a squeaker in 1972 when 10 straight money finishes at the end of the schedule left him in 58th place.

Mark Hayes won the Tournament Players Championship in a noble finish, earning a 10-year exemption on the PGA Tour and the $60,000 first prize to go with the title, but the year 1977 must have held some irritations for this quiet, slender Oklahoman. Bad rounds ruined his several chances for high finishes, and he was particularly hounded by the number 76.

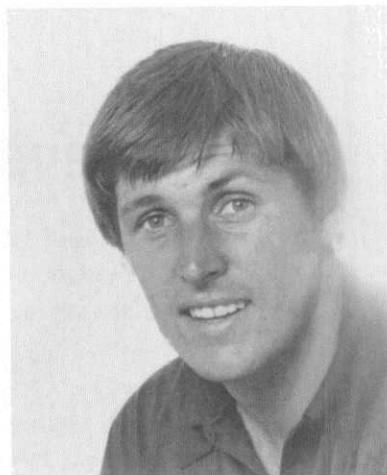

A closing 76 in the Masters left him tied for 33rd, and the very next week he again shot 76 in the fourth round at the Tournament of Champions. Hayes scored 76 in the second round at Houston and also in the Kemper; in the first and fourth rounds of the U.S. Open; and in the opening round of the British Open, in which he eventually tied for ninth.

His highest round during the Tournament Players Championship was a two-over 74 on the second day, but in the gale-like winds of that Friday at Sawgrass a 74 was remarkable. Hayes was a stroke behind co-leaders Tom Watson and Mike McCullough starting the last round at Sawgrass and shot par 72 to win by two, with his 289 total the highest winning score on the PGA Tour in 1977. Mark was anything but conservative in playing the treacherous finishing holes.

Hayes arrived on the PGA Tour in the Fall of 1973 and he arrived as a genuine star in his third full year on the circuit, 1976, when he led the Byron Nelson Classic from the opening bell, playing the first 43 holes without a bogey. He also won the Pensacola Open that year.

Mark started playing golf at age 6 under the eye of his father, a high school physical education teacher and golf coach. Not many years passed before he picked out his career. "One of the reasons I was so dedicated," Hayes said not long ago, "was that I was small for my age and couldn't do anything else. I practiced every day. I never thought of doing anything else for a living but play golf."

If Jerry Heard thought that 1976 was a terrible year, it turned out that 1977 was worse. A tie for 15th in the B.C. Open was his best performance of last year, and he dropped below even his earnings as a rookie in 1969. Heard suffered from a disc injury most of the year.

Heard's back problems recurred in late February during the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic, forcing him to withdraw and stay off the PGA Tour until Hartford in early August, often bedridden. Much the same happened the year before, when Jerry missed more than three months in the Spring with his bad back, leaving the Tour after Orlando and not returning until the Kemper Open early in June 1976.

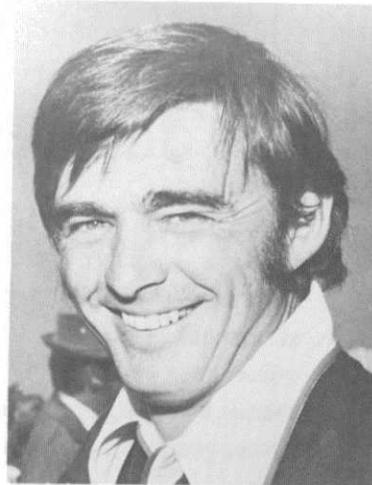

It is possible that Heard's back problems began with his brush with lightning in the 1975 Western Open, but no one will ever be sure. In the second round of that Western at Butler National, Jerry was admitted to the hospital along with Lee Trevino and Bobby Nichols after lightning struck nearby. However, because of a rainout, Jerry returned to the tournament and followed his opening 69 with 74-72-73 and a total of 288 to tie for fourth place, incredibly enough. Certainly there were no warnings of back problems that weekend.

Heard began playing golf at age 11, and he was scoring around par a year later, the result of constant practice on a municipal course operated by his father in California. He dropped out of Fresno State College in 1968 in order to try the Tour Qualifying School. He passed, and he earned barely $10,000 in his rookie year of 1969.

Heard started out 1970 by earning $133 in his first five events, but his game improved suddenly and he recorded five top 10 finishes and crashed the Top 60 money list.

He won four tournaments in the next four years and topped $100,000 each year he won, including the two-victory year of 1972.

Dave Hill cut his PGA Tour schedule by exactly one third in 1977, but the decreased activity did not improve his performance. Whereas he missed only one cut in 27 appearances in 1976, last year he missed four out of 18, and his official earnings dropped by almost $100,000.

Dave hooked up with younger brother Mike to tie for third place in the Walt Disney World National Team Championship last Fall, but his best individual showings were a tie for 10th at Phoenix and a tie for 14th in the Hope Desert Classic.

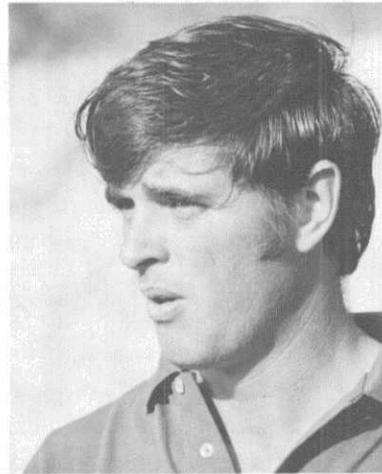

The year before, Dave won the Greater Milwaukee Open for his 13th victory since he joined the PGA Tour in 1959. Six weeks later, he tied for 22nd in the PGA Championship, worth $2,064, and became the 11th player to earn more than $1 million in Tour purses, finishing the year with $1,038,840.

One year after Dave joined the PGA Tour in 1959, he climbed into the Top 60 money list and was to remain there for 17 straight years. Ten years after coming on the Tour he won three tournaments, finished second to Frank Beard in the money rankings and won the Vardon Trophy for 1969 with a stroke average of 70.344 for 90 rounds.

He won $100,000 again in 1970, then began to reduce his playing schedule. He limited his appearances still further in 1972 but he played more efficiently, winning the Monsanto Open and placing in the top 10 in seven other events.

In 1973, Hill won at Memphis for the fourth time and recorded nine top 10 finishes, missed the cut only once and qualified for his second Ryder Cup team. Dave underwent surgery in late 1973 for removal of cartilage in a knee which had troubled him for some time, and that decision probably contributed to his second most profitable year in 1974, when he won at Houston.

Although one of his three victories on the PGA Tour was in the Doral-Eastern Open early in 1970, Mike Hill in recent years has tended to play much of his best golf in the Fall.

If this has actually become a pattern, it doubtless began back in 1972 when Hill arrived at San Antonio needing a high finish to lift him into the Top 60 money list and an exemption for the following year. Mike held off Lee Trevino to win by two strokes.

However, it was almost five years before he won again—late last September. In 1976 Mike shot 64 to take the 36-hole lead in the Ohio Kings Island Open but faded to 13th place. Last Fall Mike scored 64 in the final round at Ohio Kings Island and nipped Tom Kite by a stroke, winning a $30,000 check which amounted to about $10,000 more than he had accumulated earlier in 1977.

"It's really a moral victory to win after five years," Hill said. "If you're on a downslide and you can turn it around, it means something. It showed I still had some heart."

Mike started out in golf like his older brother, Dave, as a caddie at the nearby Jackson, Mich. Country Club. He spent 42 months in the Air Force and attended both Jackson Junior College and Arizona State before turning pro. However, Mike needed three tries in the PGA Tour Qualifying School before he earned his Approved Tournament Players membership card.

Mike's most rewarding year, financially, was 1974 when he placed 28th on the money list by closing strongly in the Fall with a second-place at San Antonio, a tie for second with brother Dave in Las Vegas and a fourth in the Southern Open.

Mike appeared headed for an even better year in 1975, before a motorbike accident in April on his farm in Jackson, Mich., dropped him off the PGA Tour for 12 weeks. He fell from the bike and the kickstand tore into his right leg above the knee.

Lon Hinkle wishes he knew why his first four years on the PGA Tour were not more productive. His best effort came in 1976 when he collected $11,058.

"I always felt I was better than my record," he said, "but I can't begin to tell you why I haven't done better."

Part of it was being able to generate any sort of consistency, and that was something of a problem in 1977, too, though he did move into the Top 60 and thus gained exempt status for the first time since coming out of the Fall of 1972 Qualifying School.

He came close to victory in the 1977 Tallahassee Open. Leading by two strokes with three holes to play, he was sure he would be a winner if he could finish with pars. He did that, but he watched as Ed Sneed holed long putts at the 16th and 18th to tie, and then rolled in another long one on the first extra hole of their playoff.

In the Andy Williams-San Diego Open before many of his hometown friends, he was tied for the 36-hole lead with Tom Watson and Bob Shearer at 11-under 133. "But I took 144 for the last 36 holes," he said, "and finished in a tie for seventh."

In the Colgate-Hall of Fame Classic, he was alone in second place to Hale Irwin after three rounds with a 12-under 201. He turned in a closing 76 to finish tied for tenth. "Even though I had a good year," he said, "I had chances to make it even better."

Lon started in the game at age 13, shortly after his family moved from Granville, Ohio, to the San Diego area. "I was a good baseball player," he said, "but I started to have trouble with my eyes, so I switched to golf. I'd play all day, whenever I could. I loved it."

The oldest of seven children, he said the entire family played in those days, and, in junior tournaments around Southern California, it wasn't unusual to find a half-dozen Hinkles in the field.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1969 North-South Amateur champion. 1969 Walker Cup team.

In the general sense, Joe Inman experienced a more rewarding year in 1977 than in 1976, although he didn't match his victory in the '76 Kemper Open. The Kemper, which he won at Quail Hollow Country Club not far from his home in Clover, S.C., was worth $50,000, but for the rest of 1976 Joe earned less than $20,000 in official Tour purses.

The 1977 competitive year was steadier overall for this talkative product of Wake Forest University. His highest finish was a tie for second with Dale Hayes at the Florida Citrus Open, where he scored under par all four rounds to finish two shots back of winner Gary Koch. One of Inman's finest performances last year was in the U.S. Open at Tulsa, where he was only two over par after three rounds at the difficult Southern Hills course. He closed with 74 and a tie for 16th.

While attending Wake Forest, Inman won the 1968 Carolinas Open and the 1969 North-South Amateur, earning a spot on the '69 Walker Cup team. He also won the 1970 North Carolina Amateur. After graduating from Wake in 1970, he spent two more years as an amateur and graduated from the PGA Tour Qualifying School in the Fall of 1973.

At the end of his rookie year in 1974, Inman tied for 13th in the San Antonio-Texas Open to finish 55th on the Exemption Point list. Twice in 1975 he closed with 67s to wind up in third place at Houston and Las Vegas. In late Spring of 1976, he finally won a PGA Tour event.

"I can't believe this," Joe said after his victorious Kemper. "I was off to a bad start, mainly due to my putting, but I could feel it getting better. I didn't seem to be motivated at the start of the year. I couldn't get my mind on it."

Looking back, 1977 turned out to be perhaps the most satisfying of Hale Irwin's nine years on the PGA Tour. Near the end of the schedule he won the San Antonio-Texas Open for a personal high of three victories in a single season, and he also passed the $200,000 mark in official earnings for the third year in succession. Only one other man, Jack Nicklaus, cashed more than $200,000 in purses in those same years, and that indicates the talent bracket that Irwin occupies.

After winning the Atlanta Classic at the end of May, Irwin was informed that his finish in the Spring Tour Seasonal Championship had also qualified him for the World Series of Golf. Some weeks later, a clerical error was discovered, and Hale's spot in the Series actually belonged to Graham Marsh. Hale was out of the World Series field.

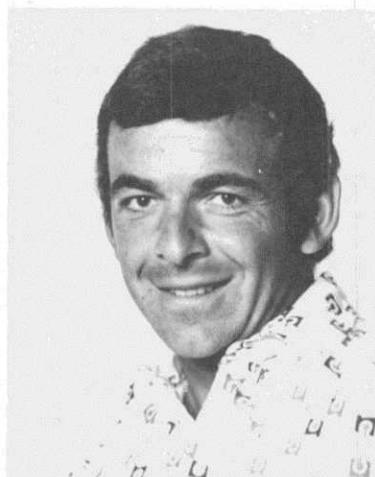

However, the weekend before the World Series, Irwin qualified without any question—winning his second 1977 event and tearing up the revered Pinehurst No. 2 course at 20-under 264 to win the Colgate-Hall of Fame Classic by five strokes. Hale went on to place second in the Series.

Irwin left the University of Colorado in 1968 with a degree in marketing, an NCAA golf title and the honor of having been selected twice as an All-Big Eight Conference defensive back. He joined the PGA Tour that fall and climbed steadily on the money list each year through 1976.

Although he twice won the Heritage Classic on the demanding Harbour Town Links on Hilton Head Island, S.C., Hale was among the less familiar U.S. Open champions when he captured that major championship in 1974 at Winged Foot.

In 1975 he won his first Atlanta Classic and also the Western Open at Butler National. In 1976 he won two weeks apart, at Los Angeles and Orlando. His second place in the 1976 World Series lifted him over $1 million in career earnings.

When Tony Jacklin chased Tom Watson down the closing holes at Pebble Beach and finished only a stroke back in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am last January, it appeared that the talented Briton might approach his more profitable years on the PGA Tour of the early 1970s.

However, the Crosby was to be his best finish in 15 U.S. appearances last year. Tony's next best was a tie for 18th at Tucson, and he played only four times in this country after May 1. He missed his last three cuts, at Philadelphia, Hartford and in the Buick; however, he increased his earnings by more than 50 percent over 1976.

Certainly one of the most talented players ever produced in Britain, Jacklin started in golf as a caddie for his father, a truck driver in Scunthorpe, Lincolnshire. His first meaningful victory was in the 1965 British Assistants Championship, and two years later he won the Dunlop Masters on home soil and the New Zealand PGA title.

Jacklin became the first Englishman to win the British Open since Max Faulner in 1971, when he won in 1969 at Royal Lytham and St. Annes. When he won the U.S. Open 11 months later, in 1970 at Hazeltine, he became the first Briton ever to hold the two titles at the same time and the first since Ted Ray in 1920 to take the U.S. title back to Great Britain.

In 1972, Jacklin gave up his privileges on the PGA Tour to be closer to his family. He moved his residence to the Isle of Jersey but, less than three years later, in the Spring of 1975, he was back on the PGA Tour.

"I know now," Jacklin said on his return here, "that I have to continue to play in the States, always, if I want to continue as a world golfer."

Don January has no doubt wearied in recent years of people exclaiming over how well he plays golf for a man his age. They should be forgiven, however, because this long-striding Texan has had a remarkable record in his late 40s.

It used to be, Don said not long ago, "Once I made about $65,000, I'd just pick up and go home. I didn't care if it was July or September or what." A glance at his earnings record backs up that intention, except in 1976, when January thoroughly spoiled his image by winning the Tournament of Champions and more than $163,000.

Last year he returned to "normal," although failing to win a tournament. In his fourth start of 1977, he was tied for first place at Hawaii after three rounds and wound up tied for second with a closing par 72. In the Byron Nelson, in Don's hometown of Dallas, he finished with a 68 that wedged him into fifth place. In the PGA Championship at Pebble Beach, trying for the major title which he had won in 1967 and had barely missed in 1975 at Congressional, he started with a 75 but rallied to claim a tie for sixth place.

Four times in a five-year period beginning in 1967, Don did earn in the intended $60,000 range. But in 1972 he began a 2½-year recess from the PGA Tour in order to build golf courses in the Dallas area. When course construction financing vanished during the recession, he returned to the Tour in 1975, soon after his 45th birthday.

Again, he managed to cash more than $60,000 in checks, but he had to beat Larry Hinson on the second playoff hole at San Antonio, sinking a four-foot birdie putt for the $25,000 first prize.

Recalling his startling comeback at his age, January said: "Physically, it wasn't too bad. Mentally, it was tougher than I expected. But I am here to stay. I shall not leave on my own. It will take my game to force me off."

The year 1977 saw a continued resurgence by Grier Jones. He climbed up to 35th on the money-winning list, cashing checks for $80,021, and then climaxed the year by joining with Gibby Gilbert to win the Walt Disney World National Team Championship.

Jones' turnaround came at the end of 1975 when he finished 112th on the money list and he visited Bob Toski for consultation. Bob was helpful.

"He taught me a lot about the game," Grier recalled. "I had developed some bad habits, and Bob worked to get me back to my old swing, the one that had worked for me before."

In 1976, Jones improved by more than $50,000 in official earnings and climbed back to 40th on the money list, thanks largely to five top 10 finishes. Last year, the improvement continued as Grier finished in the top 10 in seven tournaments, with his most notable showings coming in the Greater Greensboro Open and the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

At Greensboro, Jones wound up in fourth place alone after scoring 72-70-70-69. At Hartford, he topped that performance with 69-69-65-65, finishing tied with Larry Nelson in second place, three strokes back of winner Bill Kratzert.

Jones arrived on the Tour in 1968 with impressive credentials. While at Oklahoma State he won the 1966 NCAA championship, the Big Eight Conference title, the Oklahoma Intercollegiate and the Oklahoma Invitational. He led the Tour Qualifying School and in 1969 was named rookie of the year with more than $37,000 in earnings.

Both of Grier's Tour victories came in 1972 after playoffs, when he defeated Bob Murphy in Hawaii and Dave Marad in the Robinson. After topping $140,000 that year, then he began suffering physical problems—back and hand ailments. In one stretch in the Summer of 1974 he was forced to withdraw from six of seven tournaments. In 1975, he missed 10 weeks after catching pneumonia the week following the PGA Championship.

Although victory escaped him in 1977, Tom Kite continued to improve his overall performance on the PGA Tour, as the money standings proved. His seven finishes in the top 10 last year was not an improvement in itself, except that they contained a trio of third-place finishes.

Most notable of these was a tie for third in the Masters, thanks to a closing five-under 67. However, Kite bettered that showing with a solo second in the Ohio Kings Island, when he blazed in with a final eight-under 62, tying Jack Nicklaus' course record, to lose to Mike Hill by only a stroke.

Kite's life in golf began at age 6, when his father put a club in his hand for the first time and urged him to take a swipe. At 11 he won his first tournament, an age-group event at the Country Club of Austin, Tex. He began to take the game seriously three years later.

Before his 21st birthday in 1970, Tom was medalist in the Western Amateur, runnerup to Lanny Wadkins in the U.S. Amateur, second in the Southern Amateur and was named to the four-man U.S. team in the World Amateur Team Championship.

The following year he was chosen on the U.S. Walker Cup team and, in 1972, he shared the NCAA title with his U. of Texas schoolmate, Ben Crenshaw, before turning pro and joining the Tour. In 1973, Tom won the Hope of Tomorrow Second Tour event and was named rookie of the year after missing the cut in only three of 35 events.

Kite missed the cut only once in all of 1974, and the following year he finished second to Pat Fitzsimons in the Los Angeles Open as his progress continued. In 1976 came victory in a major tournament.

Kit was three strokes out of the lead entering the final round of the IVB-Philadelphia Classic, whereupon he reported in with a five-under-66 to tie Terry Diehl. Tom beat Terry on the fifth playoff hole with a par. Again in 1976 as in 1974, Kite missed the cut only once, plus withdrawing once in 28 events.

Since he came out on the PGA Tour by tying for third in the Fall 1975 Qualifying School, Gary Koch has had his share of troubles finishing a year among the top 60 winners. However, unlike most newcomers, Gary has managed to find victory in each of his first two full years on the circuit.

In April, 1976, Koch was five strokes back of the leader after two rounds in the Tallahassee Open, and he tacked on 67-70 to beat John Mahaffey by a single stroke, sinking a five-foot putt to save par on the final hole.

Last year, again in his home state of Florida early in the schedule, Gary shoved a third-round, seven-under 65 into the proceedings and again closed with 70 to win by two strokes in the Florida Citrus Open at Orlando.

During his amateur career, Koch gained a reputation as an excellent putter, and a remarkable amateur career it was. He won the 1969 Florida Open before his 17th birthday and he also won the U.S. Junior title in 1970.

While at the University of Florida he won the 1973 Trans-Mississippi and played on the first of two Walker Cup teams that same year. He also played for his country in the 1974 World Amateur Team Championship.

Gary said once that his formula for playing the Tour was to "drive it in the fairway, hit it on the green and make a few putts." Nothing remarkable there, except that he has obviously been able to follow his simple battle plan very successfully.

It took three tries before Bill Kratzert finally passed through the PGA Tour Qualifying School. He earned his "card" in June, 1976, and brought his promising game out on the circuit. Although he finished 102nd on the money list at the end of that year, he and Woody Blackburn won the National Team Play championship at Disney World, and that was apparently all the chance Kratzert needed.

In 1977, Bill placed in the top 10 an astonishing 11 times in his first full year on Tour. He won the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open by three strokes, scoring 66-66-64-69—265 at Wethersfield CC, which was, to that point in early August, the lowest total of the year.

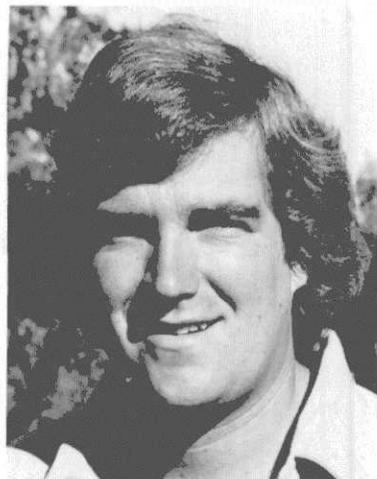

The victory served to underline what some of the knowledgeable had been saying all year. Said Hubert Green before the final round at Hartford: "This guy is a good one. There's no telling how good he can be. His game is good, his temperament is good. He's smart and he's strong. He could be one of the great ones."

Kratzert was practically born into the game, the son of the head pro at Fort Wayne, Ind., CC for the last 19 years. "I didn't start to play until I was about 13," Bill says. "My dad never pushed me into it. It was just always there. It wasn't until I was 14 or 15 years old that I decided that golf was my game."

He won the Indiana State Amateur at age 16 and the Indiana Open a year later. Allen Miller, who befriended Bill when he became ill during the Sunnehanna Amateur, influenced him to going to the University of Georgia, where he was chosen All-Southeastern Conference all four years and All-American his last two.

After he failed in his first try in the Tour Qualifying School, Kratzert quit the game in frustration, went home to Fort Wayne and worked six months as a fork-lift operator. But in the Spring of 1975 he accepted an assistant pro's job at a club and returned to the game to stay.

Bruce Lietzke came out on the 1977 PGA Tour at Phoenix after having played his last five official rounds of 1976 at par or better. Five tournaments later he still hadn't strayed over par, for a startling total of 26 rounds no worse than par, through the five-day Bob Hope Desert Classic.

During those five events, Lietzke won at Tucson in a playoff with Gene Littler, won again at Hawaii by three strokes and placed second in the Hope. Also early in the year, Bruce lost his father, who had always been his biggest booster in golf. "He said he would quit playing the day his little boy beat him. I did that one day when I was eight years old, and he hasn't played since," Bruce recalled once.

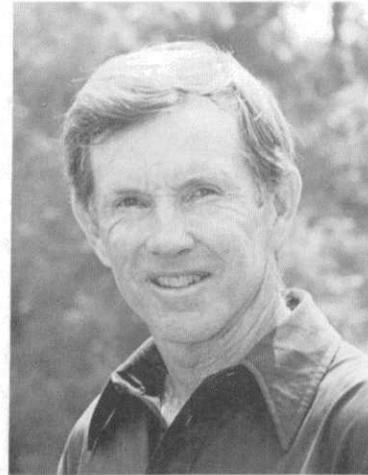

Lietzke played well for the balance of 1977, although not as spectacularly as at the start of the year. Among his top finishes were a second in the Tournament of Champions, a tie for fifth at Pleasant Valley and a seventh in the Anheuser-Busch, and he finally topped the $200,000 level in official earnings.

Lietzke started playing the game at age 5 when brother Duane, then an assistant pro in Wichita, Kan., gave him a cut-down set of clubs. While at Forest Park High School in Beaumont, Tex., he won the Texas State scholastic title as a sophomore and helped the team to one championship and three seconds in his four years. At the University of Houston he captured the 1971 Texas State Amateur.

Late in the Spring of 1973, Bruce closed the closet door on his golf clubs and declared he was finished with the game. "I had played so much through high school and in college I was tired of it. I suppose in the back of my mind I knew I would come back, but at that point I was tired mentally of the competition and needed the time to think about some other things."

His retirement lasted six months and he turned pro in 1974. He missed by a stroke in his first try in the Tour School but made it in the Spring of 1975.

In mid-August at Pebble Beach, Calif., 47-year old Gene Littler was on the threshold of topping even his three-victory year of 1975. Already a winner last year at Houston, Gene was enjoying a five-stroke lead in the PGA Championship during the final round.

However, his renowned picture swing failed him down the stretch, he closed with 76 and fell into a tie with Lanny Wadkins, who beat him on the third hole of the event's first extra-hole playoff with par four.

Still, it was a fruitful year for the leather-faced gentleman from San Diego as he went home at the end of August with almost double his official earnings of the previous year. Aside from the PGA, Gene was second at Tucson, made checks in 16 of 21 events and finished in the top 10 six tournaments.

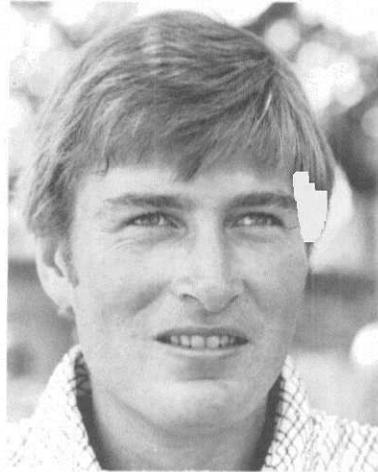

At Houston, Littler shot 70-65-67-74—276, carrying a five-stroke lead into the final round and winning by three from Wadkins.

Littler's battle with cancer is a story that bears repeating. He underwent surgery for cancer of the lymph glands in the Spring of 1972, and the then winner of 24 Tour events in 18 years appeared at the end of his career. However, he rejoined the Tour that October and in July of 1973, about 16 months after his surgery, he won the St. Louis Children's Hospital Classic.

He did not win again in 1974 but he did top $100,000 in official purses for the second time in his long career, and 1975 was truly remarkable. He won three times in 1975, including the Westchester Classic in a playoff with Julius Boros, two weeks after his 45th birthday.

Littler was uncharacteristically erratic in 1976, dipping to barely $60,000 in earnings and missing the cut in six of 25 tournaments. His best finish was a tie for fourth at New Orleans. He was experiencing back ailments but, typical of the man, he made no excuses.

Again in 1977, Lyn Lott played in more than 30 tournaments on the PGA Tour, and this time he added to his iron-man reputation. From the 1977 opener at Phoenix through the Atlanta Classic, a stretch of 21 weeks, Lott competed in 18 events without missing the cut.

Although failing to win a tournament, the big, rawboned Georgian with the quite demeanor and strong pass at the ball continued to improve his place on the money list. His best showings were in early May when he put together four straight rounds of par or better on the formidable Preston Trail course in Dallas and tied for third in the Byron Nelson Classic, and the following week in Fort Worth when he closed with 66 at Colonial CC to share fourth place.

Lott's string of avoiding cuts ended at the Kemper Open in Charlotte, N.C., and he skipped Memphis the next week, but in the U.S. Open in Tulsa he played steaming Southern Hills in 68-70 the last two days and tied for seventh position. The year before, in his home state at the Atlanta Athletic Club, Lott forced himself on the public's attention with his first strong showing in the U.S. Open, tying for eighth place despite a final 73.

Lott started in golf very early. "My grandfather was semi-retired," he says, "and when I was five years old he started taking me to the course. We went about every day until I was 12. After that, he started taking me to junior tournaments around Douglas, Ga."

Lott won the Georgia State Open at age 17, then enrolled at the University of Georgia, where he competed with such as Allen Miller, Terry Diehl and Billy Kratzert. As a senior he won the 1972 Georgia State Amateur title.

He graduated in his first attempt in the PGA Tour Qualifying School, in the Fall of 1973, and as a rookie earned almost $17,000 in official purses. "I didn't think that was too bad for a start," he recalls, "because I had no idea how well I'd do."

The Roger Maltbie story was heading for a disappointing third chapter last Fall when the young Californian was flirting with missing the Top 60 money list. However, Roger finished the season with five straight checks, including a tie for eighth place in the Anheuser-Busch and a tie for 13th at Kings Island. He saved his exempt status by placing 59th on the list.

Maltbie might have been as bewildered as anyone by his sudden and startling performances in the Summer of 1975, when he won two weekends in succession at Quad Cities and Pleasant Valley. The evening of his latter triumph he left behind his winner's check for $40,000 in a restaurant. Roger was given a duplicate check by the tournament sponsor, and the restaurant reportedly framed the original and hung it on the wall behind the bar.

Maltbie was the first rookie to win consecutive events since Bob Murphy in 1968. "I'm a pretty good competitor," he said. "I'm probably a better competitor than I am talented. I work at improving my game, and as long as I play as well as I think I can, well, that's all that enters my mind."

The following year, he won the inaugural Memorial Tournament, winning on the fourth playoff hole from Hale Irwin on the Muirfield Village course built by Jack Nicklaus outside Columbus, Ohio. "I've won a couple of tournaments and quite a bit of money," Roger said, "but this is the first time I've beaten Jack Nicklaus, and I beat him on his own course."

Thoughts of seeking his fortune on the PGA Tour might have begun when Roger beat Forrest Fezler in a playoff for the county high school championship in San Jose, Calif. He was a sophomore and Fezler a senior at James Lick High. Roger won the Northern California Amateur in 1972, turned pro shortly thereafter, won the 1973 Northern California Open but failed to pass the Tour Qualifying School that Fall. A year later, in the Fall of 1974, he did pass the School.

In 1976, he won Benson & Hedges in Britain; Perth County in Australia; Hong Kong Match Play; and four in Japan. 1977 Colgate World Match Play Championship.

For several years, followers of the PGA Tour wondered when Graham Marsh would leave the fairways of the rest of the world to trod those in the United States

The stocky Australian won seven times in 1976 and then enrolled in the PGA Tour's Qualifying School in Brownsville, Texas, that December. He easily passed his test, finishing in a tie for third.

Now Marsh was ready to test his obvious talents against the finish in the game, week-after-week. After he missed the cut in his second U.S. start of 1977—the Bob Hope Desert Classic, he started his progression to the top, finally winning the Sea Pines Heritage Classic on the demanding Harbour Town Links at Hilton Head Island.

In the Heritage, he trailed Tom Watson by four with 18 holes to play, but by the time they made the turn on the final afternoon, they were tied. Graham went on to win by one with an 11-under par 273.

Marsh always has lived in Western Australia and his home is Dalkeith, near Perth. "When I was a youngster," he said, "we only had one pro tournament there every six years. That was when the Australian Open came there. I never saw any good professionals play the game. Anything I wanted to know about golf I had to read . . . you know, the 'golf tip of the month.'"

"Until I was 24," he continued, "I never played more than four 72-hole tournaments a year."

Marsh was graduated from Claremont Teachers College in his hometown and became math teacher in high school, but golf was his love.

He turned professional in 1968 and his first tournament was the 1969 Singapore Open.

"My golf home was in Southeast Asia and Japan," he said. "We didn't have that many tournaments in Australia, so I had to travel, and you had to travel for 12 or 14 weeks at a time. After I gained experience there, the next step was Britain. Then, the next step was here in the United States."

Marsh became a close friend of Hale Irwin about two years ago. "We approach the game the same way," he said, "so we seemed to hit it off right away."

In the spring of 1976, Irwin gave Marsh some help, mainly with his set-up position. "I used to get blocked off with my feet," he said. "I wasn't using my legs enough."

Benefitting from Irwin's tip, Marsh said: "I started to hit the ball longer."

Sure, he won the Bob Hope Desert Classic by six strokes, but Rik Massengale doubtless recalls another spell during 1977 with almost equal affection. This the three-week stretch in April when Rik tied for sixth place at Greensboro, tied for third at the Masters and placed sixth alone in the Tournament of Champions—a streak which increased his bank deposits by more than $33,000.

Still, the five rounds in Palm Springs, Calif., will never be forgotten by the soft-spoken Texan. He opened with a 64 at Indian Wells for a three-shot lead and never looked back. Bruce Lietzke, the closest pursuer after each of the five rounds, said after accepting his runnerup check, "I feel like I won the Bob Hope Desert Classic. Rik was off somewhere else playing his own tournament."

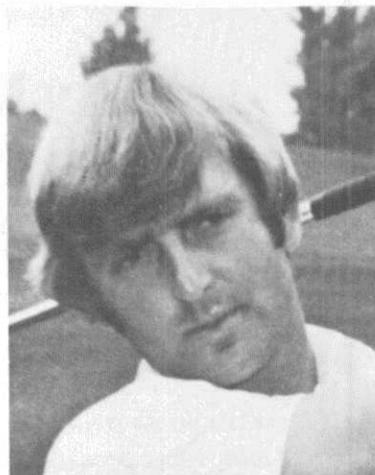

Rik is 10 years younger than his brother, Don, who is perhaps best known for losing a playoff to Don January for the 1967 PGA Championship. "When I was about five I started to play golf just to be around him," Rik says. "He basically helped me to develop the swing, and he still helps me.

"When Don went off to Texas Christian University, I'd wait for him to get home on weekends so we could play golf together. By the time I was in high school, Don was on the PGA Tour. That's when I had aspirations of being on the Tour someday. Nothing else aroused me."

Rik won the 1964 and 1965 Texas State high school titles, and in 1968, while attending the University of Texas, he captured the Southwest Conference and Western Amateur championships. After turning pro he failed to pass his first attempt in the Qualifying School but he graduated on his second try in the Fall of 1970.

Massengale experimented with his golf swing during his first four years on Tour, and with negligible success. But in 1975 he won the Tallahassee Open and lost a playoff to Dave Hill in the Sahara Invitational. Thanks to a grip adjustment from brother Don, he won the Greater Hartford Open in 1976.

Mike McCullough's career on the Tour has been one of plateaus. "There has been a definite pattern," he says. "Once I adjusted to qualifying I had trouble making cuts; then I made cuts. Then I had trouble making money and then I made money."

During 1977, he believes he arrived as a tournament player. Financially, it was successful, but more importantly he challenged until the closing holes in the prestigious Tournament Players Championship at Sawgrass and finished second, only two strokes behind Mark Hayes.

Two weeks later, he won the Magnolia Classic in Hattiesburg, Miss., the annual event played opposite the Masters Tournament. "That was very important to me," Mike said, "because it proved to me I could win. Without the good finish at Sawgrass, though, I'm not certain I could have won the Magnolia."

In the TPC, Mike surprised many with his scoring. He was the first-day leader with a brilliant six-under 66. Tom Watson, Don Bies and Ray Floyd were two strokes back.

The next day, when the wind off the ocean gusted up to 30 miles per hour, Mike fashioned a 74 and maintained a two-stroke lead. The third day, Watson moved in with him in the top spot at even par 216. He had a 75 the last day, but he pocketed a check for $34,200.

He continued to play well in other championships, such as a tie for fourth in the Canadian Open and tie for 10th in the U. S. Open.

Mike is one of the game's more tenacious players. As a boy, he played all sports. It wasn't until after he was graduated from Bowling Green State University in 1968 that he decided to devote more time to golf.

His first year out of college, he taught physical education in the Monroe (Mich.) school system; then he headed for Florida to play the mini-tours. Before doing so, he won the 1970 Ohio Amateur championship.

Twice, he tried to obtain his PGA Tour card and missed, in the fall of 1970 and again in 1971. Finally, he made it in 1972.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1977 Ryder Cup team.

He proved his consistency of performance in 1976 with a dozen finishes in the top 10 and more than $130,000 in official earnings. His goals for 1977 were to win again, as he had in 1975 at Pensacola, and also qualify for the World Series of Golf. Jerry McGee did both.

A six-under 65 in the third round of the IVB-Philadelphia Classic lifted him into a tie for the lead and Jerry closed with 69 to win by four shots. The victory also provided a great boost in Summer Tour points which eventually created his first invitation to play in the World Series at Firestone CC.

McGee's other noteworthy week was in mid-June in Memphis, for two reasons: He and Dave Stockton accompanied Al Geiberger during Al's astounding 59 in the second round, and Jerry also tied for second for his best finish of the year to that point.

McGee, for years better known for his quick wit than being one of Ohio State's gang of standout golf products, suffered pulled ligaments in his thumb in the Summer of 1971, an injury which seriously disrupted his steady progress since joining the PGA Tour in 1967.

He sat out the last several months of 1971, and the injury apparently continued to bother him for about two more years. "The longer I was home," he said, "the more I wondered if I'd ever play again." However, he pulled out of his long slump in 1974 by earning checks in 25 of 35 tournaments and regaining a spot in the Top 60 list. And the following year he won his first PGA Tour event.

His winning week at Pensacola in 1975 found him taking the lead with rounds of 69-66-66 and, after faltering on the front nine the last day, birdying three holes on the back for 70-271 to win by two.

1977 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered-31; In money-26; Top ten finishes-7; Stroke avg.-71.64.

For Benson Rayfield McLendon, who prefers the nickname Mac, it is easy to understand why he holds a special affection for the Southern Open. The 1976 Southern was the first major tournament which he won alone and, in 1977, he tied for second in the same event at Green Island Country Club, Columbus, Ga. He could almost be satisfied over his defense in the Southern last October, because he and three others finished seven strokes back of Jerry Pate, who was not to be beaten.

The previous Fall, Mac won by two strokes from close friend Hubert Green when it appeared he might fritter away the victory. He held a five-shot lead at one late juncture but stumbled to bogeys on the 11th, 15th and 17th holes and found his advantage cut to one. McLendon then struck a near-perfect tee ball on the par five 18th, placed his second short of the pond fronting the green, approached four feet from the flagstick with a nine iron and sank the putt for birdie.

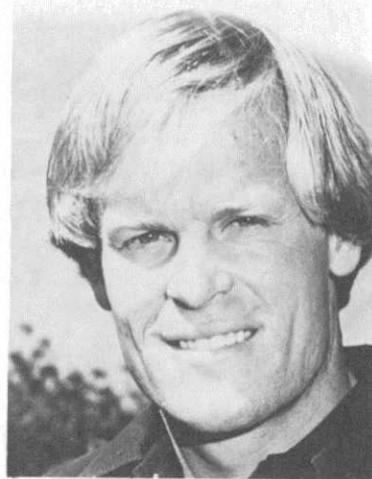

"I've had chances to win before and let them get away. I didn't want it to happen this time," he said of precious victory. It wound up a year in which he missed only eight cuts in 33 tournaments, averaged 71.4 strokes and scored in the 60s on 32 occasions.

McLendon won the first PGA Tour event he competed in, the 1968 Magnolia Classic, a Second Tour tournament which did not contribute to his official earnings. However, he did place in the Top 60 at the end of his first two years on Tour.

Then he found himself in a five-year slump which caused him to consider a more rewarding career, such as, perhaps, using his accounting degree from Louisiana State to more advantage. However, at the end of 1974, Mac hooked up with Hubert Green to win the Walt Disney World National Team Championship and an exemption for the following 12 months.

Given that opportunity, Mac more than doubled his official earnings in 1975 and twice almost won, when he tied for second at Jacksonville and placed second alone in the Pleasant Valley Classic.

Johnny Miller looked back on his inexplicable record in 1977, his worst since a rookie, and said: "It has been a crazy year, but there comes a time when you have to realize that no job is easy. You have to work at it, and I wasn't willing to do that a while ago. It's a little like the guy playing the slot machine. When he's winning, it's so easy he gets the idea he can keep winning even if he doesn't put any money in the machine. It doesn't work that way."

Miller's meager (for him) total of four top 10 finishes during 1977 included a pair of second-place ties. In the Western Open, he started with 72-74 at Butler National but recovered with a pair of laudatory 69s to barely miss tying Tom Watson. He also landed in a four-way tie for second in the Southern Open in late October which pushed him over the $60,000 mark and sealed his spot among the Top 60 money winners.

The year of 1977 would be encouraging to all but a handful of other players. In Miller's case, the year pales in comparison to any of his six most recent previous years, particularly 1974. He began 1974 by scoring par or better for 23 straight rounds, winning the Crosby, Phoenix and Tucson events and tying for fourth in the Hope, before placing fifth at Los Angeles.

Johnny also won the Heritage and Tournament of Champions before the end of April, played seldom the next 15 weeks and finished 1974 with a rush by winning the Westchester, World Open and Kaiser International. He topped Jack Nicklaus' single-season money winning record by more than $30,000 with his total of $353,021 and, in addition to the eight victories, he placed in the top six in four other events, among only 21 contested.

He also won four times in 1975 and twice in 1976, while playing only 17 times in the latter year. But of all his 17 victories in his eight full years, none will equal the 1973 U.S. Open when he closed with a record 63 at Oakmont.

Orville Moody has known the good times and the lean times, but when "Sarge" talks of the days gone by, he enjoys reflecting on the times he spent in the sunshine.

There have been numerous highlights to his long career in golf including his victory in the 1969 U.S. Open Championship, joining with Lee Trevino to give Uncle Sam the 1969 World Cup team title, as well as triumphs in the 1958 All-Army Championship and the 1962 All-Service Championship.

"They all mean a great deal to me," Orville said recently.

It was a good year in 1969 when he won the Open and $79,176. He had another in 1973, when he managed three second-place finishes and collected $74,286. In the Bing Crosby that year Orville held a four-stroke lead with 18 to play. He fell into a three-way tie with Jack Nicklaus and Ray Floyd when he three-putted the final green. Nicklaus won the playoff.

Times have not been easy for him the last few years. He left the PGA Tour for most of 1975 and 1976 to devote his energies to his golf course business in the Denver area, but rejoined the Tour as a fulltimer in 1977 and plans to stay with it for awhile.

Orville's father was greens superintendent in Chickasha, Okla. "I grew up on the golf course and have played the game since I was about three," he said. "I never played on anything but sand greens until I was 13 or 14."

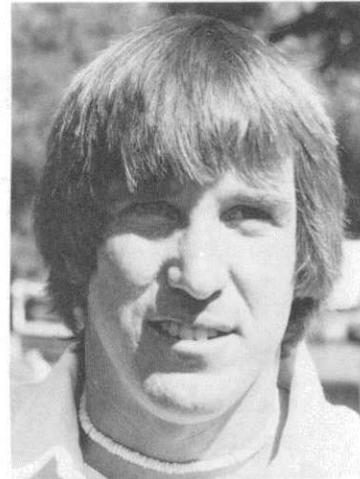

Orville, who is part Cherokee Indian, joined the Army in 1953 and stayed for 14½ years. He saw duty in both the European and Pacific zones and was a staff Sargeant (E-6), when he was discharged.

He enrolled in the PGA Tour's Qualifying School in 1967 and was "graduated" with such standout players as Deane Beman, now the PGA Tour Commissioner; Tony Jacklin, Bob Murphy and Lee Elder.

There were times in 1977 when Orville felt his game was "almost back". He finished second in the Magnolia Classic and had other good showings in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic and the Phoenix Open.

"When I'm playing my best," he explained, "I hit my driver straight and my irons right-to-left, a slight draw. I don't fight it, though. If I find I'm hitting the ball a certain way on the practice tee, I'll go with it."

Open early last September, scoring four rounds in the 60s to win by five shots from Lee Elder at Enjoie GC in Endicott, N.Y., he became the 11th first-time winner on the PGA Tour for 1977. In other words, more than a fourth of the 1977 events were won by men without a previous victory on Tour.

Morgan, a polite Oklahoman who is not practicing his optometry career for the time being, belongs among the Tour's genuine new stars. His steady climb up the money-winning statistics in his four complete years on the big circuit testifies to this.

Morgan has made a habit of strong finishes at the end of most of his years on Tour. Not only did he win his first tournament late in the season last year, but in 1974 and 1975 he made a move almost as rewarding. At the end of his rookie year, 1974, he won about $11,000 in his last four events. A year later he needed something similar to crack the top 60 list, like $7,000 in the 1975 San Antonio-Texas Open. He led at the halfway mark but appeared to have ruined his chances with a third-round 75. A closing 68 lifted him to third place, worth $8,875 and a final placing of precisely 60th.

Gil began playing golf at about age 15 and decided he would pursue it as a career along with optometry when he was a junior at East Central State College in Oklahoma. He won the Oklahoma collegiate championship before graduation in 1968 but he did not turn pro until after earning his doctorate four years later.

He was second in the Western Amateur and Porter Cup before entering the Fall 1972 Tour Qualifying School. He failed to win his player's card, but a year later, after subsisting on the mini-tour circuit, Morgan passed.

Among his six top 10 finishes in 1976 was a tie for eighth in the PGA Championship at Congressional, where Gil led by four strokes midway, until a pair of 75s dropped him back.

It wasn't only his victory in the Ed McMahon-Quad Cities Open which made the Summer of 1977 something special for Mike Morley, although that certainly seemed satisfying enough. For a seven-week stretch during last June and July, Mike was playing so well that he tied for fourth at Memphis, shared second place at Milwaukee, won the Quad Cities and tied for fourth in the Canadian Open. Those four strong showings accounted for almost $52,000 of his year's total.

Morley had a similar stretch the year before, when he began the 1976 schedule with almost $48,000 in official earnings in his first five tournaments, including a solo second-place finish in the Crosby National Pro-Am. He credited Joe Nichols, a professional in Phoenix, with correcting some flaws in his game.

Morley's first five years on the PGA Tour were not satisfying, very likely because he had a lot of learning to do. He won three Second Tour events in that period but couldn't crack the Top 60 money lists because, as he explained, "I had virtually no national amateur experience."

Morley entered the game in an unusual manner. "We lived in Morris, Minn., next door to a banker," he relates. "Everyone in that family was an avid golfer. I was about nine years old and their two sons were about four and six years older than me, and they worked at the golf course. One day, they got their mother's clubs and cut them down so they could teach me to play. I remember they really got it when their mother discovered her sawed-off clubs."

Three years later, at age 12, Mike was given his own set. The family moved to Minot, N.D., and he played high school golf for three years. He moved to LaJolla, Calif., for his senior year, where he became a teammate of John Schroeder. Later at Arizona State his teammates included Joe Porter.

Bob Murphy's last two years on the PGA Tour have not been characteristic of his professional career. A painful hand, finally diagnosed as a uric acid condition, damaged his game for most of the summer of 1976, resulting in his barely staying among the Top 60 money winners.

Last year he again finished in the top 10 in six tournaments, but he moved up two notches to 58th on the money list because two of those six high placings were a tie for second in the Quad Cities and a tie for fifth at Philadelphia, both better showings than anything he had in 1976.

Murphy's introduction to competitive golf was little short of miraculous. He entered the University of Florida in the early 1960s as a baseball prospect but he turned to golf when an injury kept him off the diamond his freshman year. Suddenly he won the 1965 U.S. Amateur championship, then the following Spring the NCAA title as a senior.

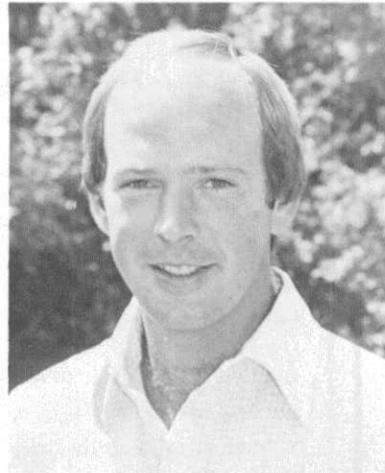

He almost exploded as a pro, too, after gaining his player's card in 1968. As a rookie, he won the Philadelphia and Thunderbird tournaments on consecutive weeks and more than $100,000 for the year, easily the most money banked by a rookie to that time.

In his first six years on the Tour, Murphy wound up no lower than 32nd on the money list. He dropped to 44th position at the end of 1974, the result of a thumb injury which sidelined him for four months and limited him to 19 events.

Early in 1975, however, Bob finished three shots back of Johnny Miller in the Hope Desert Classic and announced: "Murph's ready. If he doesn't get them next week, he'll get them soon."

He tied for 18th the following week in San Diego, but two weeks later he made good on his prediction by winning the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic. Another injury, strained ligaments in his right hand, bothered him in 1975, but he wound up with his greatest year in official earnings with more than $125,000.

Larry Nelson began 1977 exempt from qualifying for the first time, with the growing reputation as one of the best players who hasn't yet won a tournament. A year later his status is unchanged and he doubtless is tiring of the qualified estimation of his skills.

In 1977 he came closer to winning, while boosting his official earnings roughly 50 percent to a hair less than $100,000. Larry tied for second three times—at San Diego, Greensboro and Hartford. The closest he came to victory was a solo third in Phoenix because he finished only a stroke back of the playoff between Jerry Pate and Dave Stockton. On the other hand, his three ties for second were between three and five shots back.

In 1976, he came closest by tying Hale Irwin for second in Hawaii, four back of Ben Crenshaw. He had a chance, too, in Philadelphia before a bogey-double bogey finish dropped him to fourth. That year he missed the cut only six times in a brutal schedule of 35 tournaments and he posted 24 rounds in the 60s.

There are not many stories on the PGA Tour more unusual than Nelson's. Only four years after he started to play golf, and after playing only one 72-hole tournament, he had his Approved Tournament Players card. "I really wasn't ready," he said later, but he got ready in a hurry, as witness his steady climb up the money rankings since then.

Larry lettered in baseball and basketball in high school and attended Southern Tech for a year before he was drafted and spent two years in the military. After his discharge in 1968, he tried school again and also worked as an illustrator at the Lockheed plant near his home.

He went to a driving range one day in 1969, liked hitting balls so much that he went to work in pro Bert Seagraves' shop at the Pine Tree club in Kennesaw, Ga., turned pro six months after that. He tried the mini-tours briefly and, in 1973, finished bogey-bogey in the Florida State Open to lose by a shot. That was his lone 72-hole event before earning his Tour card that fall.

In a sense, Bobby Nichols has the best of all worlds. He is a head pro at one of the finest clubs in the nation, Firestone Country Club, Akron, Ohio, and can play the PGA Tour whenever business permits. But the way Bobby has played for the last two years it must be often painful.

The year 1976 was his least rewarding since he was a rookie in 1960, when he ranked 60th in official earnings. Not counting his unofficial check for $12,944 when he and Gay Brewer lost a playoff to Billy Kratzert and Woody Blackburn in the Disney National Team Championship, Nichols earned less than $10,000 in purses in 1976.

Last year he accumulated slightly less, with ties for 25th in the Gleason and Canadian Open his highest finishes. He entered 18 tournaments, four fewer than in 1976, and earned money in nine of them, including his last six tries, spanning Pleasant valley through the Ohio Kings Island.

Bobby endured a serious auto accident while in high school in Kentucky, where he was a standout football and basketball player, and was forced to switch his interest to golf. Before he was graduated from Texas A&M with a business degree in 1958, he won the Southwest Conference golf title.

Nichols turned pro a year later and joined the PGA Tour in 1960, and in his first 16 years he never once finished out of the Top 60 list. His best year in earnings was 1974, when he won twice for the third time and collected almost $125,000 in checks. He almost repeated at San Diego in 1975 but lost the playoff. Two months later he tied for fourth in the Masters, after leading the first round with 67.

His most vivid memory of 1975 is a terrifying one. At the Western Open in late June he felt the effects of a bolt of lightning and was taken to the hospital along with Lee Trevino and Jerry Heard. He was discharged after a couple days observation.

In 16 events on the PGA Tour, Jack Nicklaus won three times, finished second twice and third once. He boosted his career victory total to 63, surpassing Ben Hogan's 62 and moving into second place on the all-time win list. Jack also passed the $3 million mark in career purses which is noteworthy, too, because no one else has won $2 million.

Much was written that Nicklaus went to the 71st hole tied for the lead in three major championships and didn't win one of them. True, but it is also true that no one else played well enough in the Masters, British Open and PGA Championship to get in that position three times.

Nicklaus' finest playing spell came in an eight-week stretch that started in early April. In order he placed second in the Masters, won the Tournament of Champions the next week, tied for sixth in the Houston Open, won the Memorial Tournament and placed fifth in Atlanta.

Andy North, who had been in contention for victory several times in his first four years on the PGA Tour, was given yet another choice opportunity to win last year in the Westchester Classic—and he didn't let it get away.

Andy got in position with 66-70-65 at Westchester and closed with a 71 to defeat George Archer by two strokes. The $60,000 check accounted for more than half of his total official earnings for 1977, but he also was third alone at Tucson and tied for fourth at Houston, among five finishes in the top 10.

An unusual ailment helped lead North to golf when he was in the seventh grade in Madison, Wis. A bone in his knee had stopped growing and was disintegrating. While on crutches for 18 months he was told to give up his pursuit of basketball and football but that he could play golf—if he rode in a car.

Since Andy's father was a low-handicap golfer, the game was no stranger to the family and he progressed quickly. He also returned to basketball and was chosen all-state as a high school senior, but by then golf was his dominant sport.

North won the Wisconsin high school championship in 1966 and 1967, the State Amateur in 1969 and placed second in the Wisconsin Open in 1968 and 1969. After entering the University of Florida he was chosen All-American for three years and won the 1971 Western Amateur.

Andy joined the PGA Tour in 1973 and won the Little Crosby Second Tour event but just missed the Top 60 money list. He improved 18 places on that list in 1974 and finished second to Dave Hill by a shot at Houston.

The highlight of his 1975 campaign was an opening round of 36-27—63 in the B.C. Open, the seven-under back side equalling the Tour record for nine holes.

North's best effort of 1976 was in the Ohio Kings Island Open, where he led after three rounds but lost to Ben Crenshaw by a stroke.

Winner of a total of 19 international tournaments.

Peter Oosterhuis received a sponsor's exemption to the Canadian Open at the Glen Abbey Golf Club in July, and he made the most of it. The lanky Englishman finished second behind Lee Trevino and that made his year.

Peter collected $25,650 for that fine effort and it guaranteed him a position among the Top 60 money-winners for 1977 and a return to exempt status.

"It was mainly a matter of concentration," he said of his week in Canada. "That's been my problem for quite some time."

Oosterhuis managed two other top 10 finishes for the year, with a tie for third in the Buick Open and a tie for 10th in the U.S. Open. It is interesting to note that the week prior to the Canadian, he skipped the British Open—for the first time in many years—and played in the Quad Cities Open, "because I felt I needed to play here if I wanted to win enough to become exempt." He proceeded to miss the cut.

Peter compiled an enviable record around the world before he obtained his PGA Tour players' card in the Fall of 1974. For four straight years, 1971 through 1974, he led the British Order of Merit. He won such national titles as the French and Italian Opens, was a consistent challenger in the British Open and leading member of the British Ryder Cup teams since 1971.

Even before he obtained his players' card, he proved he could play in this country. He was the third-round leader in the 1973 Masters Tournament but finished tied for third place. The next spring, he led the Monsanto Open at Pensacola late in the final round, but Lee Elder birdied three of the last four holes to tie him, and then Lee won the playoff.

Peter was born in London. His father was from Holland and he went to England during World War II, where he met his bride-to-be. Now, Peter plays out of Mission Hills in Palm Springs, and also has a home in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Although Arnold Palmer was not among the Top 100 money winners in 1977, his position as one of the most popular men ever to play the game again was unchallenged.

Arnold's best finish was a tie for 17th at Houston, but his faithful followers were doubtless most excited during the U.S. Open in Tulsa. Palmer was only a stroke from the lead after an opening 70, but he never quite matched that score the rest of the steaming weekend at Southern Hills CC and tied for 19th. He also tied for 19th in the Kemper and PGA Championship.

Palmer missed the cut four times in the 20 tournaments he entered last year, and all four were bunched in his first eight starts. He was in the money during his last 12 events, except for the Canadian Open, where he withdrew after three rounds.

Although he won both the Spanish Open and British PGA title in 1975, Arnold's last victory at home was in the 1973 Bob Hope Desert Classic, where he shot a three-under 69 the final day at Bermuda Dunes to beat out Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller by two strokes for his fifth triumph in that event. It was his 61st career victory on the PGA Tour, which now ranks him fourth on the all-time list.

For a young man who was forced to miss a dozen weeks of the PGA Tour in 1977, Jerry Pate had a remarkable sophomore year. Injuries to his right shoulder and hand kept him sidelined from Los Angeles, where he withdrew after an opening 71, until the Heritage Classic, and again from the Masters (tied 14th) until Memphis.

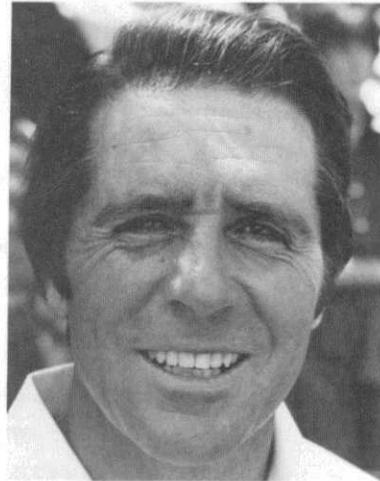

However, in the 17 events he played, Pate won at Phoenix to start the 1977 schedule and again in the Southern Open near the end. He missed the cut only in the U.S. Open. His most lucrative stretch was his last six events, when he placed fifth in the PGA, tied for sixth in the Colgate Hall of Fame, tied for 10th in the B.C. Open, tied for ninth in the Ohio Kings Island, won the Southern and tied for 18th at Pensacola after leading midway with 68-67 on his home course.

Pate literally burst into world-wide attention as a PGA Tour rookie in 1976. His last swing in the U.S. Open, a five-iron from the rough at Atlanta Athletic Club, left him a two-foot birdie putt for a two-shot victory, and his closing 63 in the Canadian Open was good for a four-stroke victory over Jack Nicklaus. His total of $153,102 in official earnings was the most ever won by a rookie.

Conrad Rehling, who developed Bob Murphy while coaching at the University of Florida in the early 1960s, found another champion-to-be about a decade later while coaching at a small college near Pensacola. Pate was still in high school when he came under Rehling's wing. When Rehling moved to the University of Alabama, Pate followed. In 1974, like Murphy nine years earlier, Pate won the U.S. and Florida Amateur titles.

Jerry also helped the U.S. win the 1974 World Amateur Team championship and the 1975 Walker Cup matches. As an amateur he finished sixth in the Pensacola Open and tied for 18th in the U.S. Open, both in 1975.

Ten-time winner South African Open: 1956, 1960, 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1972, 1975, and 1976. Winner Australian Open seven times: 1958, 1962, 1963, 1965, 1966, 1970, and 1974. Five-time winner World Picadilly: 1965, 1966, 1968, 1971, and 1973. Other victories include: 1957 Australian PGA; 1965 World Cup (individual and team): 1965, 1968, and 1972 World Series of Golf; 1972 and 1974 Brazilian Open; 1976 General Motors Classic; and, 1976 South African Duplop Masters.

Although victory eluded him on the PGA Tour for the third straight year, Gary Player, having passed his 40th birthday, played with a consistency in 1977 reminiscent of his most rewarding visits to this country in years past. In 18 tournaments, the purposeful South African missed the cut only in Los Angeles, finished in the Top 10 eight times and in the money in his last 16.

Player's top finish was a solo second in the Gleason-Inverrary, his third start of 1977, and oddly enough it was one of his more inconsistent performances of the year. His opening 68 gave him a one-shot lead, but then he fell back with a 73, recovered with 66 and closed with another 73 to lose to Jack Nicklaus by five strokes.

His most rewarding stretch covered a nine-week period of the Spring and early Summer when he tied for seventh in the Memorial, tied for second at Memphis, tied for 10th at the U.S. Open and tied for fifth at Pleasant Valley.

Player underwent an operation in January, 1973, which kept him at home for about four months and resulted in his dropping out of the PGA Tour's Top 60 money list for the first time since 1958. He rebounded in 1974 by winning the Masters for the second time and the British Open for a third and earning more than $100,000 after only 15 appearances in the U.S.

He also won at Memphis that year by rallying from five strokes back with 17 holes remaining. His Masters triumph in 1974 also pushed him over the million-dollar mark in U.S. career earnings.

1977 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered-30; In money-12; Top ten finishes-4; Stroke avg.—72.89.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Arizona State Amateur and Southwest Open champions, both 1972.

Tom Purtzer got an early start in golf because his father, Horace, enjoyed the game.

"Dad was a good golfer," Purtzer said, in recalling his own background in the game. "I guess he was a two or a three handicapper when I was very young. He wanted both of his sons to play the game and Paul and I were given cut-down clubs. We started hitting the ball, I guess, when we were eight or nine.

"Meanwhile, I liked baseball and football and played both. When I got to high school I gave up baseball, I played high school football and then concentrated on golf."

Purtzer continued to play golf for Arizona State and became one of the better collegiate players. He also won both the Arizona State amateur title and the Southwest Open in 1972.

The next year, 1973, Tom won the Broadmoor Men's Invitational and also was named to the All-America Collegiate golf team. He turned pro not long after graduating with a business degree.

Tom failed to earn his playing privileges at the PGA Qualifying School twice. He recalls: "The first time was only by two shots but the second was by a bunch."

Tom continued to season his game by competing on mini-tours in Arizona and Southern California and also went abroad in 1975. It was during a Far Eastern swing that year that Purtzer won the Thailand Open.

Tom was a successful qualifier in the 1975 Spring Qualifying School at North Myrtle Beach, S.C., and he finished the year on the Tour earning $2,093. In 1976, his first full year on the Tour, Purtzer earned $26,682 and finished 82nd on the money-winning list.

He looked forward to 1977 and set himself a goal: Win a tournament.

"I knew I was playing well going into Los Angeles," Tom recalls. At the Bob Hope Desert Classic, the tournament before the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open, Purtzer scored 77-68-70-73-70—358. He received a $820 check.

"Although I had the feeling that I could win during 1977," Tom continued, "I had no idea it would come so early in the year. Everything just fell together for me. It was a great feeling and really took me several days to realize and appreciate what had happened."

In addition to his winning play on Riviera Country Club, Purtzer also played exceptionally well at LaCosta and Southern Hills. In the 1977 Tournament of Champions, played at LaCosta, Tom went into the final round with a six-under 210 and tied with Jack Nicklaus for the lead. Nicklaus went on to shoot a 71 to win and Purtzer slipped to a 73 to tie for third.

At Southern Hills and the 1977 U.S. Open Championship, Purtzer was one of seven players tied for the lead after the first round with 69s. Another 69 left him two strokes back of the 36-hole leader, Hubert Green. But Purtzer finished the tournament with a pair of 72s for a fourth-place finish.

When Bill Rogers was attending the University of Houston, he was nicknamed the "Panther" by his roommate, Bruce Lietzke. "I was the jumpy type," he said. "I never wanted to miss anything.

"I was still that way during my first two years on the PGA Tour," he continued. "and they were something of a disappointment to me. I had to learn to adjust."

He did just that in 1977 and enjoyed a most successful year. "I was better prepared than I've ever been," he said, "and when I had the good finish in the Bing Crosby, finishing fourth, it gave me the confidence I needed. From there, it just seemed to carry on through the year."

Bill joined the PGA Tour after being graduated from the 1974 Qualifying School. He did so with impressive credentials, such as winning the 1972 Southern Amateur and being a member of the 1973 Walker Cup team. In 1973, he was named the "outstanding athlete" at the University of Houston.

His best finish during his first two years on the PGA Tour was fourth place in the 1975 Southern Open. He won the 1976 Open in Arizona, a Second Tour event opposite the Phoenix Open.

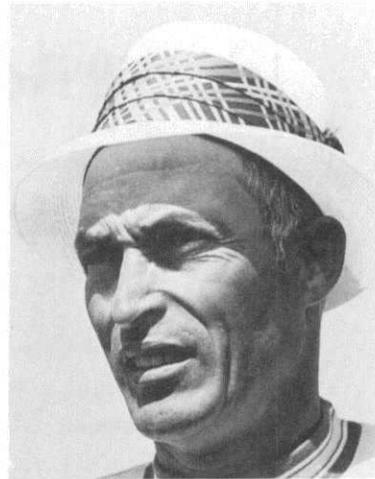

"I'm writing those first two years off as a learning experience," he said. "And, I did learn. I believe I'm a better player because of it.

I've learned to handle certain situations on the course better," he went on, "not only shot situations, but also how to adjust to tournament situations, when to play the percentages."

Bill started to play the game at age nine in Montgomery, Ala., and was playing competitively by the time he was 13 and the family was living in Texarkana, Tex. Although his father and brother started him, it was Jerry Robinson, professional at the North Ridge Country Club in Texarkana, who taught him the fine points of the game.

Bill's father was a Lieutenant Colonel in the Air Force, and, from age three to six, he lived in Germany; from ages six through eight, he lived in Morocco, North Africa. "Dad is retired from the Air Force now, and he still is a good player. He played in a lot of the major Air Force tournaments when he was in the service."

Juan (Chi Chi) Rodriguez, after two years of finishing below the Top 60 in money winnings, regained the charmed list by cashing checks in 16 of his 28 tournaments, winding up in the top 10 on four occasions.

A five-week stretch in the Spring was his most rewarding last year. Chi Chi tied for ninth at New Orleans, placed third in Houston, tied for 11th in both the Nelson and Colonial and tied for fifth in the Memorial. A second-round 66 put him in position to win at Houston, but a pair of 71s the last two days left him four strokes back of winner Gene Littler.

Still, that third place was better than anything in 1976, when he tied for fifth at Hartford and Pensacola for his top finishes. Chi Chi collected only four checks in his first 13 events in 1976, but made money in 11 of his final 16 tournaments that year and improved 40 places on the money charts from 1975.

Chi Chi, a favorite with galleries everywhere, passed his 40th birthday in the Fall of 1975 and reflected on the worst of his then 16 years on the PGA Tour. He could have mentioned that he was sidelined three times by flu during the year. "But I can't use that as an excuse. I just didn't play well. For some reason, the cuts just got awfully small," he said.

Rodriguez gravitated to golf as a boy in Puerto Rico by hitting tin cans with limbs from a guava tree. He joined the Army at 19 because he could make more money for his family than by working at home.

He arrived on the PGA Tour in 1960 and didn't finish higher than sixth until he won the 1963 Denver Open. He remained among the Top 60 money winners until surgery on his arms limited his schedule in 1971. But he rebounded in 1972 by winning the Byron Nelson Classic and finishing in the Top 10 in eight other events, enjoying his finest year at the pay window.

Midway through 1976, John Schroeder decided he was getting nowhere on the PGA Tour. He said he had to make a decision, either to leave or find someone who could turn his game around.

He visited Jim Ballard, the professional at Pell City, Ala., and the man who has aided others such as B. R. (Mac) McLendon. He did exactly what John wanted him to do. "He taught me how to draw the ball," John explains, "and how to be more consistent."

After winning only $16,205 in 1976, John started to reap the rewards of his work with a tie for second in his hometown at the Andy Williams-San Diego Open. He struck it rich again in mid-May at the Colonial National Invitation. He held a four-stroke lead after two rounds with 66-65—131, and led Ben Crenshaw by one after three rounds. But Crenshaw came on strong the final day to get the victory by a stroke over Schroeder.

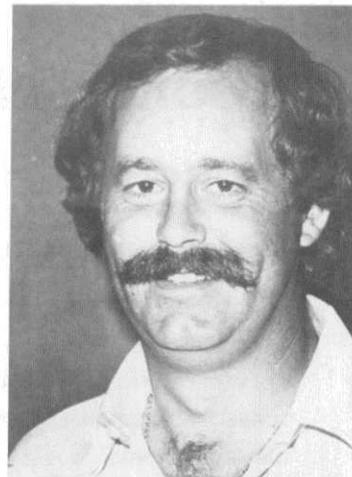

A solo fourth in the Anheuser-Busch Classic, thanks to a final-round six-under 66, helped cement a position among the Top 60.

Since joining the Tour in 1969, he has one victory, in the 1973 U. S. Professional Match Play championship. Along the way, in order, he defeated Grier Jones, Bud Allin, Lee Trevino (one up) and, in the 18-hole final, DeWitt Weaver, two up.

John is the son of Ted Schroeder, one of the greats in tennis history. Ted won the 1949 Wimbledon championship and was a standout performer on 10 U. S. Davis Cup teams.

Tendonitis in the left hand hindered John's progress periodically from 1974 through 1976, but he believes that is a thing of the past.

Runner-up 1975 World Cup individual title.

Bob Shearer is another in the long line of outstanding golfers to come out of Australia and, while he moved in among the Top 60 money winners in his first full year on Tour, it was a very difficult year.

In late February, it was discovered he had pancreatitis and he was unable to play the schedule he had planned. He became so ill that there was considerable concern for his life.

He was out for five weeks following the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic, and for a seven-week stretch in June and July. Even when he did play, he was only able to go for two or three weeks at a time.

Early in the year he played exceptionally well, with ties for fourth in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open and again in the Bob Hope Desert Classic. Another strong finish came in the IVB-Philadelphia Classic, when he finished with a 67 to tie for second place.

Bob started in the game as a youngster in Bingley, a suburb of Melbourne. He still lives there, near the Southern Golf Club where it all started for him.

He established himself as a comer when he won the Victoria Boys' Championship as a 15-year-old. He later won the Australian Amateur in 1969 and turned professional the following year.

Playing around the world, he enjoyed success, winning such events as the 1974 Tasmanian Open and 1975 Madrid Open, along with several tournaments in Australia and New Zealand.

After a very successful 1975, during which he won three impressive titles and finished second in the British Order of Merit, he considered trying for his U.S. Tour card, but then reasoned, "I didn't think my game was quite ready. I didn't want to come to the United States and not succeed," he said.

He also represented Australia in World Cup play in 1975, and finished as the runner-up in the individual competition.

Bob joined the Tour after he won co-medalist honors with Woody Blackburn in the Spring 1976 Qualifying School.

Jim Simons will be the first to say that his early years on the PGA Tour were not up to expectations. He probably won't mention, however, that he was hampered with physical ailments. He had tendonitis in his left wrist, but more painful was his left shoulder which was diagnosed as a "looseness in the joint—a minor dislocation." It was the result of some "horsing-around" in his fraternity house at Wake Forest.

Simons was graduated from the Fall 1972 PGA Tour Qualifying School and did not have an opportunity to compete in many events. During his first year on the Tour he was in considerable pain, mainly, it developed, because his injury had not yet been diagnosed properly. He recalls: "I was doing stretching exercises because I felt a tightness, but that was just the opposite of what I needed."

Jim's father started him in golf at Butler, Pa., Country Club at the age of nine. He lived on a farm and says now, "I'd ride over to the club on my bike in the morning and either play or hit balls most of the day and ride back in the evening."

He started competition at the age of 13 and his progress was rapid. He first enrolled at the University of Houston but, after a year, transferred to Wake Forest. He was on the 1971 Walker Cup team and remained overseas for the 1971 British Amateur, reaching the final round where he lost to Steve Melnyk.

In the 1971 U.S. Open, at Merion, he gained national attention by leading the tournament after the third round. He finished in a tie for fifth and was low amateur. He also was low amateur in the 1972 Open at Pebble Beach. He turned pro that Fall.

Before 1977, Simons' best year was 1975 when he finished in the Top 60—thereby gaining a year's exemption from qualifying for 1976 events—with winnings of $47,724. That year he had four finishes in the top 10. His finest effort was a tie for third in the Pleasant Valley Classic. It was a superb final round 65, six-under, that lifted him to a 278. He was two strokes back of winner Roger Maltbie. Solid rounds were responsible for his five-under 279 and solo fourth finish in the IVB-Philadelphia Classic, and the seven-under 281 for a tie for fifth in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic. He also tied for seventh in the Western Open.

At New Orleans in 1977, Simons started the final day three shots behind the leader, Tom Watson. Because of a rainout, 36 holes were scheduled and Simons shot 67-67 that day. His third round score put Simons into the lead by one stroke, and built up his hopes for victory.

On the 63rd hole Simons faced a 70-foot putt for a bird and when the ball dropped into the cup he said to himself: "If I don't win this tournament, something's wrong."

He finished three strokes ahead of Stan Lee and four in front of Tom Watson and said: "There are guys who have been out here for 10 years and never won. I was beginning to think that I might be one of them. I only hope the next one isn't as tough as the first."

Although solidly among the Top 60 money winners in 1977, J.C. Snead could not look fondly on his performance overall last year—not in comparison with his previous six. He had only four top 10 finishes scattered throughout the year, and his best was in the final tournament at Pensacola, where he placed third by scoring 67-65-67 in the last three rounds.

Now 1976 was a year worth remembering. He won twice, at San Diego early on the schedule and in the Kaiser late in the year, and he enjoyed his greatest year at the pay window with almost $200,000 in official checks. He also was second twice and placed among the top 10 on nine occasions.

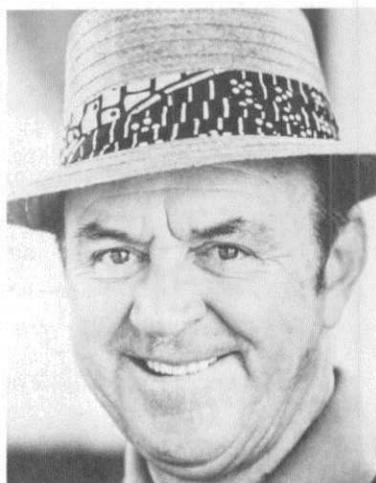

Jesse Carlyle Snead, although still constantly mentioned as the nephew of legendary Sam Snead, can stand on his own performance record. After growing up in Hot Springs, Va., he sought a career in baseball and served in the Washington Senators' farm system before turning to golf as a pro in 1964.

He worked for head pro Charlie Beverage at the Century CC, Westchester County, N.Y., while twice failing to pass the PGA Tour Qualifying School, and it was four years before he earned his card. Following three so-so years on the Tour, J.C. burst into golf's consciousness by winning twice in a three-week period, at Tucson and Doral, immediately before and after the PGA Championship in Florida.

He won again in Philadelphia in 1972 but he was not ranked among the $100,000 earners until 1973 and 1974 when, oddly enough, he did not win. His figure of $164,486 in 1974 was a Tour record for a non-winner as he finished in the Top 10 in 11 of his 30 events. He had four runnerup finishes and two thirds.

In 1975, J.C. returned to the victory column at San Diego and qualified for his third straight Ryder Cup. He closed with 68 at Torrey Pines to catch Ray Floyd and Bobby Nichols and won the playoff.

Ed Sneed dropped out of the Top 60 money list last year for the first time since 1972, but returned to victory lane after almost a three-year absence by winning at Tallahassee. In mid-April at the Killlearn G&CC, Ed opened with four-under 68 to tie four others for the lead, dropped back with 70, gained the lead alone with another 68, fell into a tie with Lon Hinkle with a closing 70, then beat Hinkle with a birdie on the first playoff hole.

Sneed earned sufficient points throughout the year to gain a place on the Ryder Cup team and then almost had to give up that position. Fortunately, he was able to delay an operation to correct a hernia until after his return with the victorious Ryder team.

Back in 1976, Sneed was doubtless wondering what it took to win again, after a sizzling streak in the Summer which showed a tie for third at Milwaukee, tie for fifth at Westchester, a fourth in the Canadian Open, and a tie for third in the B.C. Open. Then, after a disappointing showing in the PGA Championship, Ed tied for fourth in the American Golf Classic in Akron. It added up, at the end of 1976, to his most lucrative of seven full years on the Tour.

While serving a so-called four-year apprenticeship on the PGA Tour, during which Sneed never came close to cracking the Top 100 money list, Sneed was told more than once by his fellow Ohio State alumnus, Tom Weiskopf, that there was no reason he shouldn't be among the Top 60. Long Tom proved right, it turned out.

Sneed won the New South Wales Open in Australia late in 1973, grabbed a plane for San Francisco and—gaining a day via the international dateline—arrived in Napa, Calif., in time for Monday qualifying for the Kaiser International. The following Sunday he beat John Schlee in a playoff for his first Tour triumph. The following July, in 1974, Ed led all four rounds at Milwaukee.

Sneed started golf at age 13 in his native Roanoke, Va. He earned his privileges to play the Tour in 1969 but it was another two years before he decided to play full time.

Dave Stockton no doubt had the feeling, after finishing second to Jerry Pate at Phoenix to start the 1977 season, that he would perform at least as well as he had in 1976, when he won his second PGA Championship. It was not to be. After losing a playoff at Phoenix, Dave managed only three other top 10 finishes last year and finished with his lowest money total in a decade.

Stockton was in position to win at Atlanta last May, when he started 68-69 and was tied for first position, but a closing pair of 71s dropped him to sixth. Two weeks later he began his worst slump of 1977, encompassing missed cuts at Memphis, the U.S. Open and the Western Open. However, Dave earned checks in his next seven starts to rescue 53rd place on the year's money list.

Stockton graduated from the University of California in 1964, turned professional immediately and struggled for three years on the PGA Tour before winning the prestigious Colonial National Invitation in 1967. He hasn't been out of the Top 60 since.

He won his first PGA Championship in 1970, when he fought off extreme heat and a stretch challenge from Arnold Palmer at Southern Hills in Tulsa. Three victories in 1974 resulted in his most productive year. Dave's first win that year was at Los Angeles, where his 235-yard, three wood shot on the 72nd hole set up a 12-foot birdie putt which beat Sam Snead and John Mahaffey.

He didn't win after 1974, however, until the 1976 PGA at Congressional. "I probably was heading for my poorest year," Stockton said, "and I can't tell you why. I was in the best physical condition of my life. I guess it was mental."

Stockton shot 70-72-69 at Congressional, and was four strokes back entering the last round. But he forged in front entering the last nine and then, on the water-guarded 72nd green, rolled in a 13-foot putt to beat Ray Floyd and Don January by a shot each.

After Leonard Thompson carved out a two-stroke lead through three rounds of the 1977 Pensacola Open, he said: "If I'm ever going to win again, now is the time to do it. We'll have to see if I'm man enough to do it."

He moved on to the victory, cementing it with a 50-footer for a birdie at the final hole for a two-stroke margin over Curtis Strange. It was his second triumph since earning his PGA Tour card in the Fall of 1971, and the $25,000 check raised his 1977 earnings to $107,293.

His initial victory came in the 1974 Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic and the big fellow from North Carolina collected $122,349 that year. Everyone expected him to have a long-and-prosperous career at that point, but then came the battle of the scales. He saw his weight rise close to 230 pounds. Starting in mid-November of 1974, he went on a crash diet. In 3 1/2 months, he lost nearly 50 pounds.

"Suddenly I couldn't stop losing," he said. "I went to a low of 183 pounds and didn't have any strength."

He went to Arnold Palmer for help with his golf swing and looked for ways to get his weight back up to 200 pounds. Both programs were successful, but not easy. By the end of 1976, there were signs of improvement, even though he only won $26,566. Early in 1977, the improvement continued, but he found it difficult to sustain his good play.

His tie for fifth in the Bing Crosby gave him his biggest boost. Seven weeks later, he tied for sixth in the Doral-Eastern Open. He later tied for sixth in the Houston Open and Westchester Classic.

He reached one of the high points of his career in the Colgate-Hall of Fame Classic on the Pinehurst No. 2 course. He finished second to Hale Irwin, but, on the final afternoon, he set a course record with a seven-under 29 on the back nine. "I have seen things and done things here this week that I never conceived would be possible on No. 2," he said.

Lee Trevino ordinarily doesn't play the Far West segment of the PGA Tour, which starts the year. In retrospect, last year he shouldn't have tried to play in Florida in late winter, either. Trevino had undergone back surgery in November of 1976 and couldn't wait to return. He came out in Florida and finished far down at Gleason and Orlando and then missed the cut at Doral. He played nine practice holes at Sawgrass the Sunday before the Tournament Players Championship and withdrew.

But when hot weather arrived, Trevino had his back and game in shape. He placed in the top 10 in three events, although his late start limited him to 20 starts. And he did win once.

Trevino led the Canadian Open from the opening bell and won by four strokes despite a closing 74 at Glen Abbey GC for his 20th PGA Tour victory.

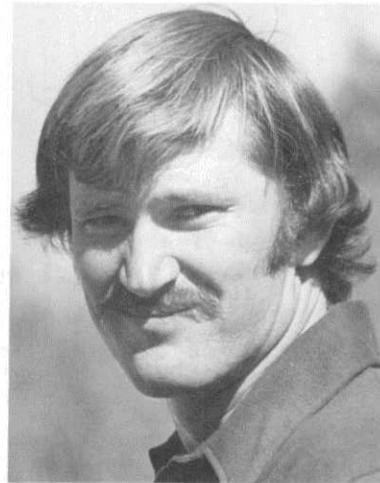

Trevino tied for 54th in the 1966 U.S. Open at Olympic Club in San Francisco, and he didn't try the Tour again until a year later at Baltusrol. He placed sixth in that U.S. Open, and was on the Tour to stay. He was chosen "rookie-of-the-year" for 1967. Twelve months after Baltusrol, the quick-quiping Merry Mex from Dallas was entertaining everyone at a margarita party in the clubhouse at Oak Hill CC, Rochester, where he had just won the 1968 U.S. Open.

Lee won the U.S. Open again in 1971, defeating Jack Nicklaus in a playoff at Merion, and in a span of five weeks that Summer he added the Canadian and British Open titles to his fast-growing collection. He was named player of the year practically by acclamation.

Trevino won the British Open again in 1972. In May of 1973 he marked $1 million in Tour earnings by tying for second at Memphis, and no one ever made his first million more quickly in the game. The following Summer at Tanglewood near Winston-Salem, N.C., he captured his fifth major title, the PGA Championship.

Although he stands 6-feet-5 and weighs over 200 pounds, Howard Twitty has been the sort to keep a low profile on the PGA Tour ever since he arrived in mid-1975. Three top 10 finishes in 1976 helped jump him into the Top 60 money list, but last year he was outside the charmed 60 when he got to Napa, Calif. late in September.

Twitty had made 13 straight checks, starting at Memphis in June, but he was lolling in 62nd place on the money list. He opened with 73-71 at Silverado CC and added a 69, then scorched the proceedings with a course-record, 10-under 62 which vaulted him to third place. The check for $14,200 also lifted him into 49th place on the money list by season's end.

Twitty believes now that his ample physical proportions probably slowed his progress in golf at the start. He started to play at age 10 but it wasn't until he was a senior in high school in Phoenix that his game started to develop.

"I was about 6-3 when I was a sophomore," he recalls, "and I was terrible. I guess I just needed time to catch up with my body. I didn't have the coordination that I needed."

As a sophomore and junior at Arizona State, Twitty really showed progress, however. He won the important Sunnehanna and Porter Cup amateur events and, when a senior, he finished right behind the Texas co-champions, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite, in the NCAA championship.

Twitty turned pro in 1973 and twice failed in the PGA Tour Qualifying School before meeting success in June 1975. That was the same year he also won the Thailand Open during a second trip to the Far East circuit.

Starting 1976, Twitty finished second to Johnny Miller at Tucson, winning $22,800. He shot 7-70-68-68-277 and was grateful to finish three strokes back. "I did a lot of praying out there," Howard said, "and the Lord answered every prayer."

Member of 1970 World Amateur Cup team, 1969 and 1971 Walker Cup team, 1977 Ryder Cup team, 1977 World Cup team. 1970 and 1971 Collegiate All-American.

When Lanny Wadkins finished second in the 1977 Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open, he knew he was back. He knew the two-year drought was over and that he would win again.

He continued to impress as the year progressed and when Lanny did strike, it was in brilliant fashion. He won the PGA Championship at Pebble Beach, coming from five strokes off the pace in the final nine holes to tie Gene Littler, and then won the playoff on the third extra hole.

Three weeks later, he struck again, winning the World Series of Golf Championship on the South Course at Firestone Country Club by five strokes and with a tournament course record of 13-under 267.

"The fact that I won the PGA hasn't sunk in yet," he said as he relaxed in the victor's stand at the World Series. "Just the thought of winning it is exciting. Now, the World Series! There isn't any way I can describe what it means to me."

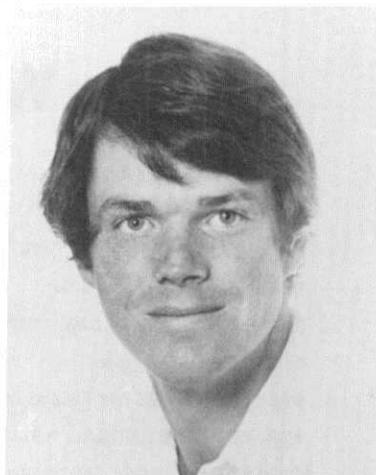

He also finished second in the Houston Open in 1977, ironically enough, behind Littler, and had nine top 10 finishes. His $244,882 placed him third in the money race. As a result of his triumphs, he also earned positions on the U.S. Ryder Cup and World Cup teams.

Lanny enjoyed a brilliant amateur career, highlighted by a victory in the 1970 U.S. Amateur. It wasn't any surprise when he became an immediate success on the PGA Tour. After earning his players' card in the Fall of 1971, he went on to win the 1972 Sahara Invitational.

His superb play continued through 1973, winning $200,455, with victories in the Byron Nelson Classic in Dallas and the USI Classic in Sutton, Mass. His game started to sag in 1974. As the year progressed, he found it difficult to maintain his energy. In the Fall his ailment was diagnosed as a diseased gall bladder and in early December, he underwent an operation for its removal.

Going against doctor's orders, he returned to the PGA Tour in less than three months. Still weak, he developed bad habits and he admits it wasn't until mid-1976 that he was able to get his game back in its original groove.

At the end of the 1975 World Series of Golf, in which Tom Watson had beaten Jack Nicklaus for the $50,000 first prize, Nicklaus said of his conqueror: "He knows exactly where he's going—straight ahead. Nothing distracts him. He has great abilities, super confidence and just enough cockiness. He's not a comer; he has arrived."

Nicklaus could not have predicted what Watson wrought in 1977, however. Watson beat Jack in both the Masters and British Open, won three other PGA Tour events, accumulated more than $300,000 (third best all-time), placed in the top 10 an amazing 17 times in 23 events, missed the cut only once and in the other 22 tournaments his worst finish was a tie for 42nd at Dallas. He was nearly everybody's "Player of the Year."

Watson was only six years old when his father, a scratch golfer, exposed him to the game. Tom became a four-time winner of the Missouri Amateur and played three years at Stanford University before graduating in 1971 with a degree in Psychology.

He admits to playing only one good tournament as a Tour rookie in 1972. He closed with 69-66 at Quad Cities and lost by a shot to Deane Beman. He challenged twice in 1973, but crashed the Top 60 money list with ease.

In 1974 Watson attracted attention by placing fourth, ninth and fourth at San Diego, Hawaii and Los Angeles, respectively, but he was a sensation in June. He led the U.S. Open at Winged Foot before closing with 79. After a talk with Byron Nelson, however, Tom finished with 69 at Butler National to win the Western Open, making up six strokes in the final round for the Tour's best winning rally of 1974.

Tom repaid Nelson for his help by winning Byron's own tournament in 1975 in Dallas, before also winning the British Open for the first time. He was in the top 10 in a dozen 1975 events. But 1976 was a relative off year for him. He was consistent, placing in the top 10 in 11 of his 25 tournaments and twice finishing second, but his earnings dipped slightly and he didn't win.

Tom Weiskopf entered four fewer tournaments last year than in 1976, a total of 23 on the PGA Tour, and he had to feel the reduced schedule was more productive. His number of top 10 finishes dipped by two, to a total of nine last year, but he jumped more than $60,000 in earnings to almost $200,000. And he won again.

In the Kemper Open, which he had won twice previously, Weiskopf moved in to a tie for the lead after three rounds and closed with a two-under 70 which turned back Bill Rogers and George Burns by two shots.

The Kemper began a torrid four-week stretch in June in which Tom also tied for fourth at Memphis, placed third in the U.S. Open and gained solo fourth in the Western Open.

Long regarded as one of the most talented players on the Tour, Weiskopf proved in one dazzling spell in 1973 that he is capable of reaching unusual heights. During eight weeks that Spring and Summer he won five tournaments, including the British and Canadian Opens. Carrying over to two other tournaments, he shot in the 60s in exactly half of his 40 rounds.

Later in 1973 Weiskopf also won the World Series of Golf and the South African PGA Championship. Although failing to win in 1974, Weiskopf passed the $1 million barrier in career earnings and finished in the top 10 in nine of 21 events. In 1975 he was a winner again and easily topped $200,000 for the second time.

In 50-mile-per-hour winds and 40-degree temperatures at Greensboro, Tom opened with an incredible seven-under 64 and was not caught. Three and a half months later in 1975 he defeated old friend Jack Nicklaus to win the Canadian Open for the second time, scoring birdie on the first playoff hole.

As in 1977, Weiskopf was as hot as the weather in June 1976. In 1976 he finished one stroke back of Joe Inman in the Kemper Open and tied Al Geiberger for second in the U.S. Open, two behind rookie Jerry Pate.

Kermit Zarley mustered a stretch drive last Summer and Fall which produced paychecks in nine straight events, but he missed the cut at Pensacola and failed by $1,103 to land among the Top 60. Kermit had five top 10 finishes last year.

It was his fourth straight year of disappointing overall performance, although Kermit made the Top 60 in 1976. His mediocre play in 1974 and 1975 was the result, largely, from what a doctor called a "bulging disc" between two vertebrae in his neck. The pain was often intense when he swung a club, and he was forced into traction for many hours.

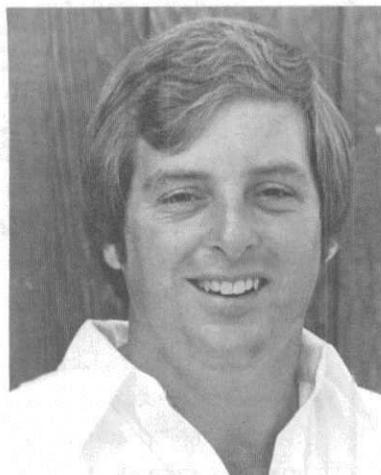

Zarley submitted to surgery in the Fall of 1975, the two vertebrae were fused and his golf game recovered significantly the following year. Kermit's best showing of 1976 was a second in the Florida Citrus Open, where Hale Irwin forced a playoff and won on the sixth extra hole.

Zarley started in golf in his native Seattle, where his father owned a restaurant near a public course. He won the Washington State and Northwestern Amateur championships before entering the University of Houston, where he won the NCAA title in 1962 and was graduated in 1963.

Kermit won the Kaiser International in 1968 and the Canadian Open in 1970 and, partnered with close friend Babe Hiskey, added the National Team Championship in 1972. Kermit and Babe have long been active in the PGA Tour's weekly Bible study sessions.

Also in 1972, Zarley trailed Jack Nicklaus by only a stroke in the U.S. Open, after three rounds, but high winds the last day helped him score 79 at Pebble Beach. Zarley enjoyed his best earnings year in 1973, although failing to win. His best finish was a tie for second in the Quad Cities, thanks to a closing 67.

Until the Quad Cities Open of 1976, Fuzzy Zoeller attracted attention on the PGA Tour principally because of his distinctive first name and the extreme length of his shots. In the first round of the Quad Cities, Zoeller strolled into the press room at Oakwood CC in Coal Valley, Ill., and said: "I was told to come down for an interview." "What did you shoot?" someone asked. "I birdied the last eight holes for a 63," he said calmly, before breaking out in a wide grin.

The score not only set a course record but the string of birdies tied the PGA Tour record set by Bob Goalby in the 1961 St. Petersburg Open.

His eventual runnerup finish in the Quad Cities still is his personal best in three years on the PGA Tour, but it seems only a question of time before he breaks through to victory. Last year Fuzzy improved 16 places on the money list and by almost $25,000, thanks largely to a three-week stretch in late Winter. Fuzzy placed third at Los Angeles, tied for third at the Gleason and tied for ninth at Orlando, accumulating almost $32,000.

Zoeller grew up alongside a fairway at the Valley View CC in New Albany, Ind., and it seemed natural when he started swinging a golf club at age three. He entered his first tournament two years later. He enjoyed all sports while growing up, but when he was eight his father said to him, "Son, all we're doing is running back and forth between the golf course and the baseball diamond. You had better choose one."

Fuzzy chose golf, but during his days in high school he played varsity basketball, mainly, he said to "keep in shape for golf, and in Indiana in the winter you can't play golf."

He was second in the State scholastic golf tournament in 1970 and went to Edison Junior College in Florida, where he won the State Junior College title before entering the University of Houston.

Geiberger Shatters Scoring Mark

June 10, 1977. Mark it. On that day, Al Geiberger chopped down one of the PGA Tour's most enduring records by firing an incredible 59 in the second round of the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic. Starting on the tenth hole, Geiberger blitzed the 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club layout in sides of 30 and 29, with 11 birdies, one eagle, and six pars en route to the 13-under-par effort.

Needing just 23 putts and missing nary a green, the lanky Californian toppled the previous mark of 60 set by Al Brosch at Brackenridge Park in San Antonio in 1951 and tied since by Bill Nary, Ted Kroll, Wally Ulrich, Tommy Bolt, Mike Souchak, and Sam Snead.

Indeed, when Al rolled in the barrier-busting eight-footer on the final green that afternoon in Memphis, he provided the PGA Tour with one of its most dramatic moments in a long, long time. The following is a shot-by-shot account of how he accomplished his remarkable feat.

No. 10, 417 yards, par 4: Drive, six iron, 40-foot putt—BIRDIE.

No. 11, 376 yards, par 4: Two iron, eight iron, two putts from 15 feet—PAR.

No. 13, 464 yards, par 4: Drive, seven iron, two putts from 30 feet—PAR.

No. 14, 447 yards, par 4: Drive, seven iron, two putts from eight feet—PAR.

No. 15, 200 yards, par 3: Three iron, 15-foot putt—BIRDIE.

No. 16, 512 yards, par 5: Drive, four wood, chip, five-foot putt—BIRDIE.

No. 17, 433 yards, par 4: Drive, eight iron, 12-foot putt—BIRDIE.

No. 18, 548 yards, par 5: Drive, five iron, pitching wedge, 12-foot putt—BIRDIE.

The Championship

The third edition of the new World Series of Golf—truly "The Championship of World class players"—will be contested over the South Course of Firestone Country Club, Akron, Ohio, Sept. 28-Oct. 1, 1978. Again, the purse will be $300,000 with $100,000 going to the Champion.

The field will have a minimum of 24 players. If it becomes necessary to complete the field, players will be selected from the PGA Tour Official Money List in order after the 10th position at the end of play in the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic on September 24, 1978.

Players eligible for the 1978 Championship include:

- The defending Champion, Lanny Wadkins.

- Winner, 1978 U.S. Open.
- Winner, 1978 British Open.

- Top ten leaders on the PGA Tour Official Money List, beginning Jan. 1, 1978, concluding Sept. 24, 1978.

The World Series of Golf trophy was designed by sculptor John Safer, of Rockville, Md.

Winter, Spring and Summer Tour Point Races

The PGA Tour schedule has been divided into three seasonal segments to give continuity to the individual tournaments and to honor players who have performed well during the various seasons. The segments are known as the:

- WINTER TOUR, which started with the 1977 World Series of Golf and the 1977 Buick Open and will conclude with the Doral-Eastern Open, March 12, 1978.
- SPRING TOUR, which will start with the 1978 Tournament Players Championship and will conclude with the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic, June 11, 1978.
- SUMMER TOUR, which will start with the 1978 U.S. Open and will conclude with the tournament ending Sept. 24.

Points are awarded on the following basis: First place, 100 points; second, 57; third, 36; fourth, 22; fifth, 19; sixth, 17; seventh, 15; eighth, 13; ninth, 11; and tenth, 10.

A handsome gold-plated money clip is given to each seasonal champion.

Commissioner Beman congratulates TPC winner Mark Hayes and his wife, Jana.

The Quiet Man is Heard

Mark Hayes is known as one of the quietest members of the PGA Tour. He goes about his business on the golf course with a minimum of display. So it was appropriate that the 28-year-old Oklahoma native should win the fourth Tournament Players Championship in the manner he did, slipping in among, and ultimately passing the leaders during the final two rounds.

Although Mark's winning total—a one-over-par 289—was the year's highest, his rounds of 72, 74, 71 and 72 were remarkable in light of the difficulties encountered at the TPC's new home, Sawgrass. A young layout in Jacksonville, Florida, Sawgrass, armed with hazards of every variety and aided by gusting winds off the adjacent Atlantic, gamely did battle with the season's finest field.

Hayes managed to remain out of the spotlight until the tournament's final holes. Up to that point, the man making most of the headlines was a player unaccustomed to such attention, 32-year-old Mike McCullough of Coshocton, Ohio. McCullough, in his sixth year on the PGA Tour, held or shared the lead through the first three rounds, ultimately finishing second, just two strokes off the pace.

On Thursday, Mike opened with the best round of the entire tournament, a six-under-par 66 that put him two shots ahead of his closest pursuers: Tom Watson, Don Bies and Ray Floyd. Friday the winds came up in earnest, sending 50 golfers into the 80's, and McCullough's 74 allowed him to maintain a two-stroke edge over Watson.

After each of the first two rounds, the eventual champion remained six strokes behind the leader. But on Saturday Hayes carded a 71—a score topped by only three players that day—and unobtrusively (as is his style) crept to within a single swing of co-leaders McCullough (76) and Watson (74).

In Sunday's finale, Hayes had what he most needed to win: a steady hand. The fifth-year professional trailed by two strokes with nine holes to play, but as others faltered, Mark held on.

The victor's cool under pressure was perhaps best exemplified by his 288th shot, a magnificent chip to within ten feet from a seemingly impossible downhill lie in the back bunker. The rest was academic, but the ensuing birdie putt provided a tasty icing.

Eligibility Requirements for the TPC

The starting field for the 1978 Tournament Players Championship shall consist of 144 players, determined as follows:

- 1) All designated players.
- 2) Winners of major PGA Tour co-sponsored or approved events beginning with the 1977 Tournament Players Championship and concluding with the tournament immediately preceding the 1978 TPC.
- 3) The current British Open champion.
- 4) Leaders in PGA Tour Official Standings as necessary to complete the field, beginning with the 1977 Tournament Players Championship and concluding with the tournament scheduled to end on the second Sunday immediately preceding the 1978 TPC, the Florida Citrus Open.

Lanny Wadkins clutches his World Series of Golf trophy.

Wadkins Sets Record in 'Comeback'

Capping the comeback story of the year, Lanny Wadkins overwhelmed an international field to win the 1977 World Series of Golf in Akron, Ohio. Wadkins humbled the Firestone Country Club's South Course with a record-smashing score of 267. That 13-under-par showing lowered by a stroke the previous Firestone mark, established in the 1969 American Golf Classic by Ray Floyd. Lanny was also the first golfer ever to play the course under par for four straight days, blistering the long, demanding layout with rounds of 69, 66, 67 and 65.

The 27-year-old former U.S. Amateur champion took the prestigious tourney with room to spare; his closest pursuers among the 20-man field representing five continents were Tom Weiskopf and Hale Irwin, each of whom trailed Wadkins by five strokes at the conclusion.

The World Series victory provided Lanny with a crowning jewel for a superb season. Three weeks earlier, Wadkins defeated Gene Littler in a playoff to capture the PGA Championship at Pebble Beach, and twice in 1977—at the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open and the Houston Open—he finished second. The Akron triumph was Lanny's eighth top-ten showing of the year.

But things had not been so rosy for the exuberant North Carolinian in recent campaigns. After winning more than $100,000 as a rookie on the PGA Tour in 1972 and breaking the $200,000 barrier the next year, Wadkins' game suffered a slump following a gall bladder operation in December of 1974, and he finished out of the Top 60 in 1975 and 1976.

Lanny held or shared the lead in the World Series after each of the final three rounds; his opening effort, a one-under-par 69, put him two strokes off the pace set by Irwin, Weiskopf and Floyd.

Wadkins made up the slack in Saturday's second round, firing a four-under 66 to move into a tie with Weiskopf at 135. Mark Hayes, the 1977 TPC champ, held sole possession of third place at the mid-way point, two shots behind the leaders.

Lanny continued his torrid play on Sunday with a round of 67 that enabled him to take a solitary hold on the lead. Irwin's 65 was the day's finest tally and put the Missouri resident a single shot behind the front-runner. But the final-round challenge did not come from Hale; Monday's drama was provided by Weiskopf, a native Ohioan whose slip to 72 in the third round put him five strokes behind Wadkins at the outset of the concluding 18 holes.

Tom charged out of the box with birdies on the first four holes, and subsequent birds at numbers six and eight pulled him into a tie with Lanny. But Wadkins was equal to the pace. He birdied the ninth hole to regain the edge, and with four more birds on the backside—he took a single meaningless bogey on the final hole—was never again seriously pressed.

For his efforts, the champion received a replica of the official World Series trophy, a ten-year exemption from qualifying, and an invitation to the 1978 edition of the tournament . . . not to mention a check for $100,000, the richest prize in professional golf and more than twice his total earnings of 1976.

RYDER CUP MATCHES

The Ryder Cup Matches developed from a match played between representatives of the American and British Professional Golfers' Association in England in 1926. That unofficial match, incidentally, was won by the British 13½ to 1½.

Following this highly successful exhibition, Samuel A. Ryder, a wealthy British seed merchant, offered to donate a solid gold trophy bearing his name to be competed for in a series of matches between professionals of two nations.

In placing the Ryder Cup in competition, the donor set forth certain terms which were to be observed by the parties concerned so long as the matches are conducted. Included among these stipulations are the following:

- (1) The matches will be played every other year on a home-and-home basis;
- (2) While both parties must mutually agree on the specific dates for each match, the host team may select the site and will be responsible for such arrangements and details as are normally the function of a sponsoring group;
- (3) The Matches shall consist of two days of play with the first being devoted to foursomes and the second to single matches;
- (4) Each member of the competing teams must be a member of his country's PGA, and furthermore, must be a native born citizen of that country.

The matches were first officially played for the Ryder Cup in 1927 in the United States. They have been held continuously every other year since except for the period from 1937 when the exigencies of World War II forced their suspension.

From 1927 to date, the United States has won every Ryder Cup match played in this country. It also won on British soil in 1937, 1949, 1953, 1965, 1973, 1975 and 1977, to run its list of victories to 18 in the 22 matches. The British won at home in 1929, 1933 and 1957. The 1969 match in England resulted in the first tie of the series.

From the start of the series through the 1959 Ryder Cup matches, the competition was comprised of four foursomes matches one day and eight singles matches the other day, each at 36 holes.

In 1961, the format was changed to provide for four 18-hole foursomes the morning of the first day and four more that afternoon, then for eight 18-hole singles the morning of the second day and eight more that afternoon. As in the past, one point was at stake in each match, so the total number of points was doubled.

In 1963, for the first time, a day of four-ball matches augmented the program to add new interest to the overall competition. This brought the total number of points to 32.

In 1977, the format was altered once again. This time there were five foursomes on the opening day, five four-ball matches on the second day, and ten singles matches on the final day. This reduced the total number of points to 20.

THE VARDON TROPHY

The PGA Vardon Trophy, named in honor of the internationally famous British Golfer, Harry Vardon, was placed in competition among American professionals in 1937 as a successor to the Henry E. Radix Trophy, which, prior to that time, had been awarded annually to the professional having the finest tournament record in play in this country.

Today, the Vardon Trophy, a bronze colored plaque measuring 39" x 27" is awarded each year to the member of the PGA of America maintaining the finest playing average in those events cosponsored or so designated by the PGA in each such period. A minimum of 80 rounds in tournaments considered official by PGA is required to win.
