VITAL FOR INVASION

"HEARTS — EYES — BRAINS" by BULOVA!

WITHOUT the super-human accuracy of high-precision instruments, land-sea-air attacks on a single objective, at the same split second, could not succeed!

These instruments give every branch of our armed forces uniformly accurate "hearts — eyes — brains" . . . link them into one precision fighting machine that no enemy can stop. Precision for such delicate instruments depends on fine Jewel Bearings, pioneered by Bulova . . . and produced by the hundreds of thousands! In addition, Bulova produces Telescopes, Altimeters, Rate-of-Climb Indicators, Navigation Watches and Clocks, and other instruments.

Victory's work, naturally, has first call. So, if you have to wait for Bulova Watches, please be patient.

"We'll Be Back" Said Blitz Kids And Here They Are

By TOM MEANY
Sports Columnist, PM

We have with us again this evening our popular young friends from Utah, the Blitz Kids. They'll probably keep coming back until they win themselves a basketball title. You can't discourage them. Knocked out of the National Invitation by Kentucky last week, they packed their uniforms and rushed off to Kansas City and the NCAA Western Regionals with the parting remark: "Keep the coffee hot, we'll be back."

And here they are. It's the same team, but a different tournament. The Utes pinched hit for Arkansas in the NCAA, at Kansas City, bowled over Missouri and Iowa State, without removing their fancy jackets, and took the train back to New York to meet Dartmouth.

It probably will come as a surprise to New Yorkers, secure in their subway insularity, to learn that there was a basketball team in Utah, let alone a pretty good one. Up until seventh annual National Invitation Tourney all the average New Yorker knew about Utah was (a) that it was the state which ratified the amendment to repeal the 18th amendment in December, 1933, and (b) that it usually crops up as a four-letter word in cross-word puzzles, with the definition "A Western State."

If Manhattanites were blithely unaware of the existence of the University of Utah basketball team, rest assured that this ignorance was mutual. Until the Utes came East only one member of the group ever had seen New York before. He is Fred Sheffield, center of the Blitz Kids and shortest man on the starting team, six feet, one inch.

The reason for Sheffield being center is not that he has been to New York before and therefore knows his way around, but because he's a high jumper. And a darned good one, too. He won the NCAA high jump at Northwestern last spring with a leap of six feet, eight inches and later came to New York to compete, placing third in the Senior AAU.

UTAH'S SHEFFIELD

Having a high jumper (literally) at center isn't the only touch of color carried East by the Blitz Kids. There is a set of twins, the Lewis boys, Bob and Fred. They are freshmen. There also is a Japanese-American on the squad, the only junior, one Wat Misaka, who became an American via Hawaii. Misaka is the spark-plug and playmaker.

As you run through the season record of Utah, you'll see that its biggest task this winter was not beating college opponents but finding them. There were only two games with college teams, Weber and Colorado. The rest were against service teams, usually far more mature than the Redskins youngsters, a squad which averages barely 18 years.

An example of the type of opposition Coach Vadal Peterson's boys have been tackling is Salt Lake Air Base, one of the few teams to beat the Utes. On the Air Base team was Ehlers from Purdue, Shaddock from Syracuse, Cowan from Indiana, Fuhrman from Oregon and — hold your hats, folks! — Ray Lumpp from New York University. What local coach wouldn't rub his hands with glee to have a player like Lumpp on his squad this winter! And, at that, the Redskins beat the wings team in a return meeting.

This is not only the youngest team Coach Peterson ever handled in his 17 seasons at the University of Utah, it is also the tallest and the smartest athletic group in the school's history, with a scholastic average of B-plus. A is maximum. And this despite the fact most of the kids are pitching into the tough engineering and medicine courses.

Ex-College Stars In Service Lineups

You'll see a number of familiar faces in the lineups of tonight's two service rivals, the District Coast Guard and Mitchel Field. Both teams include former college stars, some of whom also distinguished themselves in pro ranks after leaving school.

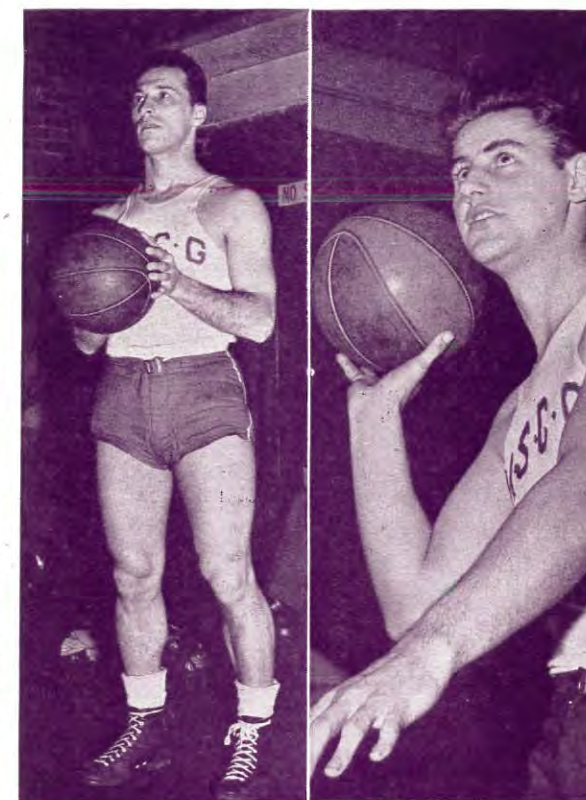

Bobby Dorn, former Temple ace, leads the Coast Guardsmen in scoring with 575 points for 50 games. Dorn is 6-6, weighs 210 pounds and had two years of varsity ball at Temple before he entered the service. Tony Krygier, the club's second top pointmaker with 505, played with the New York Jewels and the Visitations.

Hank Gebrhardt attended Seton Hall; George Pajak played three years of varsity ball at Georgetown and captained the 1940-41 Hoya five. Another Temple product is Dick Nochimson. Frido Frey and Jackie Goldsmith went to Long Island U. The former was a member of the New York Americans and the Springfield All-Stars. Goldsmith is the best set shot among the Guardsmen with 250 points for ten games, an average of 25 per contest. Bill Goebels was with the New York Jewels and the Brooklyn Indians and Jerry Kelly starred for John Marshall College for three seasons.

The Coast Guard has won 45 of 54 games, including the Coast Guard Cup, emblematic of that service's Maine-to-Florida championship.

Mitchel Field's first stringers are predominately ex-Long Island U. stars, including the Rader twins, Lenny and Howard; Ozzie Schectman, Si Lobello and Stan Waxman. Bob Fitzgerald made an impressive record at Seton Hall; Lt. James Babcock is a product of Denver University; Joe Wilkerson went to New York U., and Jerry Rizzo was one of the better Fordham players. The Mitchel Field coach is Lt. William B. Glacken of Ohio University.

The "Aviators" won 32 of 35 games and split even in two games with the District Coast Guard.

Lo, The Rich Indian!

By TIM COHANE
World-Telegram

Earl Brown, Dartmouth's young basketball coach, is not given to quoting the Scriptures as readily as Gil Dodds, the Flying Parson, or Branch Rickey, reverend of the Flatbush Flock. If he were, he might draw upon an old verse, with slight alteration, to wit:

"The Lord taketh away, and the Lord giveth."

In the case of the Big Green entree in this sixth NCAA tournament's Eastern regionals, the service bigwigs, who shift about the Navy V-12, V-5 and other trainees, were the instruments of the Lord. They took away Larry Baxter, Larry Killick, Joe Fater and three others at the close of the regular season. Then just as Earl Brown was emerging from Swoon Number Three, they gave him Bob Gale and Dick McGuire.

Before departing the wigwam of the St. John's Redmen for the more northerly tepees of the Hanover tribe, McGuire had earned the Lt. Frank C. Haggerty Memorial Trophy as the outstanding player in the metropolitan district. Gale, a St. Albans' boy, had been high-scoring center for Cornell. Verily, these were no Tweedledums and Tweedledees sent to assuage the woes of young Mr. Brown.

Among the Marine reserves not shifted from Dartmouth by official directive was Audley Brindley, a Rockville Center lad, who led the Eastern Intercollegiate League scorers and was honored with the first spot on its all-league team. Harry Leggat, a Navy trainee who played for N.Y.U. a year ago, was also left available, as was John Vancisin.

New York has no representative in the NCAA tourney this year, but local fans will not need to tax their imaginations in locating a real rooting interest. Not with four local products, McGuire, Brindley, Gale and Leggat on the Dartmouth squad.

Dartmouth has been a national basketball power consistently since Lt. Osborne B. (Ossie) Cowles, USNR, went up there in 1936. The Indians won six straight EIL titles under Ossie, and made it seven in a row this year, under Brown, after Ossie received a leave of absence. More significant, this is the fourth straight year that the Big Green has been the New England representative to the NCAA tournament's Eastern regionals.

In 1941, at Tulane, they finished third, losing to Wisconsin, 51-50, and then beating North Carolina in the consolation, 60-59. The following year at Wisconsin they captured the Eastern title by stopping Penn State, 44-39, and Kentucky, 47-28. In the finals, however, they fell afoul of Stanford, the Western regional winner, 53-38. Last year in the Eastern regionals, here in the Garden, they bowed to De Paul, 46-35, but beat N.Y.U., 51-49, for third place.

Earl Brown deserves a salute. The former Notre Dame All-America end and basketball star, took over the head football coach's job last Spring, succeeding Tuss McLaughry, who received a leave of absence to become a Marine officer. The Big Green gridders missed an undefeated season by an extra point, losing to Penn 7-6, after outplaying the Red and Blue. Now Earl has enjoyed comparable success with the basketball team.

If Dartmouth could win this tournament, it would be a fitting and popular triumph.

THREE FEATHERS

Reserve

MAN: Pretty busy making alcohol for war use by the government, aren't you?
OSTRICH: You bet! Our distilleries have made nary a drop of whiskey since October 1942.

MAN: Guess that explains why I can't get Three Feathers occasionally.
OSTRICH: Partly. You see, fine whiskey like Three Feathers naturally goes faster.

MAN: Well, even a little Three Feathers is better than none at all!
OSTRICH: And we're doing our best to supply you! Our inventories of the basic whiskies in Three Feathers are constantly diminishing.

We Welcome Back the NCAA Tournament

By LOUIS EFFRAT
New York Times

A year ago, when the National Collegiate Athletic Association was introduced to Madison Square Garden basketball followers, Stanley Frank, New York Post sports columnist and klob expert — klob is used among the swells as short for klobyosh, a 2-handed game of cards, about which Damon

LOU EFFRAT

Runyon once warned: "Beware of a game in which a jack beats the ace — it's un-American!" — informed us all about the NCAA.

Stanley — his friends call him "Schmice, Yoss or Monel," depending on the mood or what's trump at the moment — told us how Henry N. MacCracken, Chancellor of N.Y.U., invited a number of colleges to discuss the problems that were threatening the abolition of football. That was on Dec. 8, 1905. He told us how from the memorable meeting of twelve colleges grew the NCAA, which currently boasts a membership of more than 300 colleges and universities and how the NCAA had developed into the most influential agency controlling college athletics in the whole wide world.

But Brother Frank didn't tell all.

For instance, he did not tell us that there have been five NCAA basketball tournaments. He couldn't very well have done that, because when Stan was on the witness stand, there had been only four. Along the same line of reasoning, he didn't tell that 33 colleges and universities have taken part in the competitions. However, why should we make apologies for Stanley Frank. Let him use his own column, where the pay may not be as good, but he does meet a fine class of people.

At any rate, we welcome back the NCAA, its officials and its competitors. Dartmouth, perennial ruler of the Ivy League, is the veteran of this year's tournament. The Big Green has won four out of seven games and currently is rated a fine chance of annexing the title. Tournament records are plentiful and the team from Hanover, along with the others will be shooting at them all.

300 Colleges Hold Membership in NCAA

By GEORGE L. SHIEBLER
Asst. Editor, NCAA Guides

Some 300 colleges, universities and sectional collegiate athletic conferences throughout the nation hold membership in the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The NCAA was founded in 1905 and grew out of a meeting of twelve colleges at the Murray Hill Hotel in New York. The delegates from these institutions assembled at the invitation of Chancellor Henry N. MacCracken of New York University to discuss problems concerned with intercollegiate football which was on the verge of being abolished due to rough play. Out of this initial gathering and subsequent meetings grew rules and standards for football and other college sports.

While the NCAA was organized primarily to reform the rules of football it now deals with practically all branches of intercollegiate sports activity. Not only does the association make the rules but it conducts championship tournaments for its members.

In the NCAA Basketball Tournament the country is divided into eight geographical districts with a selection committee of three in each district naming an outstanding team as district representative. Eastern and Western regional playoffs determine divisional champions by having the four Eastern teams meet and then the Western quartet of representatives play to determine their champion. The East and the West champions then clash in the national finals.

The University of Oregon won the NCAA court championship in the inaugural tournament in 1939 by winning from Ohio State. Indiana won in 1940 and Wisconsin the following season. Stanford downed Dartmouth, 53 to 38, to win the national crown in the finals at Kansas City in 1942. Last year here in Madison Square Garden, Wyoming defeated Georgetown 46 to 34.

Dartmouth leads in participation frequency and tourney triumphs. The Big Green has appeared in each of the last three tournaments (plus this 1944 event), winning four of seven starts.
