NEWS AND NOTES

LAS VEGAS' DIAZ AN ACE ON THE SPOT

Las Vegas Lights FC goalkeeper Leo Diaz recorded his third penalty kick save of the 2023 USL Championship season last Wednesday night against El Paso Locomotive FC, a stop that put the Argentine within sight of surpassing the league's record for most penalties saved in a regular season with more than half the season remaining.

The current mark is held by Jeff Caldwell, who recorded five penalty saves for Hartford Athletic in the 2021 season. Three other players have recorded four penalty kick saves in a regular season campaign since the start of the 2017 season, with Diaz currently in a group of five players to have recorded three penalty saves.

NEW MEXICO UNITED'S TAMBAKIS APPROACHING 500 SAVES

New Mexico United goalkeeper Alex Tambakis could become just the second goalkeeper in the USL Championship's history to reach 500 regular season saves this week, with the Greek shot-stopper five stops away from the landmark as United hosts both Phoenix Rising FC (Wednesday) and Colorado Springs Switchbacks FC (Saturday) in Week 16. Evan Newton is the lone prior goalkeeper to have reached the mark, doing so last season while playing for El Paso Locomotive FC on his way to a mark of 573 career regular season saves.

Officially the first player to be signed in Atlanta United FC's history in 2016, Tambakis has played in the USL Championship for the Charleston Battery, North Carolina FC and New Mexico United in his career. His current single-season high for saves was set in the 2018 season for North Carolina, where he notched 95 stops to rank third in the league that season. Already sitting in second place in both regular season saves and shutouts, the 30-year-old has averaged 2.81 saves per regular season game in his career.
